HOWARD W. BLAIR

BLAIR PROMOTED TO INSPECTOR OF ORDNANCE POST

The Inspector of Ordnance Office has recently changed chiefs.

Howard W. Blair, who was the assistant chief, moved up to chief. Aaron A. Brackeen, formerly the chief, transferred to the Program Control Office of the Research and Development Division for the Ordnance Missile Laboratories. He is now chief of the planning branch.

Both Mr. Blair and Mr. Brackeen have been in the Inspector of Ordnance office twice. They were employed here during World War II, went back into civilian enterprises when the reduction in force came, and returned when the Korean outbreak caused the ammunition lines to reopen.

They have seen the operation of the office change from inspection and acceptance of shells, both loaded and unloaded, to the inspection and acceptance of components for rockets and guided missiles. The periodic inspection of equipment has changed from deadly gases to electronic and mechanical equipment.

Everything purchased is inspected to be sure that each part fits the need before an order is accepted.

While it was still an ammunition operation, Mr. Brackeen was presented the Civilian Award for Meritorious Service, highest civilian award given by the War Department. He had introduced standard procedures for quality control sampling.

He started as an inspector and a year later was made the chief. Prior to his working for the government, Mr. Brackeen was a teacher in the Madison County and Limestone County schools.

Mr. Blair formerly worked for a dry goods firm in the sales promotion and advertising department. The job took him into all sections of the United States.

A native of Huntsville, Mr. Blair returned to the Arsenal when it was reactivated and became head of the inspection office. Redstone maintained at Pine Bluff Arsenal, Ark. When that operation was discontinued, he returned to his home base as assistant chief of the Inspector of Ordnance Office.

MISSILE GROUP DUE JUNE 11

American Ordnance Association Branch Will Meet at Redstone

The guided missile branch of American Ordnance Association's rocket and guided missile division will meet at Redstone Arsenal June 11-13.

Some 150 representatives of the three services, Department of Defense, and private industry, will attend. Theme of the classified conference will be "Design Efficiency and Production Economy." Army, Navy, and Air Force spokesmen will present papers in keeping with the conference theme.

The three-day meeting agenda will include tours of Redstone Arsenal, the Army Ballistic Missile Agency, and the Ordnance Guided Missile School.

All of the Army's unclassified rocket and missile weapons will be exhibited for the group.

Maj. Gen. H. N. Toftoy, Redstone commander, is scheduled to welcome conferees to the installation on the afternoon of June 11 at Rocket Auditorium.

Presiding at the sessions will be C. L. Eksbergian of Philadelphia, chairman of AOA's guided missile branch. Col. Miles B. Chatfield, chief of RDD-OML, is project officer.

2 Redstone Soldiers Cited for Superior Performance of Duty

Two Redstone Arsenal soldiers have been recognized for superior performance of duty.

Lt. Francisco Fuentes, assistant finance officer for the arsenal, was recently awarded a certificate of achievement for work he performed while at the Army Finance Center, Ft. Benjamin Harrison, Ind. The presentation was made by Brig. Gen. J. G. Shinkle, deputy commanding general.

Gen. Shinkle also awarded a commendation ribbon with metal pendant to Sergeant First Class Norman H. Booth, which award was made for "meritorious service" at Nancy Ordnance Depot, France, where the sergeant was chief of the stock accounting branch. Sgt. Booth devised and put to use a new method of monthly stock status reporting which save the government about $5,000 annually and "greatly increased the efficiency" of his department.

Officers From Norway And Denmark at OGMS

The Ordnance Guided Missile School, which had previously trained British and Canadian officers, has now taken on an even greater international flavor with its training of NATO students.

Four officers, three from Norway and one from Denmark, are currently in training at the School, with more from both nations expected to arrive shortly.

The exact training the officers are receiving has not been disclosed, but at present the OGMS teaches only the Corporal and Nike missile systems, besides instruction on the Redstone, under a task assignment from ABMA. Three of the officers are billeted at the school, while one has his family with him and is living in Huntsville.

It is not known at the present whether other NATO nations will send students to the OGMS.

Annual Horse Show Set by Optimist Club

The sixth annual horse show sponsored by the Huntsville Optimist International will be presented at the Optimist Park on June 25.

This will be one of the finest presentations of its kind with top entries from the surrounding area.

The Optimist Club's slogan is "A Friend of the Boy." The entire profits will be used for work with boys.

Advance sale of tickets will be handled by Maj. B. H. Keyserling, ext. 4805, and Carl Winkler, ext. 3770. Considerable savings can be realized by advanced purchase.

OGMS SERGEANT DROWNS IN LAKE

Sgt. Palmer M. Hanson, a student at the Ordnance Guided Missile School, was drowned in Whitaker Lake near Guntersville Sunday while water skiing.

Hanson, who had been at the School since last September, was a veteran of 10 years service.

He is survived by his wife, the former Lou Ann Widell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Widell of Bremerton, Wash., an 18-month old daughter, Christina Louise, and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Torval M. Hanson of Shoicton, Wis. Also surviving is a six-pound 12-ounce baby boy born to Mrs. Hanson Sunday evening in Huntsville Hospital. Mrs. Hanson had been with her husband at the time of his fatal accident.

Chapter of Personnel Administration Assn. Organized in City

A Huntsville Chapter of the Society for Personnel Administration was organized recently at a meeting held at the Elks Building. Twenty-one people signed up as charter members.

This association is a national organization with the aim of advancing the field of personnel administration professionally.

Robert F. Mello, chief of the Army Ballistic Missile Agency Personnel Office, was acting chairman of the meeting. Election of officers will be held at the next meeting, June 17.

Membership in the society is open to all interested individuals, whether employed by private industry or the government.

ELY DUE FIRST MASTER'S DEGREE UNDER GRADUATE STUDY PROGRAM

When Richard E. Ely walks across the stage at the University of Alabama graduation exercises Sunday, he will be the first Arsenal employee to get his master's degree through the Graduate Study Program conducted on the Arsenal.

Mr. Ely is not only the first to complete the requirements for a degree by after-hours study, on-campus residence, and a thesis — he did so with honors. He became a member of two honor societies — Tau Beta Pi, for general engineering, and Pi Tau Sigma, mechanical engineering.

"Getting a master's degree took a long time, and added a few gray hairs here and there, but it was worth the effort," Mr. Ely said. "Competition in the graduate study program is keen, but your work in related fields makes it easier."

The University of Alabama will offer several graduate courses this summer for students who wish to fulfill the residence requirements in the master's degree program. Several Arsenal employees will take courses on the campus this summer in subjects related to the field in which they are employed.

Mr. Ely's thesis was entitled, "Effects of Testing Speed on Tensile Properties of Polymethyl Methacrylate." His study was re-

ALREADY DOUBLED IN PAST 2 YEARS

Total Strength Now Stands at 1,750

The U. S. Army Ordnance Guided Missile School has more than doubled in size in less than two years and is expected to double again by this time next year.

Total strength of the School, the Army's only activity devoted exclusively to guided missile training, stands just under 1,750 persons as opposed to less than 800 in July, 1955.

The rise in personnel strength has been high percentage-wise, but has also been steady up to the past five months. A total of 1088 persons were on hand in July of last year and 1142 were at OGMS in December. There has been personnel increase of more than 600 within the past five months.

"Every indication is that our training load will double within the next year," said Col. Henry S. Newhall, commandant of the School. "Our student load should double, and the increased work load will also result in an increased number of personnel to support this training."

Present number of students in training is in excess of 500 as opposed to 282 in July, 1955, and 348 in July, 1956.

The remaining number make up the permanent party of staff, faculty, office, and advisory personnel, and the rapidly growing Unit Training Center, which is a division of OGMS devoted to training completely formed military units.

Nine civilian contracting firms are included in the figures. OGMS employs approximately 100 field representatives from Philco, RCA, Firestone, Gilfillan, AASLI, Douglas, Western Electric, Chrysler, and North American.

Col. Newhall, who pointed up the fact that the School now conducts 23 courses of instruction on the Nike, Corporal, and Redstone missile systems, also stated that, "Five units are presently undergoing training in the Unit Training Center, and present plans call for substantially increasing this number within the next year."

In order to meet the increased training load and be prepared to provide for future missile systems as they are added, OGMS is in the midst of a fifteen million dollar building program. According to Col. Newhall, "The approved Fiscal Year 1957 construction program for the School includes three class and laboratory buildings, two shop buildings, a technical library, a training aids shop, a special electronics maintenance shop, and a special wheel vehicle maintenance shop."

Col. Newhall went on to say that, "Bids will be opened for a portion of this program on the third and fourth of June in Mobile."

"These facilities will provide for new missile systems as they are developed by the Army. For, as new systems are added to the Army's arsenal of long range weapons, additional courses will be added to the School. At the present time we have definite plans for adding the Hercules, Dart, and LaCrosse missile systems."

Col. Newhall, in releasing figures illustrating growth in the OGMS, stressed the point that, "Unification really works at the Ordnance Guided Missile School. It is not at all unusual to see students in khaki, blue, and white sitting side by side in a classroom. For, we have trained Navy and Air Force as well as Army personnel."

"In fact," said Col. Newhall, "OGMS is really taking on an international look since we have trained and are training at the present time personnel from both Great Britain and Canada."

Asked whether the reports that Great Britain was going to receive guided missiles from the (See OGMS on Page 2)

United States would mean any further increase in the OGMS training load, Col. Newhall replied, "We have trained British personnel in the School in the past, and since the Ordnance Guided Missile School is the only school operated by the Ordnance Corps for the training of maintenance personnel, it would appear reasonable to assume that if there is a requirement to train additional British personnel in Ordnance maintenance procedures, it will be accomplished at OGMS."

THE LITTLE LADIES shown above participating in various camp-out activities are members of Redstone Arsenal's Girl Scout Troop 53. They staged their first camp-out of the season last weekend on Squirrel Hill at Redstone Arsenal.

19 REDSTONE GIRL SCOUTS HOLD THEIR FIRST CAMP-OUT OF YEAR

Some 19 Redstone Arsenal Girl Scouts took to the woods recently for their first camp-out of the year.

Casual visitors to the camp site shortly after the Scouts arrival found the group busy setting up camp.

"Since last Fall the members of Troop 53 have worked, along with their parents, fixing up a spot on squirrel Hill — and they have done a beautiful job of it," said their Scout leader, Mrs. W. R. Hahn.

"In case we need them, electric lights have been strung and water has been piped to the area, lean-to's also have been built. Still, when it comes to camping, there is always a lot of work to be done setting up tents, stocking the kitchen shelves, preparing the camp fire site, hoisting the flag, and making trails," she said.

"It takes a lot of good sportsmanship, cooperativeness, willingness to accept assigned duties, and the ability to make the most of camping to put the camp site in order so as much time as possible can be spent enjoying the great outdoors," Mrs. Hahn said. And at this campsite on Squirrel Hill plenty of teamwork was seen. Every girl had her chores and was busy at them. Within an hour after their arrival they were ready to relax and enjoy the wide open spaces.

"All through the Winter months, when weather permitted," Mrs. Hahn said, "we'd have our meetings here. One new camp-out trick was learned at each meeting. The art of 'roughing' it, in any kind of weather, was studied. Every detail was discussed and explained.

"The lessons learned during these winter months were of great value, it was learned, because at four o'clock Sunday morning it began to rain and it poured for several hours," Mrs. Hahn explained. "Off and on all day, it rained, but the Scouts didn't let it bother them. They stuck to schedule and completed the camp-out as planned."

Recognizing the importance of self reliance, these Scouts are being taught how to care for themselves and others in any emergency.

Directors for this troop are Mrs. Thomas J. Seigler, Mrs. W. R. Hahn, Mrs. James T. Prewett, and Mrs. Cyril Darnell.

FORMER POST GI GOING TO EUROPE AS 'AMBASSADOR' FOR COMMUNITY

Donald Riebs, a former GI stationed at Redstone Arsenal, has been selected as Community Ambassador to Europe this summer in the Community Ambassador project in Elkhart, Ind.

Riebs will live with a private family in Denmark for one month, after being briefed on all aspects of community life such as government, business, labor, religion, and education prior to his visit, and on his return will be obligated to give illustrated lectures to all of the various organizations which have sponsored him. The project is one phase of the Experiment in International Living, which has its headquarters at Putney, Vermont.

Riebs was assigned to 9352 Ordnance Guided Missile School in May, 1955, from basic training at Ft. Leonard Wood, Mo., and was transferred later to the Ordnance Automotive School at Atlanta General Depot for three months, after which he was re-assigned to 9330 T.U., at that time a part of Guided Missile Development Division where he was in the wind tunnel unit under supervision of Ellery B. May.

Upon the formation of the Army Ballistic Missile Agency he was assigned to 9377 T. U. For a short time he was assigned to Systems Analysis and Reliability Laboratory under supervision of Heinrich Schulze. He was one of the group who last January went with the 217 Redstone Missile Battalion to Washington to the inaugural parade at President Eisenhower's inaugural.

At Redstone, Riebs participated as a singer with the Missile Men, under the direction of Ken Turvey, was a member of the track team under Lt. James Stookey, and a member of the Jaycees in Huntsville.

Following the example of other GI's, Riebs saved up furlough time for a month's trip to Europe and it was his impressive experience in Denmark on that trip, last November, that caused him to select that country as his choice in the Community Ambassador project this summer. He characterized the Danish people as "warm" and "dynamic". He is reading numerous books on Denmark preparatory to his trip, and studying the Danish language by correspondence.

Our goal for 1957 is to increase our membership to 7,000, increase our savings to $2,000,000 and to encourage our members in the promotion of thrift and to provide them credit for provident and productive purposes at a very reasonable rate of interest.

Contact your Credit Union Office or a Credit Union representative in your building or area today. Representatives as well as directors and committee members serve you without pay. Representatives are approved by the Board of Directors. Their primary purpose is to promote the Credit Union and to take payments for deposits or loans during their lunch period and coffee breaks. This procedure has saved the Government many man hours and money by eliminating long and time-consuming trips of members to the Credit Union Office. The Board of Directors request that supervisors continue this practice of economy and designate additional representatives to serve their employes.

Impromptu Speaking Theme of Redstone Toastmasters Meet

Impromptu speaking was the theme of the weekly meeting of the Redstone Toastmasters Club at the Charron Restaurant. Speakers drew subjects and positions from a hat, and were required to speak for six minutes on these subjects with no preparation.

Walt Barney and A. A. Stewart tied in the election of "best speaker" for talks on "My First Car" and "My First Job." Other speakers were John Gallick, "My First Date," Webb Mayfield, "My Wedding," and Don Haulbrook, "My First Child." Toastmaster program is limited to that one activity—that is THE one that we have planned.

Tomorrow is one of those galor-i-us days that everyone looks forward to—that is, if you don't have to work—another holiday. Per usual, we shall be open at 9:00 with a coffee call so, come on over and enjoy the air conditioning with us.

Since Friday is pay day, we really don't expect to see many of you at least until the first part of next week. Just behave yourself and we'll be looking forward to seeing you in a few days.

Why don't you come play bingo with us Monday nite. Molly will be back to take over so you can look forward to a different face. I'll miss seeing those faces light up when a tie is won. Couldn't you just—

Say, if you're in the mood for singing, come Tuesday nite and join the Missile guys and gals.

We might have some good news in next week's article about our patio, the golf range, swimming pool, etc.

Ya'll come, Katie

We want all of you proud Fathers to bring us a picture of your "pride and joy". There will be six prizes—The most handsome boy, the prettiest girl; The cutest boy, the cutest girl; The most interesting pose for boy and the most interesting pose for girl. We would like to get the pictures in as soon as possible. Voting will take place on Friday and Saturday prior to Father's Day and final judging will take place on June 16th. Ages eligible to enter the contest are six years old and under. More details will be given later. Get your pictures to the Service Club as soon as possible.

for the evening was Hank Hall. Table Topics were led by Col Arthur Lahlum; each member was asked to give the policies he would change if promoted to his boss' job. Col. Lahlum was careful to select members whose bosses were also present wherever possible.

A highlight of the evening was the presentation of a plaque and a letter of appreciation to Capt Joe Pinkston, USAF, who is transferring to Eglin Air Force Base. Capt. Pinkston is a charter member of the Redstone Club and has been active in its affairs for the past two years.

General Evaluator was Bill Lingenfelter; Jim Keat served as Grammarian and Bob Smith as Parliamentarian. Guests for the evening were Cecil Joyce and Henry Clifford.

Regular visitors to Redstone Arsenal will find that one pretty girl has replaced another in the Visitors Bureau of the Headquarters.

known as Pat around headquarters, is resigning here to join her husband's insurance agency and Mrs. James (Betty) Stanley is replacing her at the Visitors Bureau.

Mrs. Patterson has been at Redstone for the past six years. She first worked in Civilian Personnel, transferred to Ordnance Missile Laboratories, and transferred again to the Adjutant Division four years ago to take the job she has held until now.

However, this wasn't her first experience at Redstone Arsenal. One of the contractor's who helped build Huntsville Arsenal in 1941 hired her to interview personnel seeking work on the arsenal.

She recalls that her first desk was an open window with a typewriter set on a ledge. Her chair was a keg of nails. When she left the contractor, she worked for the Office of Price Administration from the time it opened offices in Huntsville until they were closed.

Mrs. Stanley is a native of Marshall County near Guntersville. She had taught school for three years at the Union Grove School by the time she graduated from the Jacksonville State Teachers College.

She married while still in high school at Arab, and both she and her husband attended college together part of the time. Between Jacksonville State and high school, she also attended Snead Junior College.

Last year when her husband went to work at the Army Ballistic Missile Agency, she came to Redstone to take a job on the Adjutant's staff.

She liked teaching school and prefers girls' physical education classes. And she liked her job here, so she stayed on.

Both girls say that the Visitors Bureau job never gets to be a bore. If the visitors don't need help in getting around the arsenal, they still want to know about the recreation, restaurant, and hotel facilities about town.

ARMY'S POLICY OF PLACING MISSILE PRODUCTION IN INDUSTRY AT EARLY STAGE EXPLAINED BY BARCLAY

MILWAUKEE, Wis. — The Army's policy of placing ballistic missile production in U. S. industry at the earliest practicable stage was explained to the Wisconsin Manufacturers Association at its 46th annual meeting last week by Brig. Gen. J. A. Barclay, deputy commander of the Army Ballistic Missile Agency.

"We bring prime contractors and major subcontractors from industry into the program from its inception to follow the development cycle closely and take over hardware production as soon as any degree of stability has been achieved," Gen Barclay said.

He pointed out that ABMA's contractors occupy offices in the Agency and have access to laboratories and shops "so there is a continuous, uninhibited exchange of information."

By transferring the overall production task to industry, Gen Barclay added, the Army frees its engineers and scientists to undertake new work. He listed some of the by-products of the gigantic missile effort which have fed back into industry and helped it in many ways. Among these were automation, smaller and more accurate mechanisms, computing and data processing machines, development of machine tools which measure and gauge the product as they operate.

"American business has been quick to find peacetime uses for every new element or technique which appears as a part of our weapons systems," he declared.

Gen. Barclay also mentioned the advancing capabilities of men and women engaged in missile development and production, declaring these have increased productive abilities.

"What we are accomplishing in weapons development," he went on, "will make it easier for man to venture into the unknown. We cannot accept finite boundaries to our future. Science has opened horizons so broad that the impossible has become the probable, and the probable has become the fact. Men must raise their vision to the stars in this Missile Age."

He declared the wedding of atomic power and rocketry will "bring about the eventual harnessing of atomic energy to missile propulsion and thus bring man to the threshold of the universe."

Highlights of his talk follow: "The Army has coordinated the efforts of science, industry, and Government to fulfill its mission by the most efficient use of defense funds.

"The Army's success in the development of guided missiles has produced and will continue to produce many dividends for industry and the consumer.

"The union of atomic energy with missile guidance will provide the means to explore the universe and usher in the Age of Space.

"The prudent use of natural forces demands an increase in moral and ethical stature commensurate with the swift progress of science and technology.

"We must dedicate our resolve to the principle that man's knowledge and his will must support the cause of human betterment. If we go forward to that objective, a glorious future awaits us."

Improved interest rates on new purchases of Series E and H Savings Bonds were announced by the Treasury Department on April 20, 1957, but the rise to 3 1-4 per cent if held to maturity was dated back to February 1.

Lieutenant (jg) Thomas J. Hudson became the Navy's first Congressional Medal of Honor winner of the Korean War April 13, 1951, when he landed his plane in an attempt to rescue a pilot who had been shot down.
