Two Redstone Officers Named to New Positions

Col. Thomas W. Cooke, Commander of Redstone Arsenal, home of the Army Ordnance Missile Command, has announced two staff appointments.

Lt. Col. John R. F. Bond, a native of Brockway, Pa., was named Executive Officer of the Arsenal.

Lt. Col. Stanley L. Nyhan, who was born in Waterloo, Iowa, was designated as Assistant for Personnel.

The appointments were effective April 10th.

Lt. Col. Bond formerly served as assistant for Personnel and Administration at Redstone. A graduate of Penn State College, at State College, Pa., he is married to the former Margaret Sigogne, daughter of M. Leon Sigogne, Paris, France.

Lt. Col. Nyhan came to Redstone Arsenal in July, 1960, from duty with the Advanced Weapons Support Command, Permasens, Germany. He lately served as Chief of the Command Inspection Office of Redstone Arsenal. A graduate of Tulane University in New Orleans, he is married to the former Frances R. Gallodoro.

Kickoff Meeting May 1 Opens Annual Bond Drive

Gen. Barclay Is Scheduled to Be Keynote Speaker

Maj. Gen. J. A. Barclay, Deputy Commanding General of the Army Ordnance Missile Command, is scheduled to deliver the kickoff address at the opening of the Redstone Arsenal Savings Bond Drive on May 1.

The address will be delivered before the key men and women who will interview each employee to discuss an individual savings bond program which will suit the needs of the individual.

Col. John Palsrok, Savings Bond Officer and Chief of the Finance and Accounting Office, announced that among the guests will be Mr. Milton Cummings, Chairman of the Huntsville-Madison County Savings Bond Drive and Mr. C. H. Stallings, Manager of the Savings Bond Area Office with Headquarters in Birmingham. Mr. Stallings is employed by the U. S. Treasury Department.

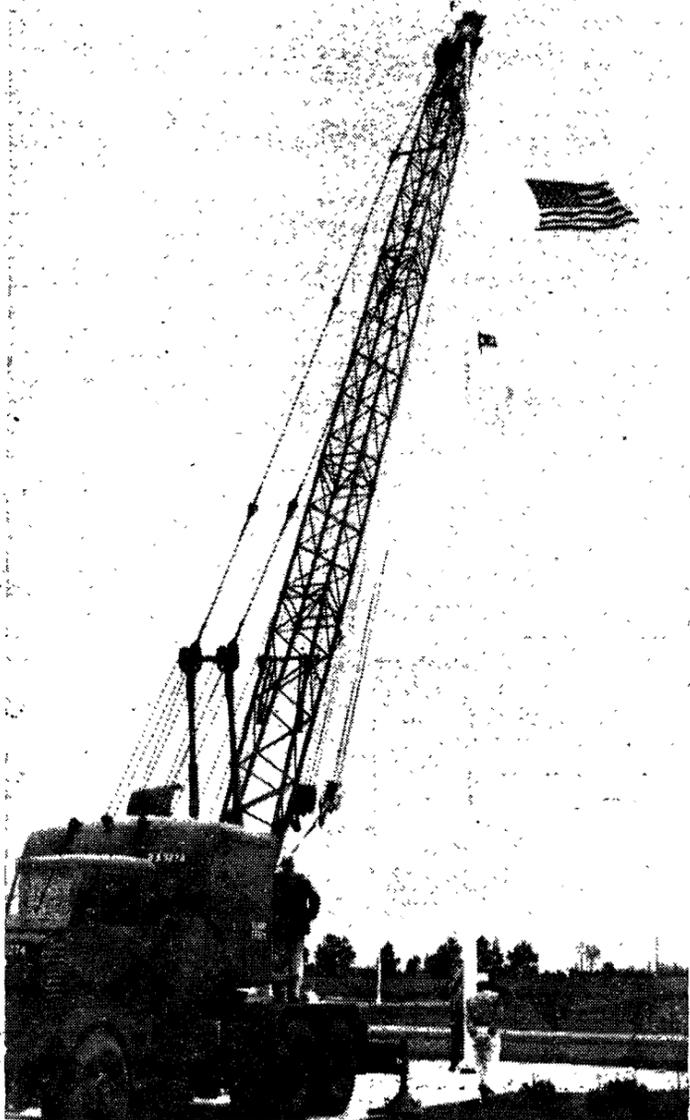

The Drive on the Arsenal will be concentrated into two weeks, (See BOND DRIVE on Page 2)

Arsenal Workers May 1 Will Begin One Hour Earlier

Army civilian employees and military personnel at Redstone Arsenal will report for work one hour earlier beginning May 1.

Maj. Gen. August Schomburg, Commanding General of the Army Ordnance Missile Command, said today that working hours for the summer months will be 7 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. These hours will coincide with the Daylight Saving Time schedule in Washington, D. C. so that Arsenal and Washington time during this period will remain one hour apart as at present.

In past years, Redstone Arsenal and the City of Huntsville have adopted DST. A pool of Arsenal employees, however, showed that early working hours were preferred to DST by a 3-1 margin.

ARMY FLAGPOLE SITTERS—Redstone Arsenal workers cope with a variety of problems in supporting the U. S. Army Ordnance Missile Command. One of the latest, untangling hal-yards caught at the top of a 75 foot flagpole outside AOMC Headquarters. Ordinarily, a painter climbs the pole, but due to high winds, Harold W. Stacey and Billy Barley (atop the crane) tackled the job from atop an 85-foot crane boom. The flag was quickly freed. The smaller two-star flag indicates Maj. Gen. August Schomburg is present in AOMC Headquarters.

Encourage Women to Be Engineers: Gen. Hurst

General Is Speaker At University's Engineering Day

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. — A leading Army missileman today offered a possible solution to the need for more engineers and scientists: encourage more women to enroll in engineering.

Speaking to almost 800 engineering students during University of Alabama Engineering Day activities, Brig. Gen. Richard M. Hurst said, "women have made notable contributions in highly specialized fields."

The Commander of the Army Ballistic Missile Agency pointed out that in the United States women represent less than one (See ENCOURAGE on Page 2)

BREAK IN CONFERENCE—At the headquarters of the Army Ordnance Missile Command, Redstone Arsenal, the Commander of the Army Rocket and Guided Missile Agency, an element of AOMC discusses progress of the Nike Zeus anti-missile missile system development program with two key subordinates, Brigadier General John G. Zierdt, center, confers with Lt. Col. Glenn Crane, left, Projects Director for Nike Zeus, and Col. Matthew Collins, Chief, Pacific Missile Range ARGMA Field Office, Kwajalein Atoll, Southwest Pacific. Kwajalein Atoll is the site of a Nike Zeus test complex that will be used in system demonstrations of Zeus against Air Force Atlas intercontinental ballistic missiles fired from California. The informal gathering occurred during a day highlighted by a meeting of Army Nike Zeus project officers from sites stretching from Ascension Island in mid-Atlantic, to Kwajalein.

COL. PAUL B. SCHUPPENER smiles broadly as he watches Maj. Gen. August Schomburg pin a silver eagle on his shoulder during promotion ceremonies held in the Commanding General's office last week. Mrs. Schuppener assisted Gen. Schomburg in the promotion. Col. Schuppener is Deputy Assistant Chief of Staff for Research and Development, Army Ordnance Missile Command.

Library Service Includes More Than Finding Books

During National Library Week (April 16-22), the libraries at Redstone Arsenal are participating in the recognition of a "need to read." People, working in missiles and allied sciences, seek specialized knowledge with the same avidity as a ten-year-old perfecting athletic prowess.

At the Ordnance Guided Missile School Library, scientific exhibits are being furnished by the National Science Foundation and the U. S. Atomic Energy Commission.

At the Army Ballistic Missile Agency Technical Documents Library and the Army Rocket and Guided Missile Agency Technical Library, the staff is also preparing displays. The Post Library, where books are of less technical nature on a wider variety of subjects, a week-long open house is planned.

In connection with the ARGMA Library, three Russian translators work at assignments which technicians and scientists find either helpful or intriguing. Three journals are furnished by subscription from Russia. The index of each is translated for the monthly Library Bulletin. From this, requestors choose what they want to read. The translators put the text into English. Works translated by others and circulated in the National Library Index are order when requested.

Two of the men are veterans of 16 years of Army service apiece: SP7 George Hill and Sgr. Joseph H. Gallant. The third man, SP5 Donald Rich, joined the Army in 1957.

fy the pursuit of knowledge, but none have a tougher grind in school than the translators underwent at the U. S. Army Language School with headquarters at the Presidio of Monterey, Calif. The courses are designed to glut the students with a working knowledge of a language in minimum time.

The average student age is under 25. The two sergeants, now assigned here, exceeded the average age.

SP7 Hill, a native of Sterling, Ill., began his pursuit of knowledge in agriculture, receiving his bachelor's degree at Arkansas State.

In the Army his assignments have been along administrative lines, including duties as a sergeant major. He applied for the Russian language course while serving in Japan.

Hill found the school demanding, but he is satisfied with his assignment. Each translation is a challenge, the bulk of them relating to physics.

He was the first member to join the library staff and organized the Translation Unit after studying systems used at other libraries in Washington, D. C. and New York City.

Prior to Sputnik I in 1956, demand for Russian technical translations was light. The Library of Congress published an annual index of articles and translations. In 1959 the service was taken over and covered in more detail by the Office of Technical Services which now circulates bound copies of translated works annually. Of the 80 Russian scientific journals which are translated into English, the ARGMA Technical Library subscribes to 23.

Like SP7 Hill, Sgt. Gallatin likes the challenge of the work. Of the three men he considers his experience at the Presidio the most grueling because he had his wife, Bernice, and their four-year-old daughter, Shelley, with him. To be a family man and a concentrated course, undistilled by time to dally, was tough.

Sgt. Gallant began his career with the idea of pursuing journalism which he studied at the Catholic University in Washington, D. C., and at the University of Wyoming. In June, 1941 this career was cut short when he joined the Army knowing war was imminent.

He was with the 5th Infantry Division in Europe, ending the drive in Czechoslovakia. After World War II he left the Army, only to return when the conflict began in Korea. During his adventures, Sgt. Gallant was decorated with the Silver Star Medal and the Bronze Star with clusters for valor.

Sgt. Gallant says he likes his present assignment particularly, because while meeting a challenge, he is not goaded by deadlines or production. And, it may lead him into a commercial translator job when he leaves the Army. SP7 Hill is considering teaching.

The youngest member of the triumvirate, SP5 Rich, was pursuing a degree in mathematics before he joined the Army early in 1957. Now, he is considering administration and management as

May 1-12. The Drive in Huntsville begins May 8.

"The goal," Col Palsrok said, "is 90 per cent participation so that the Treasury Flag may be flown below the U. S. Flag on post."

Army regulations set a minimum of 65 per cent participation for post, camps, and stations. At present, the participation for combined military and civilian population on post is 42.24 per cent.

Any Agency with 1,000 or more employes which attains 90 per cent participation is entitled to fly the Treasury Flag.

Col. Palsrok's committee consists of Lt. Col. John Bond and Capt. George W. Allen from Redstone Arsenal; Capt. Bruno C. Homeyer, Ordnance Guided Missile School, Dwight J. Locke, Army Ballistic Missile Agency; James L. Webb, Army Ordnance Missile Command; David O. Hayles, Army Rocket and Guided Missile Agency; and Speed Hayes, Marshall Space Flight Center.

Bonds may be acquired for as little as multiple deductions of $6.25. Individuals desiring bigger savings in bonds of $150 denomination or more can deduct as little as $25 per month or pay period.

per cent of all engineering students. "In Russia," he said, "39 per cent of the engineering students are women."

Gen. Hurst also said it will be up to the engineers and scientists to solve the "dilemma of providing for the needs of a rapidly increasing population in the face of diminishing natural resources." "Clearly, more engineers will be needed to meet the challenges of the future," he said.

Gen. Hurst reviewed the growth of technology in the United States, stating that the Federal budget for the current fiscal year includes more money for defense than the entire sum devoted to that purpose from the first shot of the Revolutionary War until 1940.

In further illustrating this rapid growth, Gen. Hurst said it has been estimated "that more than half of all the money that this country has ever spent in research and development in our entire history of nearly 200 years has been spent in just the last ten years."

Much of this work in research and development, he said, has been performed by private industry and universities. They have "met the challenge of greater emphasis on both basic and supporting research by not only meeting their own needs, but by perform-possible fields to pursue if he ever leaves the Army. For him, the challenge of the present is full of interest but he is also looking forward to the possibilities of the future.

SP5 Rich is from Portland, Me., and was working for his degree at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

These men get assignments covering everything from astronomy and meteorology to physical sciences and mathematics.

Christmas cards from Russia have been among the items translated for the scientists at Redstone Arsenal.

ing a major part of the Government's programs also, under contract."

As a result of technological advances, Gen. Hurst said "the need for scientists and engineers to maintain and continue our civilization's advance has never been greater. The standing of engineers and scientists in the community has never been higher. Salaries are increasing along with the increased professional recognition."

Gen. Hurst also warned the students of "the gap which is widening between engineers and scientists and a large part of the American public." He said this "gap is in reality an artificial and realistic division between the humanities and science. The public must strive to increase its understanding of mysteries of science, or risk bewilderment by its swift advance."

In connection with possible future disarmament, Gen. Hurst said that "although approximately one-half of the engineers in the nation work on defense projects, there should be no cause for fear that our present critical shortage of engineers will turn into a sur-

The "April in Paris" dance at the Squirrel Hill Officers Club last Saturday night drew approximately 500 people to dance to the music of the Gene Louis Sextet and to view an authentic French floor show put on by French students from the Ordnance Guided Missile School.

In addition, a trio of American dancers danced their version of the "Can-Can." The dancers were: Miss Joy Sawicki, Miss Lee Seifler and Miss Sylvia Turner.

The Frenchmen sang folk and romantic melodies, inviting the audience to participate in familiar tunes. The chorus consisted of Jean Aubert, Paul Baciuska, Jean Claude Blois, Guy Boirand, Jean Chabrut, Beranard Froidefond, Serge Gey, Bertrand Godineau and Francis Gouella.

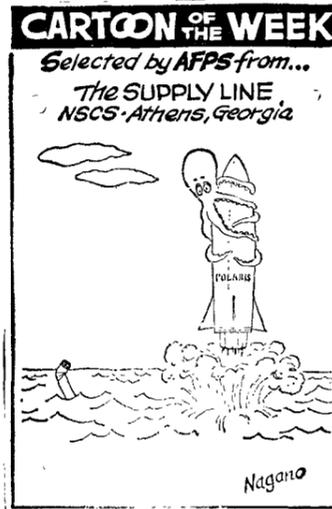

Gouella also sang a solo, "C'est si bon." Mrs. John Bond played the piano, Miss Georgette Graham, the accordion, and CWO DeWitt Mytinger was the conductor.

A Dance Apache was presented by Jean Claude Bois and Serge Gey. The dance was a parody of the familiar version where the woman is flung madly around the floor. The procedure was reversed with the man sailing through the air and across the dance floor.

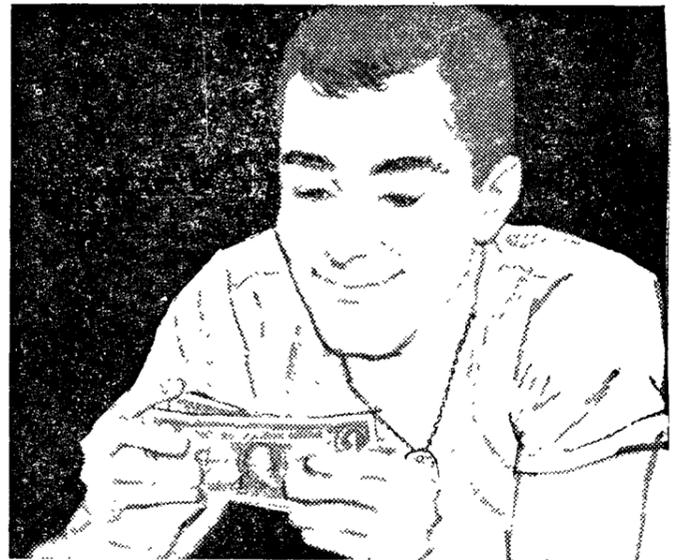

Capt. Donald Becker acted as master of ceremonies for the show. The chairman for the event was Lt. Col. John Bond. The dance was sponsored by officers assigned at Redstone Arsenal.

A specialty act was provided by Mrs. W. T. Cooke when she drew the number for the door prize which went to a captain.

AUSA To Hear Carl Duckett Thursday

Carl E. Duckett, Assistant Chief of Staff for Missile Intelligence at the Army Ordnance Missile Command, will address the Tennessee Valley Chapter of the Association of the U. S. Army Thursday evening.

Duckett, a native of Swannanoa, N. C., attended Danville, Virginia, Technical School, and Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore, Md. During World War II he participated in radar development work at the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Co. He participated in the Normandy landing as a civilian radar advisor. In late 1944, he entered the Army and served in the Pacific Theater of Operations until the end of the war.

He assisted in the establishment of the first radar instrumentation system at White Sands Proving Ground, N. M. and participated in the first V-2 firing there in 1946.

Duckett was recalled to active duty during the Korean War as a Signal Corps officer and served at Ft. Bragg, N. C., Ft. Monmouth, N. J., and White Sands prior to release from active duty in 1953.

He transferred to the Army Ballistic Missile Agency in June 1956, and served as an electronic scientist in the ABMA Signal office. He was named Scientific Advisor in that office in June 1958.

Subject of Duckett's speech at the April meeting of AUSA will be "Science in the Soviet Union." The meeting will be held in the

CHINESE STUDENTS VISIT NASHVILLE

A group of 21 students of the Army of Nationalist China who recently arrived at the U. S. Army Ordnance Guided Missile School were guests of a number of Nashville organizations last Friday on a one-day tour of the Tennessee Capital City.

Led by Lt. Col. Ko-Chun Ho, the ten officers and eleven enlisted men first visited the Nashville Tennessean where the workings of a metropolitan newspaper were explained by Managing Editor Gail Churchill. Afterward the officers were luncheon guests of the newspaper while the enlisted group attended a Kiwanis Club luncheon under the auspices of President Jess Safley and the Nashville Chamber of Commerce.

After a visit to the State Capitol, the Hermitage, and the Parthenon, the Chinese group were guests at a tea given by Chinese students attending Vanderbilt University and Peabody and Scarritt Colleges. Lt. Charles Hendrene, of School Troop Command, was escort officer.

Rohm & Haas Gets $1 Million Contract

Brig. Gen. John G. Zierdt, Commander of the Army Rocket and Guided Missile Agency, today announced award of a contract to Rohm and Haas Company in the amount of $1,025,000.

The agreement is a 12-months continuation of an existing contract for basic research in the field of solid propellants for rocketry. The work will be performed in government-owned, but contractor-operated, facilities at Redstone Arsenal.

Traffic Violators Appear in Court

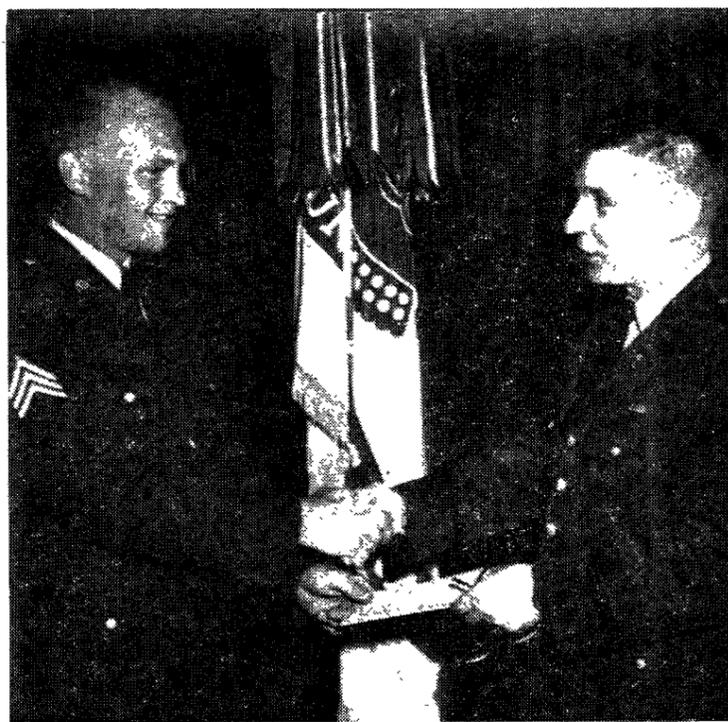

The first session of the U. S. Commissioner's Court was held Wednesday, Apr. 12, in the Redstone Arsenal Court Room.

Twenty-seven traffic violators were slated to appear during the first and second sessions of the court.

Col. Thomas W. Cooke, Redstone Arsenal Commander, announced that over 50,000 vehicles trips are made on post each day. Ten thousand vehicles enter and leave the gates of the Arsenal during peak hours. "Therefore," he said, "it is apparent that due to the crowded conditions of the roads, unsafe driving practices cannot be tolerated."

"To provide a uniform set of penalties for serious violators, repeaters, and for those who cause accidents, the U. S. Commissioner's Court was established. Minor violators will continue to be handled administratively."

He pointed out that violations covered by the Alabama Code are honored by Federal Statute. This applies to civilian drivers of both civilian and government vehicles. Any driver who commits a major violation will be referred to the

Are you bored? Nothing to do? There is a simple solution for your problem. Come to the Service Club and enjoy yourself. We have a wide variety of programs this week, so check this list and select your preferences, note the time and date, and drop by to join us. We will be most happy to see you.

Wednesday night, April 19, Ray Pisan will begin a new series of dance classes here in the main lounge at 1930 hours. Classes for this series will be jitterbug, rumba, and tango. Come in time to get your name on the list, as the list closes at 25 members.

On Thursday, the shutter club will meet at 1900 hours in the small lounge. The post-wide table tennis tournament also begins on Thursday at 1900 hours. This one should really be interesting whether you are participating or just watching.

Friday night will see the finals of the tournament, beginning at 1900 hours.

TV features will begin at 1800 hours on Saturday night followed by Bridge Night, which will feature a bridge contest to be held at 1900 hours. I urge all bridge players to drop by, as we are sure to have some excellent games.

Sunday morning coffee call will be held at 0930 hours. Later in the day at 1330 hours, there will be a much requested shuffleboard contest. Our weekly record dance will begin on Sunday night at 1900 hours.

The Spring Band Concert will begin on Monday night at 2000 hours, with Mr. Mytinger directing the 55th Army Band. This is a "must" for all music lovers. That's April 24th, remember, at 2000 hours.

Tuesday evening at 1930 hours, the bridge club will hold its regular meeting in the small lounge.

The record of your corps is marked by devotion to duty and adherence to the highest professional standards in contributing to the effectiveness of the Army and the well-being of its individual members.

FUTURE

Gene Louis will arrive at the Service Club on the 27th to play for an April Showers dance, so make advance plans to come by. There will be a chess contest coming up soon, too, so all of you chess players be on the look-out for that.

And by all means, keep in mind Melody Square, a musical program of varied facets. There will be Barbershop groups, choruses, and no doubt individual specialty acts. This is still in the planning stages, but right now it looks as if it may work into an extremely enjoyable program that you won't want to miss. This will be on the 29th of this month, so circle the date on your calendar and plan to attend. Don't forget the name, Melody Square.

Cooke (right), Commander, Redstone Arsenal, for the runner-up prize in the SIAM (Safety Is a Must) name the cartoon contest for military personnel conducted last month. Maj. Metzger's caption, "Present Look—Blind Future" was very applicable to the cartoon which depicted a much distracted driver wheeling around a street corner with eyes and mind off the road and on a young lady halted on the curb. Maj. Metzger commented "Although I don't smoke, I am happy to win this very attractive lighter in a safety contest."

UNIT CREST COLLECTED

A unit crest collection started by two Fort Benning officers has grown to approximately 500, but has slowed down temporarily due to exhaustion of sources.

Lts. Lawrence L. Anderson of Denver, Colo., and Lawrence C. Bruscas of Seaside, Cal., assigned to 52nd Co., 5th Bn., Student Brigade, began the collection with only 15 crests, but with the help of officer candidates of the company enlarged to its present size. They hope to have every Infantry crest from company to division level.

When the collection is complete, plans are to place it in the Officer Candidate School Hall of Fame along with a plaque listing contributors.

Any person who wishes to contribute a crest may send it to the Fort Benning officers.

Footwork, Coordination Are Basic to Bowling

Second in a series on bowling
By Bob Chase

(Bowling representative for the Jos. Schlitz Brewing Company, former Far East Armed Forces bowling champion and 1960 runner-up in the Bowling Proprietors Association of America match game championships).

Footwork and coordination are basic to success in bowling and should receive the greatest attention as you work toward a better bowling average. My Schlitz Wholesalers teammates and I, as with all professional bowlers, are more concerned with this phase of our games than with any other. A like amount of concentration on coordination will improve your game.

When footwork and coordination are missing, accuracy and strength of ball delivery are poor. To be a successful bowler you must know the four-step approach thoroughly and practice it regularly.

The stance which precedes this approach is a relaxed but firm one. The body is erect, not stiff, but neither is there any bend at the waist. The ball is held just above waist high and approximately 4 to 6 inches away from the body. The hand is underneath the ball. The position should be relaxed and balanced. The bowler should not crouch or bend. This is the easiest position from which to start the step-off in a push-away motion.

Assuming that you are right handed, your first step will be with the right foot. It is at this point that a very slight forward bend at the waist is permissible, providing it is not exaggerated. The slight bend at the waist will balance the body in the first step as forward motion is begun. The knees should not bend and allow the body to assume a crouching position. The erect body has more power to put into the delivery.

Being able to top a team of good bowlers such as the Schlitz Wholesalers, which finished sixth in the nation last year, calls for perfection in this start. You must work for the same perfection, for any error will catch up with you in the fourth and final step and harm your delivery. Throughout the approach there should be a natural, walking flow of movement with no hesitation after any step nor any hint of a running motion.

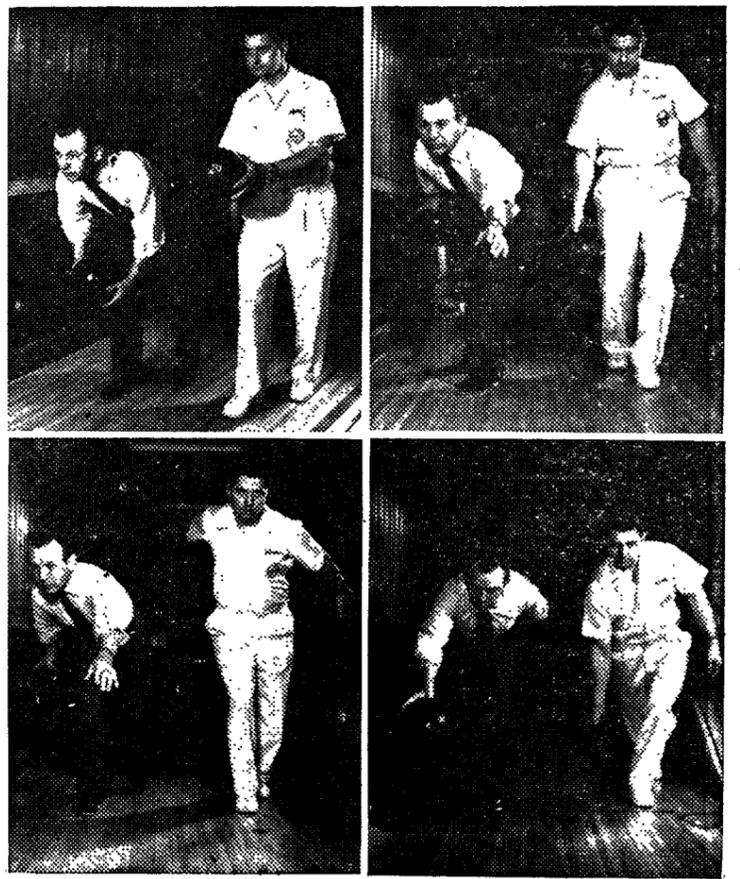

Now for the second step. Move the left foot forward and at the same time let the arm begin to straighten. It should straighten all the way. Don't try to double the elbow. Loss of coordination will result and accuracy will be lost. The very slight forward bend at the waist will allow for the start of a straight pendulum motion of the arm swing. The ball should be moving to the rear approximately in line with the right leg. The wrong movement here will put the ball farther back than it should be.

Third step coming up. The right leg again comes forward with the body still in a firm, slightly forward bending position. The ball now approaches the height of the backswing. Here is where the first step pays off. If you have done it correctly the ball will be in this position. If you have done it incorrectly the ball will be still moving backward or beginning to move forward. This is an uncoordinated delivery.

This brings us to the final step and the delivery. This is the only part of the approach in which it is desirable to change from the original position of the body and its erect stance. The bending should be done with the left knee and not with the waist. Bending at the knee allows a solid footing, a firmer arm swing and better directional control. The body is much stronger in this position, allowing the arm to control the speed of delivery much more effectively and allowing turn or spin to be applied to the ball.

TIP TO ADVANCED BOWLERS: When bowling on a slick or fast lane, start the ball rolling as quickly as possible. The more turn or spin applied, the more the ball will "skate." A rolling ball is much more effective.

The Judge Advocate Advises

Writing checks is a modern convenience that many people abuse through carelessness and failing to understand the system used by most banks. The case of the returned check can easily be brought about through a misunderstanding as to when credits and debits are posted to an account.

Most banks use a system referred to as "delayed posting." Under this system, checks and deposits are posted to an account on the next business day following their presentment or receipt at the bank. These entries are predated, however, to correspond to the actual date upon which the check was presented or the deposit received.

Therefore, if a check is written with the belief that a forthcoming deposit will provide sufficient funds for payment, that deposit must reach the bank on the same business day that the check does.

It would perhaps be more correct to say that the deposit must reach a particular branch of the bank in which you maintain your account on the same business day that the check does. A deposit made to your bank at a branch other than the one where your account is located will ordinarily not be posted to your account until the second business day following its receipt.

The reason for this delay is that the deposit will be routed through the bank's main branch before reaching your bank. You can avoid this result by notifying the teller at the time of making the deposit where your account is located and he will route your deposit directly to the correct branch.

In addition to the poorly timed deposit, some people unwittingly overdraw their account by incurring service charges. A schedule of service charges may be obtained at your bank and knowledge of its contents will insure that you maintain an appropriate balance to avoid service charges, or at least are aware of when they will be incurred and to what extent.

Some checking accounts have been overdrawn through a misunderstanding of the conditionally accepted deposit. This situation usually arises when a deposit is made by a check drawn upon an out-of-town bank. Not being able to verify immediately whether or not the check will be honored, the bank will accept the deposit on the condition that none of the funds will be drawn upon until the check deposited clears the bank on which it was drawn.

Usually your bank will tell you how long you must wait before you are entitled to write checks upon your conditionally accepted deposit. These instructions should be followed faithfully. Any check written upon such a deposit prior to the expiration of the waiting period requested by your bank must be with the bank's authori-

A SHARPER SWORD AND A STRONGER SHIELD—The readiness of Army forces around the world to meet and throw back aggression is visible evidence of a firm United States foreign policy, as well as a critical component of our national security. DA Pam 355-200-5.

BUY U.S. SAVING BONDS on the payroll savings plans, it's effective. For the BIG things in your future, you'll need substantial sums—for buying a home, educating youngsters, retirement, and other long range goals.

The person who knows when a check will reduce and a deposit increase his account balance, is aware of when and to what extent service charges are being incurred, and who cooperates with his bank by adhering to its instructions, needs have little concern about overdrawing an account through a misunderstanding. Discuss your checking account with your banker and be sure you keep necessary records so that you always know your correct balance.
