35 Contracts In December Total Million Or More Each

Industry Gets Many Phases of Missile Program In Awards

Thirty-five contracts in the million-dollar bracket, totaling $184,455,359 were awarded during the month of December, 1960, by the U. S. Army Ordnance Corps.

Of this total, $146,766,384 was for research and development, testing, engineering services and production of missiles and ground support equipment under jurisdiction of the Army Ordnance Missile Command.

The largest award was to the Martin Company, Orlando, Fla., in support of the Army's Pershing ballistic missile system. The Army Ballistic Missile Agency is technical supervisor for the Pershing.

The contract included $47,389,772 for continued research and development and testing of the system, and $29,532,000 for production of missiles and ground equipment.

Martin also received $1,037,169 to furnish 120 warheads with range safety equipment for the Army's Lacrosse missile system. The Army Rocket and Guided Missile Agency is responsible for the Lacrosse system.

The Sperry Utah Engineering Laboratories, Salt Lake City, Utah, received two contracts amounting to $18,207,000 for the manufacture of ABMA's Sergeant missile, ground support equipment and testing equipment.

Chrysler Corporation, of Detroit, Mich., received four contracts totaling $3,433,002 for engineering services and modifications authorized for the Redstone and Jupiter ballistic missile systems. Both were systems developed by ABMA.

The Thiokol Chemical Corporation, operating the Longhorn Ordnance Works at Marshall, Texas, for the Army, received $1,139,675 to produce inert motor parts for the Pershing.

Aeronutronics Division of Ford Motor Co., Santa Ana, Calif., was awarded $3,000,000 to continue development of the Army's Shil. (See 35 CONTRACTS on Page 2)

British Army General Is Expected To Visit Today

Maj. Gen. John M. McNeill, commander of the British Army Staff in Washington, D. C., is scheduled to make a three day visit to the U. S. Army Ordnance Missile Command beginning today.

During his stay here, Gen. McNeill will receive orientation briefings on the functions of AOMC and related agencies, the functions of the Ordnance Guided Missile School, and Army missiles.

His itinerary includes calls on Maj. Gen. August Schomburg, Commanding General of AOMC, Brig. Gen. Richard M. Hurst, Commander of the Army Ballistic Missile Agency and Brig. Gen. John G. Zierdt, Commander, Army Rocket and Guided Missile Agency.

NEW DATA ANALYZER SPEEDS ARGMA TESTING

A significant advance in the speed of handling vital test information transmitted by missiles in flight was achieved during a recent U. S. Army missile test, the Department of the Army announced last week.

The Army said new telemetry equipment developed under supervision of the Army Rocket and Guided Missile Agency provided complete data analysis immediately after the missile firing at White Sands Missile Range, N.M.

Until now, days had been required after firings to completely analyze all raw data transmitted by the missile during a firing test.

The new equipment, a vibration and acoustic analyzer, also permitted a vast increase in the amount of data which can be sent on the same telemetry channel. ARGMA said the analyzer functioned accurately and with high reliability in this first test

Team Is Expected To Complete Phone Installation

An installation team from Washington is scheduled to arrive this week to complete work on the Redstone Arsenal Telephone Exchange for cutover to direct "In-Out Dialing" between the Arsenal and Huntsville in March.

"Cable work between the city and the installation is complete," Maj. Thomas Koeneman, Post Signal Officer, said.

Cable work is also being completed to connect the Rohm and Haas and Thiokol switchboards into the direct system.

Telephone numbers on the Arsenal will remain the same. However, a new directory is being updated and will be distributed at approximately the same time as the cutover.

The Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph staffs are working closely with Arsenal Signal personnel to accomplish the cutover.

The direct system will only apply to local calls. Long distance calls will still be accomplished through operators, either on the direct tie-lines rented from the telephone company by the Government, or over commercial wires through Huntsville operators to areas which the direct lines don't reach. No Arsenal operator will be necessary except on the lines.

"It is expected that service will be more prompt, efficient and satisfying for the user," Maj. Koeneman said. "And the service will cost the Government less per year."

Developed by the telemetry branch of ARGMA in cooperation with Gulton Industries, Ortholog Division, Princetown Junction, N. J., the analyzer carried in the missile handled five channels of vibration data putting it into final useable form before transmitting it from the missile to the ground station.

It also saved considerably on the proper output required to transmit vital information to the ground.

A COYOTE HOWLED and the sergeant shot but missed. SFC. Buford Harrison, Arsenal Game Warden, poses above with a wiley coyote who has made his home among the calves near Weeden Mountain and lived off a land abundant with rabbit and field mice. Sgt. Harrison planned to trap the "critter" who escaped his gun when he shot—as soon as the hunting season ended. But the coyote is a victim of civilization more sophisticated than the blunderbuss or trap. He's a traffic victim on Rideout Road.

Redstone Test Is A Success

Monday's Firing Proves Production Line Missile Ready

The U. S. Army fired a Redstone ballistic missile in a successful test Jan. 21 at Cape Canaveral, Florida.

The firing tested the performance of a production line missile manufactured by the Chrysler Corporation in the Michigan Ordnance Missile Plant near Detroit.

Redstone, the Army's largest weapon system, is deployed with Army units in Europe.

The Army said the missile satisfied all test objectives.

Redstone was developed by the Army Ballistic Missile Agency. Chrysler Corporation is prime system contractor.

A team of employees of the Launch Operations Directorate, George C. Marshall Space Flight Center of NASA, conducted the firing.

Redstone missiles are being employed by NASA in Project Mercury, the program designed to carry man into space.

Ben Franklin Stands In Greatest Company

Next month will see observances of the birthdays of two great Americans, Washington and Lincoln, and as in former years speakers and editorial writers will be eulogizing their places in the nation's history. That's as it should be, but 255 years ago, on the 17th of January, a man was born in Boston who belongs in their company—yet how many of us pause to think of the enormous and varied contributions Benjamin Franklin made to his time and his country?

For this man's accomplishments, viewed in our own day or professional specialization, seem almost incredible. Printer, author, publisher, inventor, scientist, philosopher, statesman, diplomat—in any one of these fields he would have distinguished himself. His service to the Revolution would itself have made him one of the American immortals, for he helped to draft, and signed, the Declaration of Independence. Throughout the war, his acumen and patience in representing the new nation in France were masterful, and when victory came, wise old Ben Franklin was at hand to help to draft, and sign, the peace treaty.

What lesson is there for us today in this astonishing life? For one thing, its fullness, its richness, its reflection of a complete man driven by an insatiable intellectual curiosity about men and things. He could, as much as any man of his time, be proud of his life, of all he had done for his countrymen. Yet it was Franklin who told his wife, "I wish the good Lord had seen fit to make each day just twice as long as it is. Perhaps then I could really accomplish something."

Yes, here was a patriot about whom it is impossible to read without getting a new sense of human dimensions and what it means to leave "footsteps on the sands of time." In the great American gallery we should never take him for granted as a stock historical figure. (AFPS)

FOLLOWING THE INDIAN WARS by Oliver Knight (University of Oklahoma Press, 396 pp., $5.95.)

For a quarter of a century after the War Between the States, the U. S. Army engaged in a type of warfare completely in contrast to that of 1861-1865. There were no huge masses of men, no enormous supply trains, no artillery barrages, no entrenchments. Instead, mobility was the key, for the enemy was the greatest horse warrior of all time—the American plains Indian.

In twelve major campaigns and over a thousand engagements, the new Army met the Sioux, Kiowa, Comanche, Apache and other tribes, until finally the power of the Indians was broken at Wounded Knee Creek in the Dakota badlands.

Covering the wars for the press was a new breed of reporter. Usually a non-professional, he became an integral part of the Army unit he was covering, even to the extent of acting as a soldier during combat. To the enemy a reporter's scalp was as good a trophy as that of a soldier. Only 20 of these reporters are identifiable by name, and most went on to further achievement both in and out of the field of journalism. One for instance, was Henry M. Stanley, who later located Dr. Livingstone and helped open up Africa.

Knight considers that the reporting of the wars was superior to modern news writing, because the reporter was permitted to interpret the facts he reported, in contrast to the present "spurious doctrine of objectivity." He says that "There was no fine writing in the Western War dispatches, no brilliantly lathed phrases. The stories were clear, they were understandable, they were often exciting. They were not, however, sensationalized . . ."

On the basis of his own description of the reportage, his analysis is perhaps subject to debate. In any case, any book dealing with names like Crook and Custer, Sitting Bull and Crazy Horse, Powder River and Little Big Horn, the Seventh Cavalry and the Buffalo Soldiers, is bound to be exciting and this

Typography Exec Talks to Technical Writers, Publishers

A St. Louis typography executive Thursday told technical writers from the Huntsville area about bold new concepts of printing utilizing photography and electronics.

Adrian Olszewski, manager of the phototype department of Warwick Typographers, predicted that someday type may be set electronically by pages instead of letter-to-letter. He pointed out that machines are now on the market which will store and print-out material and that these could be geared to set type by photography.

Olszewski, speaking to the society of Technical Writers and Publishers at the Elks Club, said his phototype department is the largest of its kind in the world. The phototype method does away with casting hot metal type. Instead, letters and figures are projected on photographic film or paper. Offset printing plates can be made from these letters.

The phototype method, which Olszewski called the greatest development in printing since Gutenberg set up his press in 1454, dates from 1939 when a Swiss inventor began experiments on the process.

During the talk Olszewski traced the development of various type faces and how they are used by expert typographers to create a mold or impression. He said many large companies spend thousands of dollars each year developing printed materials which are easy to read from a typographical standpoint.

He said that one of the big advantages of using phototype negatives was their ease of storage. Olszewski said that a publication which would require four tons of type metal could be put on three pounds of photo negatives.

Federal Accountants Hear Einhorn Speak

One of the nation's highest ranking accountants addressed the Federal Government Accountants Association here last Wednesday night. He is Raymond Einhorn, Director of Audits for NASA in Washington and president of the national FGAA.

His subject, "Financial Management in the 60's," was geared to the objectives of the National Association. He projected seven significant points for consideration by the group, which, in summary, stressed the need for tailoring accounting systems to serve the diverse needs of the interested parties, the operating agency, the Congress, and the public. He concluded his speech by imploring the members of the organization to "rethink our systems as we go into the 60's by concentrating less on 'how' and more on 'why.'"

Members may obtain copies of Mr. Einhorn's speech from the Program Chairman, Mr. Abner McNaron, Comptroller's Office, AOMC.

Preceding the principal speaker in the program, Mayor R. B. Searcy of Huntsville; Dean Paul Garner of the University of Alabama; Philip M. Mason, Director of the Huntsville University of Alabama; Center; and Harry H. Gorman, Director for Administration, MSFC, were introduced by Jack L. Edgar, president of Huntsville Chapter of FGAA. Dean Garner is a member of the National FGAA Advisory Staff.

Certificates of membership were presented by Einhorn to the following accountants: Gordon A. Beekman, Woodrow Dooley, Richard G. Elrod, Earle R. Ford, Jr., Robert W. Mullins, and John Ray.

Redstone Flyers Will Elect New Officers

The Redstone Arsenal Flying Club will hold the annual membership meeting tomorrow night at the Rocket City Air Activities Pilot Room at Huntsville Municipal Airport at 7:30 p.m.

Election of officers for the coming year will be held at this meeting.

A Flying Club representative pointed out that in more than 150,000 miles logged by the members during 1960, no serious accidents were experienced.

The Operations Officer report recorded 1250 hours flying time by club members. One fourth of the cross country time was temporary duty while on government business. Regulations permit reimbursement to the club member not to exceed the cost of common carrier.

Last year 24 new club members learned to fly and were granted solo licenses. One member has an air transport pilot rating and twenty-two others hold private pilot certificates.

At the Service Club

Why do you read this column anyway? Or do you? That's a chilling thought — to think about writing a news article each week that goes completely unread! Aside from whatever literary merit this article does or does not have, I urge you to keep your eye on it, mainly because very often it contains a tiny nugget of information that will lead you to enjoyable hours here at the Service Club.

Each Wednesday night at 1930 hours, Ray Pisani teaches dance classes. This course is concerned with the Foxtrot and Rhumba, and it will last about six weeks. If you plan to sign up for it, you had better hurry, as there are only a few places left. If you should miss this course, you can always catch the next.

Next Thursday night, the 26th, the Shutter Club will meet in the small lounge. This also, is a weekly event each Thursday night at 1800 hours. At 2000 hours on Thursday, we will have an extra special event, the Winter Wonderland Dance, featuring the Charlie Lyle Orchestra. This is a semi-formal dance, so coat and tie will be required.

Friday night, Jan. 27th, we will have a "Stop the Music" program at 2000 hours.

Saturday night you will want to drop by for the Saturday Night Snack given at 1800 hours. I won't say what it will be, but it will be good.

Sunday morning, hot coffee and donuts will be served from the kitchen at 0930 hours, another weekly occurrence. At 1900 hours Sunday evening, we will have a Birthday Party followed by one of our rousing Sunday Night Record Dances.

On Monday night the 30th at 2015 hours we will have our weekly Evening of Games.

Each Tuesday night at 1930 hours, the Bridge Club meets in the small lounge. You don't need to sign up in advance, or even have too much skill at the game of Bridge. Just drop by and learn more about the game while you play. We have several "regulars" who come very close to being bridge experts, and who will be glad to give pointers. In starring Kerwin Mathews and Jo Morrow. Time Sunday, 1400, 1800 and 2030 hours. Time Monday 1800 and 2030 hours.

Tuesday, Jan. 31, "The Rat Race" (M-YP) starring Tony Curtis and Debbie Reynolds. Time 1800 and 2030 hours.

fact, they even give each other pointers, and some fascinating arguments result.

This Tuesday night, the 31st, there will be a joint meeting of the Rho Sigma Chi and the EM Council at 1930 hours.

History

Have you ever been to one of the Service Club square dances? We had one on the 14th that was quite an experience. There is something about a square dance that just seems to bring out the latent qualities in people. People were manifested with such energy and enthusiasm, or perhaps the floor was a little slick; however, it was very enjoyable, whether you were swinging your partner or sliding across the floor.

Future

There will be one big dance in February that you won't want to miss, plus several unusual programs. We are even going to give George Washington a birthday party. So glance through this column every once in a while

Catholic Conference To Begin on Sunday

A professional team from the Chief of Chaplain's Office in Washington, D. C., will conduct a four-day Catholic Institute on Leadership and Family Life at the Post Chapel beginning Sunday, Jan. 29.

Chaplain (Maj.) Bernard M. Burns, Catholic Chaplain, said the Cana Conferences will include discussions of problems and goals of married life; Pre-Cana Conferences cover areas of interest to those contemplating marriage; daytime workshops will be conducted for women and high school students and evening conferences will cover family life for the married and unmarried.

A buffet supper will be served Wednesday evening in the Chapel social room. Highlight of the Institute will be the renewal of marriage vows following Mass on Wednesday evening.

Here's the traffic safety tip for the day: Power brakes may stop you on a dime with dry pavement, but on ice and snow, a sudden stop will throw your car into a dangerous skid. Keep a light foot on the brake . . . And the accelerator.

President's Civil War Centennial Proclamation

The years 1961-1965 will mark the one hundredth anniversary of the American Civil War.

That war was America's most tragic experience. But like all truly great tragedies, it carries with it an enduring lesson and a profound inspiration. It was a demonstration of heroism and sacrifice by men and women of both sides, who valued principle above life itself and whose devotion to duty is a proud part of our national inheritance.

Both sections of our magnificently reunited country sent into their armies men who became soldiers as good as any who ever fought under any flag. Military history records nothing finer than the courage and spirit displayed at such battles as Chickamauga, Antietam, Kenesaw Mountain and Gettysburg. That America could produce men so valiant and so enduring is a matter for deep and abiding pride.

The same spirit on the part of the people back home supported those soldiers through four years of great trial. That a Nation which contained hardly more than 30 million people, North and South together, could sustain 600,000 deaths without faltering is a lasting testimonial to something unconquerable in the American spirit. And that a transcending sense of unity and larger common purpose could, in the end, cause the men and women who had suffered so greatly to close ranks once the contest ended and to go on together to build a greater, freer and happier America must be a source of inspiration as long as our country may last.

She was an optician's daughter. Two glasses and she made a spectacle of herself.

By a joint resolution approved on September 7, 1957, the Congress established the Civil War Centennial Commission to coordinate the War. This resolution authorized and requested the President to issue proclamations inviting the people of the United States to participate in those observances.

NOW THEREFORE, I, DWIGHT D. EISENHOWER, President of the United States of America, do hereby invite all of the people of our country to take a direct and active part in the Centennial of the Civil War.

I request all units and agencies of government, Federal, State and local, and their officials, to encourage, foster and participate in Centennial observances. And I especially urge our Nation's schools and colleges, its libraries its churches and religious bodies, its civic, service and patriotic organizations, its learned and professional societies, its arts, sciences and industries, and its informational media, to plan and carry out their own appropriate Centennial observances during the years 1961 to 1965; all to the end of enriching our knowledge and appreciation of this great chapter in our Nation's history and of making this memorable period truly a Centennial for all Americans.

ON DEPLOYMENT OF ARMY FORCES . . . "The deployment of Army troops in critical areas of Europe and the Far East is an essential part of our military posture in a period of tension — a ready deterrent to the opening of limited or general war. The picture presented by our ground troops standing shoulder to shoulder with our stalwart allies gives a feeling of solidarity, unity of purpose, and determination which can be achieved in no other way. It has an impressive effort throughout the world." Secretary of the Army Brucker.

Col. Sams Receives 'Missilemonial'

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla.—On the day prior to his retirement after 30 years' service, Col. James D. Sams, late Chief of the Atlantic Missile Range Army Field Office at Cape Canaveral, Fla., was the recipient of a "missilemonial" at a party in the AMRAFO offices at Patrick Air Force Base. Among other distinguished guests was Brig. Gen. William Rogers, Vice Commander of the Air Force Missile Test Center.

At the Dec. 30th celebration, Lt. Col. Curtis L. Ferrell, Jr., Deputy AMRAFO Chief, awarded the missilemonial and the hard hat worn by Col. Sams at all the firsts in missilery achieved by the Army at Cape Canaveral.

The first paragraph of the Missilemonial reads as follows: "On the occasion of his latest countdown at the world's largest shooting gallery, it has been ordained that the safety hard hat worn by Col. J. D. Sams from 10 June 1958 to 31 December 1960 should be retired. It is presented to him as a keepsake in symbolic recognition of his distinguished service career and outstanding contribution to the U. S. Travers To Talk To Test Men At 9 Ordnance Posts

George C. Travers, Jr., Deputy Chief for Test Management in the Army Rocket and Guided Missile Agency's Test and Evaluation Laboratory will address nine major U. S. Army Ordnance Corps installations during January 1961. He will outline the missile systems test capabilities of ARGMA's Research and Development Directorate placing emphasis on a pre-flight structure which, when completed, will house the most comprehensive set of environmental facilities within the Ordnance Corps for treatment of hazardous as well as inert items.

Although the primary mission of the ARGMA Test and Evaluation Laboratory is to provide in-house support to the R&D Directorate, its test services and facilities are available for use by any government agency or contractor who are concerned with the development and testing of missile systems or system components.

Travers will visit in turn Frankford Arsenal, Pa. (12-13-Jan.); Diamond Ordnance Fuze Laboratories, Washington, D. C. (18-19 Jan.); Watervliet Arsenal, N. Y. (20 January); Picatinny Arsenal and the Ordnance Special Weapons-Ammunition Command, N. J. (23-25 Jan.); Ordnance Tank Automotive Command, Mich. (23-27 Jan.); and Rock Island Arsenal, Ordnance Weapons Command and Ordnance Ammunition Command, Ill. (30 Jan.-1 Feb. 2). DR. LEATHERMAN

Dr. Leatherman Retires Has More Than 20 Years Of Government Service

Dr. C. D. Leatherman, "dean" of the Army Ordnance Guided Missile School here, will retire on Jan. 27th after 20 years of government service, move to Pennsylvania and undertake two new assignments in management engineering and research, it was announced today.

As executive assistant for education at the Missile School, Dr. Leatherman has supervised the training and performance of the faculty which has increased from a lone teacher in 1952 to more than 600 instructors today.

He has been especially active in adapting closed circuit television and ultra-modern group communications methods and equipment for the special requirements of missile training and in ways to speed up highly complex technical instruction in electronics, military and languages under urgent schedules.

Dr. and Mrs. Leatherman have purchased a home at 424 Walker Road, Valley Forge Estates, in Wayne, Penn.

He will have business headquarters in the office of the president of Renner, Inc., 1530 Lombard St. in Philadelphia and be responsible for research, management training and administration of the management engineering firm. He will also conduct a research study in significant developments in technological training in industry, education and government for the American Foundation for Management Research, an affiliate of the American Management Association.

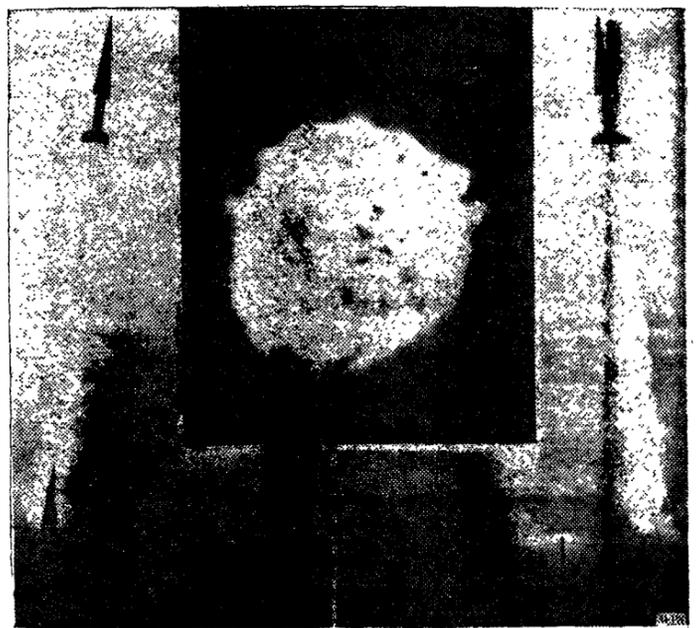

Dr. and Mrs. Leatherman came to Huntsville in 1957 from Washington where he was chief of research for the Army on special warfare projects and also taught several classes at George Washington University.

He was born in New Castle, Penn., and did undergraduate work at Gettysburg College, obtained his doctor of philosophy degree from the Johns Hopkins University and did four years of post-doctoral work at the University of Pennsylvania while also teaching at the Drexel Institute of Technology. He holds a commission as colonel in the Army Reserve.

During World War II, Dr. Leatherman served on the General Staff in the Pentagon and with Supreme Headquarters in Europe and later in Japan and Korea. He won two Legion of Merit and three Commendation Medal awards.

The Judge Advocate Advises

Federal Income Tax—Exclusions

(Because of the timeliness of its subject matter, this article, published in 1960, has been revised for this publication).

Property, including money, which a taxpayer receives is not in every instance includable in his income for Federal income tax purposes. That property which is not included in gross income is called an exclusion. Some of these exclusions will be discussed in this article.

When a taxpayer, either military or civilian, is the recipient of an inheritance by will or intestacy or of a gift, the property which he receives is an exclusion, although other income such as rent, interest, and the like, derived therefrom would not be excluded, but would be income to the recipient for tax purposes.

Other exclusions are life insurance policy proceeds received because of the death of the insured, as well as death benefit payments with the characteristics of life insurance proceeds and payable by reason of death under contracts such as workmen's compensation insurance contracts. The life insurance and death benefit exclusions apply whether the payment is directly to the beneficiary or to the insured's estate or whether it is direct or in trust.

Although the general rule is that compensation for active military service is included as income just as is civilian pay, military personnel and their dependents have the benefit of several additional exclusions, some related to the gift and inheritance exclusions, but others specially provided for by the statute.

Among the military exclusions are subsistence and uniform allowances granted to military personnel and the amounts they receive as allowances for quarters, as well as the value of quarters and subsistence furnished to them. Military personnel who are transferred on a permanent change of station also may exclude the allowances received by them for moving their immediate families, household goods, and personal effects.

The sick pay exclusion of up to $100 per week of the taxable portion of the pay of Army members who are absent from work for prescribed periods of time because of sickness or injury has been discussed in another "The Judge Advocate Advises" column (January 1961).

Upon separation from active service, mustering out payments to military personnel are exclusions, but payments of accrued leave pay are not exclusions. Dividends on G. I. insurance are not taxed. Also, bonus payments awarded war veterans by their states and benefits under the G. I. Bill of Rights are exclusions.

Compensation received under any law administered by the Veterans Administration is excluded, including amounts which are received as pensions, annuities, or other allowances for personnel injury or illness incurred as a result of active military service and amounts which are received as pensions, annuities or other allowances by the beneficiaries of a member of the service because of such member's death from a personal injury or illness resulting from active military service.

Although retirement pay (other than for physical disability retirement) of military personnel is included as tax income, any person who is entitled to receive veteran's benefits for disability may waive part of his taxable retirement pay and receive instead the tax-exempt veterans' pension, annuity, or allowance.

Your legal assistance officer is prepared to assist you with any problems you have in connection with the reporting of your income tax for 1960.
