MAY 16, 1959

Rocket Hardware Slated For Armed Forces Day

"An intense and widespread interest in the U. S. Army's missile and space achievements has stimulated opportunities for people in sixteen states to see at first hand the Army's rocket hardware," the Armed Forces Day project officer for the Army Ordnance Missile Command said here today.

"In response to requests from Arizona to Maryland, agencies of the Army Ordnance Missile Command are making available missile and space exhibits for public display during Armed Forces Week," Lt. Col. Lester H. Le Vine, the AOMC project officer, said.

"The exhibits range from the JUNO II, the Army-NASA deep space probe vehicle, to the Little John free flight rocket," Col. Le Vine added.

"These items will be shown at various colleges, military installations, and at Armed Forces Day celebrations in a number of cities," he said.

Furnish Costs

The majority of the groups who have requested Army exhibits are furnishing transportation and other costs.

Already, the JUNO II and other Army equipment was on view in the Nation's capital on May 9-10, Jupiter has attained an unusual degree of reliability and accuracy, and is ready for operational use.

The last several Jupiters tested have been produced by the Chrysler Corporation. This one, however, was fabricated at the Army Ballistic Missile Agency, where the Jupiter was developed

For the third consecutive time, Air Force personnel took part in the launching, which was performed by the ABMA Missile Firing Laboratory.

The Air Force personnel are members of the 864th Technical Training Squadron, which has been trained at Redstone Arsenal.

The main objective of the firing was to further test the complete Jupiter missile operations in tactical configuration, especially the warhead and fuzing apparatus working together as a system.

The Army also continued its "Operation Gaslight" studies of reentering bodies. Personnel aboard a ship in the downrange impact area were set to take measurements of the missile's three sections as they reentered the atmosphere following flight through outer space.

GEN. HINRICHS SENDS GREETINGS ON 147TH BIRTHDAY OF ORDNANCE

TO: ALL ORDNANCE PERSONNEL

On 14 May 1959, the Ordnance Corps will celebrate its 147th birthday. We can, and should take pride in our record of supplying the United States Army and our sister services with weapons and equipment for the defense of our country. Also, we should be proud of our record of service to our allies all over the world.

There have been tremendous changes in the art of developing weapons since the War of 1812, when the Corps was born. We have moved from black powder and flintlock into the nuclear age. Some things have not changed a great deal, however. It was essential then, as it is now, that the people in Ordnance work as members of a team—a team composed not only of the military and civilian personnel of the Corps, but also of American science and industry. Each member of this team played an essential part in the Ordnance effort then as he must today. Then, as now, our mission was to supply combat units with the firepower needed to deter aggression and to defeat it if attacks came.

Nevertheless, in this era of missiles, nuclear energy, and space exploration, the penalty for failure would be annihilation. Although we are proud of our unexcelled record, we cannot stand on that record. We must remain aware that anything less than the best Ordnance equipment we can devise is not acceptable. Developing the best will demand that we attack our problems with consistent aggressiveness, and with an unflinching sense of urgency.

On this, our 147th birthday, I extend my sincere appreciation for all that you have done to make the Ordnance Corps' past a proud one. Let us insure that our future is at least equally bright.

hours. Receiving a report of the need relayed to a German "ham" radio operator through Great Britain, men of the U. S. Army's 382nd Military Police Battalion, stationed here, checked local hospitals only to learn the drug was not available. When German police were unable to contact Madrid to verify the request, two MPs paid their own money for a call to Madrid where they learned the drug was the only hope for young Antonio

Gonzales. Frantic checking located the drug manufacturer near Coblenz who immediately donated the needed amount. More calls arranged for MPs at Coblenz to deliver it to Hahn Air Base where a T33 jet trainer of the USAF flew the drug to Torrejon Air Base, Madrid, for delivery to the boy's doctor.

MEDICS WAR ON SCHISTOSOMIASIS, ONE OF GREAT HEALTH PROBLEMS

SAGAMIHARA, Japan — In the shadow of the Far East's almost daily cold-war crises, the U. S. Army's 406th Medical General Laboratory here quietly but efficiently carries on the Army's 13-year-old humanitarian struggle against a grave, but not well-known, menace — Schistosomiasis.

The United Nations' World Health Organization calls schistosomiasis one of its greatest health problems, and reports that the disease affects about 133,000,000 persons — on five continents.

It is caused by a parasitic worm carried by snails. The worm larva, on deserting its snail-carrier for a human, bores through the human skin to live in blood vessels of the intestinal tract. There, it causes fever, dysentery, liver pains, enlargement of the abdomen and anemia. Mental processes of the afflicted slow down, and death may result.

"Schisto" is found as close to the continental United States as Puerto Rico and actually exists in South America. It also exists in Southern Europe, North Africa, the Middle East, China, and the Philippines as well as in Japan.

The disease strikes most heavily at workers in rice paddies (where snails live in the water) and in the past entire Japanese and other nation's villages have been blighted by it.

With the cooperation of Japanese officials, Army medical specialists set to work in 1946 to find a means of eliminating schistosomiasis. To date, they have made exhaustive examinations in Yamanashi Prefecture (which is an "intensely edemic" area), and have succeeded in devising better diagnostic procedures. They have also tested more than 3,000 chemical agents — hoping to find one that will kill the snail-carrier without damaging either the rice crop or the people working in the fields.

But, so far, they haven't found how to stamp out "Schisto". Their

WORMS, Germany — An appeal for a rare drug for a Spanish boy who lay near death in Madrid recently touched off an inter-service and international mercy mission which delivered the drug in Madrid within a few work in Kofu, however, does serve as a "pilot project" which may in the long run add schistosomiasis to the list of major diseases that modern Army medical research has helped to conquer.

"Such an achievement," one spokesman pointed out, "would be one more Army contribution to the general welfare — significant enough to rank alongside other outstanding Army accomplishments in the medical field, such as the elimination of Yellow Fever, the development of atabrine and aralen to combat malaria, and the countless other exploits which have brought longer life to millions."

SERGEANT-MOM DUO DISPENSES CHARITY BY TON

TONGGU, Korea — A mother in Emmett, Idaho, and her soldier-son with the First Cavalry Division are making food donations to Korean orphanages, a ton at a time.

Sergeant James Lee delivered the first ton recently, while back home, Mrs. Jenny Lee, sometimes driving 150 miles a day, was scouting stores and canning and processing companies for the second ton.

It began purely as a 1957 Christmas project, with Lee distributing 8000 pounds of clothes, toys and school supplies to some 600 orphans.

"But Mother said that she couldn't stop just because Christmas was over and so long as we can get the stuff," explains Lee. She got a good response from local grocery stores, but then had the idea of branching out in more wholesale fashion.

Aid to Okinawans

To alleviate suffering of residents of the drought-stricken areas, trucks delivered nearly a million gallons of water to villages until rain finally replenished local water supplies.

"It certainly doesn't take her long to collect a ton that way," reports Lee, citing the canning company that gave 18 gallons of whole kernel corn and a like amount of canned applesauce. An Idaho dairy furnished 100 pounds of dried milk and another company provided four 100-pound bags of wheat.

Even the shipping charges are being absorbed by generous business concerns. A trucking firm has offered to carry all food shipments to the West Coast, where from Portland, Ore., a shipping company has agreed to carry the food to Inchon, free of charge.

OLD SOLDIERS NEVER DIE—THEY'RE SAFETY-CONSCIOUS NOW

WASHINGTON — The Nation's safety experts are continuing to shower praise and awards on The United States Soldiers' Home here for leading the way to better safety for senior citizens.

Recently, the Army itself presented the most recent honor: An "Award of Merit for Safety" in recognition of the Home's continued efforts to do away with physical hazards "in compensation for the deteriorated physical ability and senses of its no longer young members."

Previously the Home had received the National Safety Council Award of Merit for the year 1958. And even earlier, the magazine, National Safety News, said that the experience of the Home offered helpful ideas "on a neglected problem — the hazards confronting our aging citizens."

Established by Congress in 1851 for retired enlisted Army personnel (Air Force retirees are now also admitted), the Home is supported by contributions of persons still on active duty. It has a staff of 1200, including 23 nurses of the Order of Sisters of Charity, and houses 200 retired military men.

The program for control of accident hazards in and near the Home's buildings has dramatically reduced injuries through measures which, according to National Safety News, might well be adapted to other facilities of a similar nature.

The program began in 1952 when the Army's Corps of Engineers made a safety survey. This was followed by the Home's own medical Staff's study which has since been called "a forerunner in the field of Geriatric safety."

As a result of this program, ramps instead of stairs are now used—and when steps can not be eliminated, handrails are installed and rises painted with white reflectorized paint.

Non-tippable furniture is also featured, and sharp corners on furniture are eliminated.

Even motor traffic in and around the Home's 300-acre site is closely controlled for the retired soldiers' safety.

Safety measures earning praise also included other means of eliminating or reducing hazards in buildings, grounds, roads and environs.

Nation-wide recognition of the Home's leading role in Safety for senior citizens first came last August when The National Safety

Time-Saving Models

FORT CAMPBELL, Ky. — To make their Army unit even more STRAC ready, men of one company of the 101st Airborne Division here are using "time and motion" study methods for loading their airborne "mechanical mules."

They built miniature models of the mules and all possible combat loads. The models can be arranged to determine the best way to load each vehicle.

Built to a scale of one-fifth of a centimeter to an inch, the replicas include fuel and water cans, rolls of communication wire, rocket launchers, mortars, ammunition boxes and other equipment.

"Annually on Armed Forces Day our Military Service are hosts to their civilian neighbors at home and abroad. This observance is, in effect, and educational program which enables free people everywhere to view and evaluate our equipment, state of training, and combat strength.

"It is essential that the American people and their Free World friends have a clear picture of the armed strength our country is maintaining in order to possess Power for Peace.

"Close understanding between members of our Armed Forces and members of civilian communities is most important to preserve the high level of national readiness necessary for safeguarding the Free World."

—Gen. Nathan F. Twining, Chairman, Joint Chiefs of Staff

"The Primary objective of the United States Army is to contribute to the security of the nation as a member of our tri-service defense team by providing adequate forces for prompt, sustained combat on land and for the surface-to-air missile defense of the United States. On this Armed Forces Day — 1959 — the Army joins with its sister ser-VICES in rededicating itself to the preservation of our country and its ideals."

—Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, Chief of Staff, U.S. Army

"A potential growth of limited conflict can be just as deadly to free people as the sudden holocaust of nuclear war. We must be prepared with strong deterrents to these threats to our way of life. Your Navy is proud to be a member of the national defense team whose main purpose in being is to protect our precious freedoms. We heartily welcome visits by our fellow citizens to our ships and installations on Armed Forces Day 1959."

— Adm. Arleigh A. Burke, Chief of Naval Operations

"Armed Forces Day reemphasizes the grave responsibilities that have been entrusted to the Department of Defense. Today, the free world depends upon the military strength of the United States to maintain peace. Our nation is placing great reliance on air power as the primary deterrent to war. The Air Force is deeply aware of its great responsibilities and will continue to achieve ever increasing effectiveness.

"We are happy to join our sister services in celebration of this tenth Armed Forces Day, confident that in our combined strength we will be able to deter aggression or successfully meet any future challenge."

—Gen. Thomas D. White, Chief of Staff, U.S. Air Force

"Armed Forces Day, 1959, is a splendid opportunity for the American people to become better acquainted with the United States Marine Corps. On this day Marines all over the world extend an invitation to their fellow Americans to visit with our nation's Amphibious Force-in-Readiness."

—Gen. Randolph MaC. Pate, Commandant of the Marine Corps

"The maintenance of a vigilant, well trained military establishment is essential to the preservation of our free American way of

COLONEL IS FATHER TO FORTY IN 'LAND OF THE MORNING CALM'

FORT LEONARD WOOD, Mo. — Two or three children is about average for an American family; and ten or twelve is considered "very large." But post Quartermaster Colonel Kenneth W. Dalton is not impressed — even by the size of the "very large" family.

The colonel is father to 40 little Daltons — all proper and legal like — even though he hasn't seen most of his children. According to Korean law, all children in an orphanage assume the surname of the founder. And since Dalton founded an orphanage in Ascom City, Korea, he is considered to be the legal father of all the children in the orphanage.

The orphanage, constructed in 1957 with the aid of various units in the Ascom City area, started with one small mud building. Today there are 12 buildings, complete with plumbing and electrical facilities, and it is still growing.

Dalton, of (Route 3) Salem, Oregon, was moved by the sight of so many homeless children scrounging in garbage cans and trash heaps for a morsel of food. And he decided to do something about it. First, he secured some land, donated by a wealthy Korean. Then volunteer soldiers and interested Koreans pitched in to erect the buildings. Women of Ascom City donated their services

Alaska-Bound Unit Goes 'Family Style'; All Ship Out Together

FORT RICHARDSON, Alaska — When the Army's 194th Ordnance Detachment arrived in Alaska recently, its 55 men acclaimed themselves as the newest champions of "togetherness."

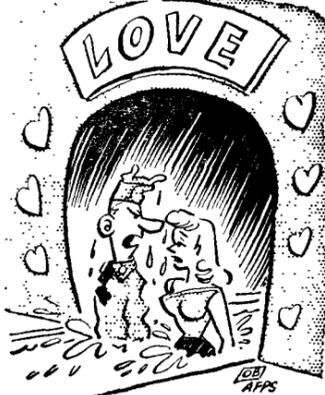

Wives and children, furniture and suitcases accompanied the outfit on its move from California in travel that couldn't possibly have been more "concurrent."

Like a band of neatly-dressed and well-behaved gypsies, the 194th and all its earthly possessions went aboard the transport in Seattle on the last leg of the change of stations for the missile repair detachment that has been es to the orphanage — some as nurses and teachers, others for necessary housekeeping.

Many American families have offered to adopt children from the orphanage. But, before this could be done, legal permission was needed from Dalton. He granted the necessary authority to the Child Placement Bureau, Ministry of Health and Social Affairs, Republic of Korea. Today there are at least 20 children from the orphanage living in American homes.

tending air defense guided missiles in the San Francisco area for the past four years.

Its men are now responsible for maintenance of the Army Nike Hercules missiles guarding Alaska.

About the only separation of the troops and their families during the entire move was a three-day period during which the men were billeted at Fort Lewis, Wash., while the dependents stayed at a Seattle hotel.

"I'd never been on such a complete move with everybody going on the same ship," remarked Captain Douglas Barker of (4209 Eastside Ave.) Dallas, Tex., unit commander, as he boarded the transport. "We're all getting on the same ship together and taking our kids' bird cages and whatnot."

STRAC Topkick Swears in Quick

FORT LEWIS, Wash. — A nine-year Army veteran assigned to the Strategic Army Corps' 4th Infantry Division saw no reason to waste time when he was due to re-enlist.

With the sound of cannon in the background, First Sergeant Jay D. Rigby was recently sworn in for another three years service by his battery commander while the unit was firing in support of Army training tests for out in the Fort Lewis training area.

BRIG GEN. J. A. BARCLAY, Commander of the Army Ballistic Missile Agency, presents a letter of congratulations to Henry Forest on his retirement from government service, as Dr. Walter Haeussermann (second from right), director of the Guidance and Control Laboratory, and Grover Dausman, the Laboratory's new technical program coordinator, look on. Forest was employed as technical program coordinator for the Laboratory prior to his retirement.

HENRY FOREST RETIRES AFTER 42 YEARS SERVICE

Henry Forest, former technical program coordinator for the Guidance and Control Laboratory of ABMA, retired from government service on April 30 after more than 42 years of service.

He had served as technical program coordinator with the Laboratory since February 1957.

Grover Dausman, formerly with the Laboratory's technical and scientific staff, has assumed duties as the Laboratory's new technical program coordinator. He has been employed with ABMA since June 1956.

A native of Texas, Forest began his government service career in 1912 when he entered the U. S. Marines. He served in China and the Philippines during and after World War I, and returned to civilian life in 1922.

He began his government career as a civilian at San Francisco Depot, where he was employed for 17 years, the last two as a radio engineer.

In 1943 he went to the Office of the Chief Signal Officer, Department of the Army, Washington, D. C., where he was employed as an electronics engineer until 1945. For the next three years he worked as Chief of the Maintenance Division at Sacramento Signal Depot.

In 1948, Forest returned to the Office of the Chief Signal Officer as electronics engineer in charge of special facilities, primarily long distance communications. Prior to coming to the Army Ballistic Missile Agency he was with the Signal Corps at White Sands Proving Ground from July 1953 until February 1957, employed as chief of the radio engineering branch.

Forest and his wife, the former Ray Gatch, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lee Gatch of Baltimore, Md., plan to make their home in the San Diego, Calif., area. They have been residing at 2107 Sullivan Rd., Huntsville.

Chaplains' Prayer for Armed Forces Day

ALMIGHTY God, the Father of us all, we give Thee most humble and hearty thanks for the blessings that have been bestowed upon our land. We are ever mindful of the devotion and sacrifice made by members of our Armed Forces on land, in the air, and on the sea. They have served in great jeopardy to insure for us the freedoms we enjoy.

We petition Thy heavenly Guidance upon the leaders of the nation, both civil and military. Make them aware of their role in the redemption of the world from cruelty, hate and injustice so that the exercise of our might will always serve the ends of justice upon this earth.

On this day we remember the individual soldier, sailor, airman, have a 2-year old daughter, Lynn. They reside in their new home on Route 2, Huntsville, and when not engaged in social work or community activities, they enjoy their leisure time during the summer months swimming and picnicking with Lynn.

and marine. Keep them always courageous and vigilant in their faithful performance of their duties. Give them such insight that they never glory in material might but remain faithful to the preservation of liberties and freedoms for all mankind.

Finally, we pray for Thy Heavenly Benediction as we join with those around the world who work toward the end that righteousness shall prevail among all the peoples of the world. Endow us with strength of character that prompts a devotion to our country and to Thee, O God, who is the source of all true power. Amen.

—Armed Forces Chaplains Board

SAFE SUPERVISOR; SAFE WORKER IN THE SAME FAMILY

Mr. and Mrs. Jack McBride were selected as Safe Supervisor and Safe Worker of the week by their respective supervisors. They were chosen because of their outstanding record, both on and off the job. Neither has been involved in an accident where medical treatment was required during their lifetime.

As a supervisor, Jack has used much of his ability to insure that his employes have safe working facilities and equipment. He continually instructs them in better working methods to insure that they are not injured on the job. He and his wife realize that it is important, both to them and their fellow citizens, that they practice and encourage others to practice safe driving on and off the post. They have observed some of the disastrous consequences that have resulted from motor vehicle accidents and realize that it could affect their whole way of life.

Jack was born in Knoxville, Tenn., on June 22, 1932, but moved to Alabama in 1934. He attended grammar school at Meridianville and graduated from Hazel Green High School in 1951. He was active in sports during his high school years, being on the basketball team 1949-1951, and on the baseball team 1950-1951. After graduating, Jack entered the U.S. Navy. He served on the USS Marquette in the Pacific Fleet and was discharged May 23, 1955. Jack came to work at Redstone Nov. 23, 1955 as a telegraphic typewriter operator with the Post Signal Division, where he is still employed.

Mrs. McBride, the former Ruth Imogene Shields, was born in Chicago, and moved to Alabama when she was quite young. She has a variety of nicknames—her mother refers to her as Imogene; Jack calls her "Sugarfoot"; most people know her as "Punkin". Ruth attended Riverton High School and North Alabama College of Commerce where she received her Secretary of Science certificate. She was a studious and active student during her school days. She won a state homemakers degree and a Danforth award for leadership in social life and regular activities. She entered Civil Service in 1956 and now works in R&D Division, ARGMA, as a clerk-steno.

Mr. and Mrs. McBride were married Sept. 25, 1955. They

CHANCE TO 'EARN WHILE YOU LEARN' IS ARMY'S OFFER TO COLLEGIANS

WASHINGTON — Allied with colleges and universities throughout the country, the Army's Cooperative Education program is giving students a chance to earn while they learn. Some of the learning is being accomplished under the supervision of men like missile expert Dr. Wernher von Braun.

Cooperative education — the scheme by which the student spends half his time on the campus and the other half working on related job assignments in industry — is nothing new. Industry has been cooperating in the program since 1906.

In 1948 Frankford Arsenal became the first Army installation to use the program when it accepted a small number of students from Drexel Institute in Philadelphia for part-time employment.

The first large-scale Army cooperative education program was started in 1952 at White Sands Proving Ground, N.M., in cooperation with New Mexico A & M College and included 100 students.

There are now more than 700 students from 69 schools—majors in mathematics, physics, chemistry and engineering fields—working at 39 Army installations, earning money while employed at the work they will make their careers.

Some are in missile development at the Army's Ballistic Missile Agency at Huntsville, Ala. Others are in research and development in electronics for the Signal Corps at Fort Huachuca, Ariz. Some are working on textiles and protective clothing for the Quartermaster Research and Development Command at Natick, Mass., and some hardy engineers-to-be have been studying soils in Iceland and Alaska.

The students, paid the same wages as the full-time workers doing the same jobs, are selected by the schools they attend and are generally placed at installations as close as possible to their home campuses. They have to be good, too, in the classroom before they get the approval for coop training.

Georgia Institute of Technology, for example, requires that the cooperative students come initially from the upper third of their high school classes and then maintain scholastic and on-the-job marks five-tenths of a grade point higher than their non-coop contemporaries.

Whether they come from Southern Methodist University in Texas or the University of California, Iowa State College or the University of Michigan, they get the same pay. Salaries for on-the-job students range from $2960 to $3670 a year, depending on the student's progress toward his degree. As he advances in school, work assignments become more difficult and responsible and his pay goes up accordingly.
