PICTORIAL BRANCH NOW OCCUPIES NEW BUILDING

The pictorial branch of the Redstone Arsenal Signal Office is moving into new quarters near the Army Ordnance Missile Command headquarters on Martin Road (Redstone Arsenal).

The new building contains 17,400 square feet of floor space, and cost $450,000, including utilities and landscaping. Some $200,000 worth of equipment is being installed in the structure.

The building will house two sound stages, a photo negative library, an editorial section, and departments for motion picture, still picture, sound and television work.

Approximately 40 employes will work at the new location. Existing photo facilities will continue to be operated by the Signal Office on a reduced scale at the Army Ballistic Missile Agency and the Army Rocket and Guided Missile Agency.

The pictorial branch is headed by Capt. William L. Duncan. Sam Hobbs is his deputy.

Most of the equipment will be in place by Aug. 1.

The pictorial branch serves all organizations located at Redstone Arsenal.

The building is a concrete block structure designed with a minimum of windows, air-conditioned throughout.

Army Relief Funds Open Joint Campaign

MAJ. ANDREW J. DRAPER

Contributions Used To Aid Soldiers And Dependents

The Joint Annual Fund Campaign for the Army Emergency Relief and the Army Relief Society opened officially on Monday, and will continue until July 31.

Every member of the Army is urged to contribute to the 1959 fund drive. Contributions will be used to provide financial assistance to members of the Army and their families whenever they meet emergencies beyond personal resources.

The Army Relief was authorized by the Secretary of War and incorporated as a perpetual organization in 1942. It was established to collect and hold funds to relieve distress of members of the Army and their dependents.

The Army Relief Society, founded in 1900, was established specifically for the purpose of assisting needy widows and orphans of Regular Army personnel. The Army Relief Society and the Army Emergency Relief, are closely affiliated and the fund campaign is a joint campaign for the two organizations.

The 1959 fund drive carries out the established policy to ask for small voluntary contributions annually from every member of the Army, without resort to vigorous campaigning. The annual campaign. (See ARMY RELIEF, on Page 2)

Bids Are Invited On Test Facility

Army Engineers have invited contractors to submit bids for constructing specialized facilities in the preflight evaluation laboratory now under construction at Redstone Arsenal, Huntsville, Alabama, for use by the U. S. Army Rocket and Guided Missile Agency in performing operational and climactic environmental tests (See BIDS on Page Two)

University Center Announces Changes

The University of Alabama, Huntsville Center, announced several additions and changes to schedules previously announced.

There will be a class in Greek and Roman Mythology. This is a course for students interested in study of the classical myths and their survival in English and American Literature to the present day. to overseas areas. The Army's analysis of the NCO restraining program showed that many had earned rapid promotions in Korea. Upon their return to the U.S. they were necessarily assigned to non-combat type jobs because there were fewer combat units in the U. S. to absorb them.

The Army is keeping a tight check on the assignment of combat NCOs returning from overseas to prevent them from gravitating to duties which do not utilize their field leadership experience. This check will insure that they will be placed in the jobs where they are most needed — in combat units, training centers and schools.

Two Thiokol Men Are Featured Speakers

Two Thiokol men were featured speakers at meetings held on opposite U. S. coasts last week.

J. W. Wiggins, general manager of Thiokol Chemical Corp. - Redstone Division, spoke at the semi-annual meeting of the American Rocket Society held in San Diego, Calif. His subject was "The Ducted Rocket", a type of air-breathing rocket not in use by the armed services at present.

W. F. Haite, chief of the process development department of Thiokol, talked on "Propellant Processing Methods in general" at the Armed Services Explosives Safety Seminar on High Energy Solid Propellants which was held at the U. S. Naval Propellant Plant, Indian Head, Md.

Army Shifts 20,000 Senior NCOs from Non-Combat to Field Jobs

WASHINGTON — The Army has wound up a two-year program of moving about 20,000 non-commissioned officers with previous combat experience or training from non-combat - type jobs back into fighting formations.

The shift was designed to fill critical shortages in the combat arms, principally in infantry, armor, artillery and combat engineer units, with men possessing leadership experience.

They were in surplus jobs no longer needed in the Army's new pentomic structure, which calls for more men armed with guns and fewer with typewriters and meat cleavers.

At the initiation of the program, for example, the Army noted among its senior enlisted personnel a surplus of 4000 military policemen; 3500 cooks, bakers and meat cutters; 5000 clerks, and 2900 motor pool personnel. At the same time, shortages of non-commissioned officers, primarily in the combat areas, included about 4500 combat engineers, 8000 infantrymen, and 3500 armor crewmen.

The Army recognized that many of these men with skills surplus to its present needs had been out of the combat arms for several years; field Army commanders in the United States were instructed to set up combat refresher programs for them.

Only those men under 41 were selected who were physically qualified for the more strenuous work they would be facing. All were from units in the United States as the Army had not been assigning men with surplus skills

Kiwanians Hear Talk On Chinese Republic

The Free Republic of China now has a military force of 600,000 men on Formosa. The average age of enlisted men is 25 years and that of officers is 30. They are equipped with missiles, jet aircraft and modern warships.

This report on the preparedness of the free Chinese was made here last night by Major Tsia-Hua Chen, liaison officer of the Chinese detachment at the Army Ordnance Guided Missile School, in a talk before the Kiwanis Club.

Formosa is known to the Chinese as Taiwan, Major Chen said, and comprises 78 islands lying about 100 miles off the south coast of China. The total area is about twice that of the Hawaiian Islands, and the population is more than 10,000,000.

Since the islands were returned to China after Japanese occupation during World War II, the industrial and agricultural output has increased almost three times, he said.

A land reform program initiated by President Chiang Kai-shek now finds 78 per cent of the is-

Civil Relief Act Is Reviewed

All military personnel are familiar generally with the Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act. Many have heard the opinion expressed that, thanks to the Act, a soldier need not be concerned about paying off accounts for articles he purchased on the installment plan before he entered service. This is not true. This article is designed to refute this and several other misconceptions. Since the Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act is a long and complex piece of legislation, the following discussion is limited to those questions concerning installment purchases.

The basic purpose of the Act is to promote the opportunity for persons in the Armed Forces to perform their military duties without fear of civil prosecution which the soldier may not be able effectively to defend against by reason of his military status and service. The Act is intended to be interpreted liberally in favor of the serviceman. It does recognize, however, that protection should not be used unnecessarily to the detriment of non-military business people. It has been said that the Act is meant to be a shield and not a sword.

In the case of installment purchases, the Act provides that property bought on the installment plan before active military service may not be repossessed except by order of a court of competent jurisdiction. It further provides that no default judgment may be entered against a serviceman unless he has been represented in court.

Protects Purchaser

These provisions raise points for our consideration. First, the Act protects only purchasers who entered into installment contracts and who actually made a payment before they entered active service. Any purchases made after entering service are not included in the protection afforded by the Act.

Second, the provisions of the Act concerning repossession do not mean that property can never be repossessed. They mean only that a court must determine that repossession will serve the best interest of all parties.

Provides Representation

The provision concerning representation, mentioned above, insures that the serviceman will be represented by his own or a court-appointed attorney before the court makes any decision affecting the soldier or his property. Should a seller decide to repossess the property, which is the subject of the contract entered into by the soldier, and institute legal proceedings, the court may make any reasonable disposition of the seller's case. The court normally will allow the property to be repossessed unless the buyer can show that his ability to pay has been impaired by his military service.

Although this may not seem too difficult to show in the case of

PROMOTED — Lt. Col. Edward M. Dooley was recently promoted to his present rank in a ceremony conducted by Brig. Gen. J. G. Shinkle, Commander of the Army Rocket and Guided Missile Agency. Col. Dooley is chief of the Anti-Missile-Missile Office in the Agency's Research and Development Division. He has been assigned at Redstone Arsenal since June 1957. Prior to that time he was a student at the Command and General Staff School, Air University, Maxwell Field, Montgomery, Ala. Lt. Col. Dooley receives the insignia of his present rank from Brig. Gen. J. G. Shinkle, Commander of the Army Rocket and Guided Missile Agency, as Mrs. Dooley looks on.

the usual inductee, it may be otherwise in the case of a soldier with outside income or property.

Shows Impairment

Assuming impairment can be shown, the court may take any one of several actions:

1. It may postpone any payment until the buyer leaves active service. It must be remembered, however, that the full amount of the debt must eventually be paid.
2. I may decrease the payments and spread them over a longer period. Again, however, the full amount must eventually be paid.
3. It may decide that the original payments must be made.
4. It may allow the seller to repossess the property.

The decision which will be made by the Court depends upon all the facts in the particular case, including such considerations as the amount of the debt, the financial position of the seller and buyer, the type of property, the time left in military service, etc.

Buyer Waivers

In some cases, the buyer will have waived or forfeited the protection offered by the Act. Any waiver that may have been assigned before entering service has no effect. But, should one sign such a waiver after entering service, it will deprive him of the benefits of the Act.

In the final analysis, military personnel must remember that the Act is designed for protection, only in cases where protection is really needed by the soldier because of the change in his status from civilian to military. Further, the Act will not be used unjustly to deprive civilians of their legal rights. Specific questions should be directed to Local Assistance personnel in the Office of the Command Staff Judge Advocate.

EXAMINATIONS ANNOUNCED

The U. S. Civil Service Board has issued two announcements, one for illustrators and a second for biologists.

The first group includes grades ranging from GS-3 ($3495 per annum) through GS-12 ($8330 per annum) and ranges from illustrators in general fields to illustrators of technical equipment. The announcement is numbered 5-35-16(59).

The announcement for biologists starts at GS-11 ($7030 per annum) and goes through GS-14 ($11355 per annum). This announcement is numbered 5-35-15(59).

Good Samaritan Sgt. Tags Motorists for PAL

GOVERNOR'S ISLAND, N.Y.— Motorists in Freeport, N.Y., who have been saved from overtime parking fines have found a pal in the Army. He's Sergeant First Class George G. Pattakos of (417 Foster Ave.) Brooklyn, N. Y., in charge of a recruiting booth in Freeport who's been putting his own coins in the meters of over-parked cars.

Once himself the beneficiary of a similar Good Samaritan, Pattakos doesn't let the motorist get away without a message which is definitely NOT an Army recruiting pitch.

Each time, he tickets the car with the following tag:

The time on your parking meter has run out and coins have been put in for you. Time is also running out for hundreds of kids who need the guidance of the Police Athletic League which may be forced to cut some of its youth activities because of lack of funds. If you desire to repay the money placed in the meter, please send it to your local PAL.

FUTURE NUCLEAR POWER PLANT OPERATORS FACE HARD YEAR; NCOs CAREFULLY PICKED FOR NEW SCHOOL

FORT BELVOIR, Va.—Why does a Regular Army sergeant ask to go to the toughest school in the Army, then say he'll pack his wife and children off for a year so he can move into a student barracks to concentrate better on his studies?

That's a question for which Captain William R. Wray of the Armed corps of Engineers hasn't a definite answer, but he does know one thing: he has 46 similarly dedicated students at the nuclear power plant operators school here.

Six years ago the Army decided it needed a small, atomic-fueled power plant at remote installations—along the Distant Early Warning Line in the Far North, for example.

Since then the Army has built its prototype here, the Army Package Power Reactor (APPR-1), and last year completed training its first class of non-commissioned officers operators.

The present class for the year-long course comprises 35 NCOs from the Army Corps of Engineers, Transportation Corps, Medical Corps and Chemical Corps, seven from the Navy and Air Force, and four officers of these services.

They already have an idea of what their futures hold. One of the Army officers, for example, will head the plant to be constructed beginning this year at Fort Greely, Alaska. The others will be crew members of that plant and the APPR-1, and instructors in this rapidly growing field.

The Belvoir plant where the students train looks much like any other power plant except for the squat dome incasing the nuclear power source—approximately 50 pounds of Uranium 235, the equivalent of 2½ million gallons of fuel oil that won't have to be shipped to Fort Greely.

The NCOs have an average of more than ten years service and most have already attended three other military schools. They are high school graduates, only a few have had formal college training, and only one has a degree.

But these men, according to Wray, have "motivation." Most have spent off-duty hours bettering their education. They are young—average age about 32—but mature men, many married and with families. In exhaustive interviews at home camps and here they expressed enthusiasm for this challenging field.

They also met requirements calling for practical experience analysis and water treatment equipment, electrical and electronic equipment, or nuclear detectors.

Practical background, motivation and previous education will prove valuable as the grind goes into the first six months' academic and the final half-year's operational training.

Studies include 80 hours of college algebra, trigonometry and calculus; 106 hours of physics

Army Pilot Who Set World Record Works For College Degree

FORT RUCKER, Ala.—Undergraduates at the University of Omaha would hardly be expected to recognize in follow-student James E. Bowman an Army pilot from Amboy, Ind., who has flown higher—nearly six miles up—than any other man has ever gone in "that suddenly-seeming mighty small platform"—a helicopter.

In fact, in the youthful face and wiry stature of the candidate for a Bachelor of Science degree, they can be excused for not recognizing a man old enough (34) to be an Army captain, and a test pilot so experienced that he serves on the Army Aviation Board here.

His three world altitude records were made last December 28 at Wichita, Kans., when he flew a Cessna YH-41 "Seneca" helicopter from classical to nuclear, and 75 hours of electricity and electronics.

The 158 hours of mechanical and nuclear engineering academic studies cover fluid flow, thermodynamics, and practical aspects of reactor components and reactor physics. They also receive 29 hours of health physics—the radiological health aspects of nuclear power plant operations.

The 46 students are trained by a staff of 20 instructors. They 11 in physics and chemistry labs, break into two groups for classroom work, into groups of 10 or and into operational crews of three or four in the plant.

Instructors are military and civilian, including some from ALCO Products, builders of the Army's installation. From them the students will quickly learn that the "package" in and on which they are working is a package only in the sense that all its parts are air transportable.

The air of youthfulness around the school is personified by its head, Captain Wray, of (810 Fourth St.) DeQuincy, La., who attended Louisiana State University before going to West Point. Only 32, he has also earned a master's degree in civil engineering at Texas A & M, and has completed special studies in nuclear engineering at Pennsylvania State University.

to 30,335 feet when weighing in at 2109 pounds, and to 28,200 feet when added fuels pushed the weight to 2229 pounds. The first flight gave him two records, one with no weight restrictions and one within the 1102-2204 pound range.

All earned for him a Distinguished Flying Cross presented a week later by Secretary of the Army Wilber M. Brucker in his Pentagon office.

Hazards of the flight could be anticipated in broad outline only. They concerned such matters as blade stall, compressibility, vibration that might shake the engine loose, safe speed of descent and safe cruising speed at those altitudes.

How to meet them was in good part a matter of "feeling my way." No one else had ever had to solve quite the same problems.

"It was a lonely feeling up there, in my plastic canopy," says Bowman, "especially when I got into a jet stream. I wished then I had a radio so I could have talked it over with someone down below to help me figure out what was taking place."

But small helicopters are cramped for space and simply equipped. Just the addition of overshoes on his feet (for nothing more scientific than to impart warmth) and the parachute and oxygen kit on his back put him in a strange environment for a helicopter pilot.

It is this sort of challenge of one man and a small machine pitted against nature that attracted Army Engineer Bowman to Army aviation in 1951. "It's more fun," he says. "You get a genuine sensation of flying."

Although he had but three years of flying time behind him when he became a civilian in 1954, Bowman was hired as a test pilot for Hiller Helicopter Company at Palo Alto, Calif. He made the experimental flights on the Hiller YH-32 "Hornet" ramjet helicopter, since delivered to the Army.

"I got homesick," is Bowman's explanation of his return to active duty early in 1956. It is as a Transportation Corps officer that he is now spending six months to complete his college education. He hopes it might assist him in his application for a Regular Army commission and for a future assignment as an Army aviation liaison officer within the aircraft industry.

Such a tour of duty is a valuable training ground to round out an Army pilot's knowledge of his trade and his machine. As a longtime carrier, however, Bowman's heart is with research and development, doing Army Aviation Board-type work of testing and evaluating new planes and helicopters and their equipment and seeking improvements on the old models.

And one desirable improvement in the helicopter is an increase in their high altitude performance capabilities.

SAFETY ENGINEER DISCUSSES COST OF ACCIDENTS

BY GEORGE HARDY
ABMA Safety Engineer

Someone has said "When a person is killed by accident, no one gains except the undertaker." It is an established fact, accidents to workers are costly - not only to the employer, but also to the injured man, his family, and to society as a whole. The prevention of injuries to employees is clearly a highly commendable humanitarian work and will continue to progress on this merit. However, the fact that accident prevention is GOOD BUSINESS also carries considerable weight in the promotion of the program.

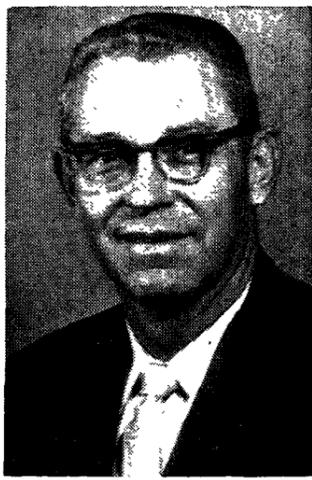

Let us examine some of the costs of accidents borne by the employer, the injured and his family, and society. Conservative estimates have shown that on the average each lost-time injury in industrial employment costs the employer approximately $1800. This figure may seem somewhat high, but a further look at some of the individual cost items involved will readily show how their total could add up to a sizeable figure. Some of the items which add to this cost to employer are: this cost to employer are:

- (1) Cost of lost time of injured employee
  - (2) Cost due to rearranging production schedule and personnel, including training, to replace injured worker
  - (3) Cost due to loss of profit on injured worker's productivity and on idle machines
  - (4) Cost due to damaged equipment or material involved
  - (5) Cost due to time lost by supervisory personnel, investigating and reporting accident
  - (6) Cost due to possible resulting interruption of production schedule
  - (7) Cost due to first aid (time, supplies, etc.)
  - (8) Cost to employer under employee welfare and benefit system
  - (9) In some cases, cost due to increased insurance rates
- Many other detailed items could be added to compile a rather impressive list.

The injured workers themselves, however, are the heaviest losers. Their actual losses in money may not be so great as the employer's, but workers are less able to afford their share of the financial burden, and in addition, it is they who must bear the physical pain and suffering that accompany every injury. The monetary loss to the worker can however be substantial. For the average accident, wages lost are about twice as much as the total compensation received due to a lost time injury, and of course, in case of death the ration of wages lost to compensation received is much larger.

Society suffers through accidents mostly due to off-the-job accidents. In addition to the indirect cost due to the decrease in productivity, the direct cost of higher taxes to support social agencies, hospital association, etc., in many cases must bear the entire cost of accidents. Also, it is reasonable to assume that at least part of the increased cost of production due to industrial accidents will be passed on to the consumer as increased cost - hence an increased cost of living

WILLIAM H. GIBSON

Gibson Is Named Week's Safe Worker

The safe worker of the week selected by the Safety Division is William H. Gibson, military instructor, Officers Training Division, OGMS. "Buck" as he is known to his friends teaches use of special weapons, handling, and storage of missile fuels. This includes fire prevention, and firefighting. He has not had a disabling injury during his 12 years of government service.

Gibson started work for the Huntsville Arsenal in 1941 and taught firefighting until 1945. He came to Redstone in 1951 and worked for the Safety Office until 1953 when he transferred to OGMS.

Gibson is married to the former Ila Moore of Hartselle. They have two daughters, Joy, a sophomore at the University of Alabama, and Maxie, 15, who attends Morgan County High School. Joy was a cheer leader when she was due to the cost of accidents.

It is clearly evident that everyone is the looser when an accident occurs and only a concerted effort on the part of everyone will reduce the high cost of accidents.

ORDNANCE LAUDS SIGNAL MEN ON 'SPACE ACADEMY' STAFF

The United States Army Signal School Electronic Training Detachment Number 2 was recently commended by the Commandant of the United States Army Ordnance Guided Missile School for its outstanding performance during the annual command inspection.

The commendation stated "The results of this annual inspect on reflect favorably upon you, your organization, and the instructors of the Signal Detachment. It has only been through the cooperative and helpful attitude of the Signal personnel that the high standards of instruction we now have have been attained".

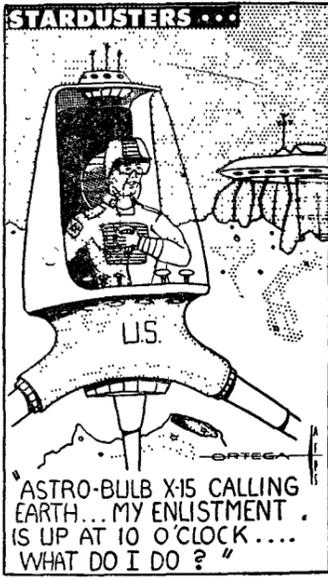

The inspection was conducted by the Ordnance Training Command. The Commanding Officer of the Detachment, Lt. Col. Bernard A. Ferry, stated, "Recognition of this sort is achieved only through the display by all members of the unit of the spirit of teamwork and dedication to duty so essential to the success of the Army in accomplishing its mission for National Defense."

Under the provisions of the Joint Corps-Ordnance Corps agreement for training in electronics specialties, the Signal Detachment provides 50 percent of the instructors required for electronics instruction at the Ordnance Guided Missile School. Signal Corps instructors can be found in classrooms and laboratories throughout the "Space Academy." Then teach complex electronics subjects on the Nike Hercules, Hawk, LeCrosse, Redstone, and Jupiter missile systems. Officers and warrant officers of the Detachment also act as teachers and advisors. Signal Detachment Personnel receive electronics training at the U. S. Army Signal School, Fort Monmouth, N.J.

The Commander of the Detachment, who serves as the Signal Corps Liaison Officer on the special staff of the school commandant, has the additional responsibilities of advising the commandant on all matters of electronics instruction. These responsibilities include review of programs of instruction and related training materials, and insure that the instruction given to future guided missile maintenance men is the highest caliber possible.

The Signal Detachment arrived at Redstone Arsenal on October 15, 1952. At that time the Detachment had a strength of 33. Expanded responsibilities and development of more missile systems brought the strength to 324 persons.

The Detachment is proud of the high standards the soldiers in the organization strive for and meet. Although highly skilled technicians, the Signal men believe in the adage "Soldiers First" and have earned the semi-annual character guidance award and two soldiers of the month awards in competition with soldiers from the Ordnance Missile Command, The Army Rocket and Guided Missile Agency, the Army Missile Agency, the Ordnance Guided Missile School, and Redstone Arsenal. In addition personnel in the Detachment, while serving here, have received two Commendation Ribbons w-metal Pendant, and numerous letters of Commendation, and appreciation.

The Detachment had the first soldier at Redstone Arsenal selected for the Army College Education Program, the second soldier on the post promoted to the new grade of E-5; and of the enlisted personnel eligible for proficiency pay, 75 percent have been selected. During the last year, one of the men in the Detachment was selected for attendance to the West Point Preparatory School.

The enlisted personnel of the Detachment are quartered in new billets. A large dayroom, which provides a card room, reading room, and a large game room with ping pong, billiards and mis-

In its seven years of existence the Detachment has never received less than a superior rating for any command inspection, training inspection, or I. G. inspection conducted by either the Signal Corps or the Ordnance Corps.

Corporal Is Chosen Safest Supervisor

The safe supervisor of the week, selected by the Safety Division, is Cpl. Richard R. Frahm of the 291st MP Company. Cpl. Frahm is the company armorer. He supervises the bonding, storage and issue of guns and ammunition. In addition, he teaches safe methods of handling firearms, and emphasizes that one mistake could be the last. He has not had a disabling injury under his supervision.

Cpl. Frahm has been in the army for six years, and has had two tours of duty in Korea, and one in Japan. He transferred to Redstone from White Sands where he had been assigned as an MP.

Cpl. Frahm was born in Racine, Wisconsin. He participated in all types of sports while in school and later played semi-pro football. He was a police officer before entering the army. It was here he said that he became interested in safety. He further stated that safety should be full time; should be practiced off as well as on the job, because if a man is hurt off the job, his pain is no different than if it had occurred on the job.

Cpl. Frahm spends his spare time watching TV. He is also interested in all competitive sports.

Engineers Advertise Bids for Quarters

The Army Engineers have advertised for bids for the construction of three bachelor officers' quarters buildings at Redstone Arsenal, Huntsville, Alabama, for officers assigned to the U. S. Army Ordnance Missile Command, according to an announcement made today by Colonel R. W. Love, U. S. Army District Engineer.

The buildings will be two-story frame structures with masonry veneer facing on the first stories and vertical board and batten siding on the second stories. There will be a total of approximately 30,000 square feet of floor area in the three buildings, which will provide accommodations for 12 field grade officers and 48 company grade officers.

'CARIBOU CREEK' NO ELKS' PARTY; DISLOYAL MOOSE CRASHES MANEUVER

FORT RICHARDSON, Alaska —A Fort Bragg, North Carolina, paratrooper on temporary duty in Alaska came up with an idea for a new business in the 49th state — "Moose Insurance."

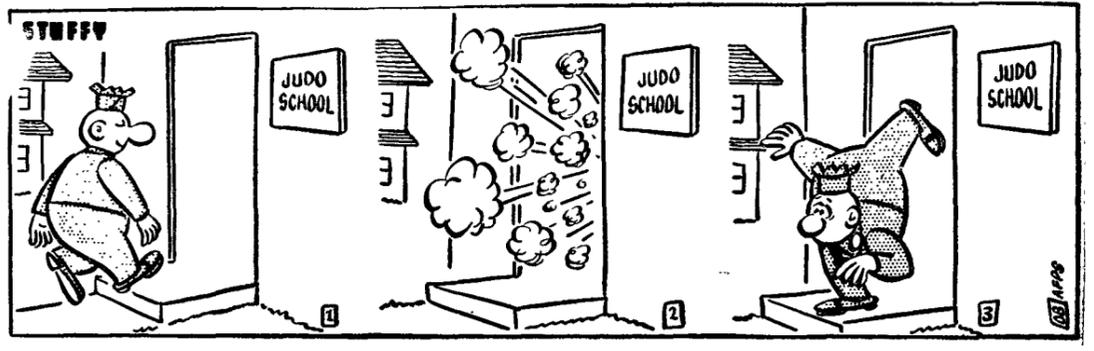

Sergeant Raymond, Williams of (1565 Penn Ave.) Detroit, Mich., assigned to the 82nd Airborne Division of the Strategic Army Corps, was here recently for the Army's Exercise "Caribou Creek." Part of the training included cross-country skiing.

One cold night, when his unit was returning to the platoon area after a training session, Williams who was detailed as the rear guard stopped to adjust his ski binding—and looked up to find himself facing 1500 pounds of moosemeat on the hoof.

"The platoon was out of sight. I'd never met up with a moose and wasn't quite sure what to do. We stood looking at each other. I decided to move out — he charged. I tried to sidestep. That's all I remember till I woke up."

He was found a half hour later by a rescue team and taken to the hospital for treatment of chest and stomach bruises. "That Alaska moose, clumsy as he looks, is a real bundle of dynamite." "Somebody ought to start selling moose insurance up here," he commented.

From Horse Artillery
To Missiles - - Sergeant
Masters Changing Skills

KITZINGEN, Germany—In the 18-year military life span of Master Sergeant Walter M. McCaffery the Army has gone from horse-drawn artillery pieces to Corporal missiles—and McCaffery has gone right along with it.

Now a sergeant of a guidance platoon of the 558th Field Artillery Missile Battalion here, he likes to amuse the younger soldiers with stories of the days in 1940 when he served as "water man" and sometimes "stable police" for field artillery units which still used the old French 75 gun of World War I fame.

Those were humble and relatively primitive days for a man whose present skill required eight months of highly technical schooling to acquire.

He acquired it at the Guided Missile Fire Control System Maintenance Course for surface to surface missiles at Fort Bliss, Tex., in 1955. This schooling was the inevitable step after his intense interest was around in the Army's guided missile program while he was sergeant major in 1954 of a field artillery headquarters assigned the task of organizing early Corporal missile battalions.

The soldier from Chicago (1743 N. Sedgewick St.) brings plenty of basic artillery knowledge and experience to his guided missile job. He has also had many years with both coast and anti-aircraft artillery.

Those horse-toted French 75s threw a shell about five miles; the truck-mobile Corporal missile, approximately 80 miles with or without a nuclear warhead.

One thing for sure, A psychiatrist is no quack. He guarantees a cure Or your mania back.

ARGENTINIAN — Screen beauty Isabel Sarli comes from quite a bit south of the border where she was a box office smash. She certainly should be able to sell tickets for Hollywood too.
