REDSTONE ARSENAL, HUNTSVILLE, ALABAMA

MAY 16, 1962

WAITING—Elizabeth Poole and Beverly Lanza, two pretty Army Ordnance Missile Command employes, hold the pentadomes in place as they await Armed Forces Day Saturday. It's a pretty big job for the two lovely misses as each of the bubbles is 100 feet in diameter scaled down by trick photography. The bubbles are actually held up by air pumped inside. They will house Army missile exhibits on Saturday.

Army Relief Funds Start Annual Drive

The joint fund-raising drive held annually for the Army Emergency Relief (AER) and the Army Relief Society (ARS) got underway at Redstone Arsenal Tuesday.

An Army-wide goal of $600,000 has been established for these benevolent organizations. During 1961 the AER disbursed approximately $4,250,000 in loans and grants to some 34,000 members of the Army and their families. During the year, the ARS dispensed about $145,000 to 1,300 widows or orphans of Regular Army personnel.

Gen. G. H. Decker, U. S. Army Chief of Staff, has pointed out that in the past, the AER and ARS have rendered untold services to Army members who, at one time or another, have been faced with emergencies beyond their ability to meet. In times of distress, he said, these organizations can be counted on for timely and effective assistance through either an Army commander or through the Director of AER whenever it is considered the morale and well-being of the Army would be served.

Inflated Domes to House Missile Display Saturday

Army missilemen have just completed blowing two of the world's largest bubbles as they prepare to entertain an estimated 50,000 visitors on Armed Forces Day Saturday.

John R. Russell and a crew of technicians from the Army Ordnance Missile Support Agency put on a show of their own as they erected two air supported pentadomes, some of the world's largest inflatable structures.

The domes — really giant hemispheres — each contain over 7,800 feet of floor space within their 100 foot diameter interiors. They will house Army missile displays as well as those of Army missile contractors when Redstone Arsenal holds its annual open house on Armed Forces Day.

Visitors will be able to enter the domes and view the displays from 12:30 p.m. through 4:30 p.m. on the 19th. They will enter and leave through revolving doors which help to maintain the constant interior air pressure required to support the 3,600 pound weight of the dome's nylon-vinyl. (See DOMES on Page 3)

Presidential Assistant To Be Armed Forces Day Speaker at AUSA Dinner

President Kennedy's administrative assistant for congressional liaison will be the principal speaker at annual Armed Forces Day observances Friday.

Henry Hall Wilson Jr. will address the annual banquet of the Tennessee Valley Chapter of the Association of the United States Army.

Joseph Wiggins, president of the local chapter, said the AUSA had scheduled a reception beginning at 6:30 p.m. with dinner to follow. (See PRESIDENTIAL on Page 2)

Visitors to Participate In Countdown of Missile

Parachute Jumps, Parade, and Exhibits Are on AFD Program

Visitors at the Army's Armed Forces Day show on Redstone Arsenal Saturday will be able to sit in on the actual countdown of an Army missile.

In addition to a parachute jump, parade, exhibits, and other events planned for the public, visitors in the blockhouse will be able to listen to the progress of the countdown for a Redstone missile statically fired in the vertical test facility.

Shuttle buses will run to the blockhouse after firing demonstrations in the field where lucky youngsters push the buttons to shoot Army missiles. At the blockhouse, Armed Forces Day visitors will hear a countdown similar to the one used at Cape Canaveral, where the Army's Pershing missile is test fired.

Although no missile will be harnessed in the vertical test facility, visitors will be able to see the structure, capable of holding missiles that develop more than one million pounds of thrust.

The tour will include an explanation of the instruments in the blockhouse and how they operate during the countdown for a static firing.

The blockhouse tour will come after each live missile demonstration. Missile firings are scheduled for 1 p.m., 1:45 p.m., 3:30 p.m. (See VISITORS on Page 2)

BIRTHDAY MESSAGE—

TO THE MEMBERS OF THE ARMY ORDNANCE CORPS

On behalf of all members of the Army, I extend congratulations and best wishes to the members of the Army Ordnance Corps on its 150th anniversary.

From the muzzle loading rifle to the M-14, from the smooth bore cannon to the Pershing missile, and from our first armored truck that saw service on the Mexican Border in 1916 to today's main battle tank, the Ordnance Corps has developed, tested and procured the weapons that the American soldier has employed successfully in war. In this tremendous and responsible job, your Corps has teamed with the great inventive and productive capacity of American industry to keep pace with the rapid advances in science and technology that have application to the battlefield.

Today, the Army's mission extends from assistance to our allies in operations against guerrilla bands that threaten their security to preparation for nuclear warfare, should this necessity befall us. Thus, the role of the Ordnance soldier is an ever challenging and growing one. I welcome this opportunity to express, on behalf of the entire Army, the confidence that you will meet this challenge with the professional skill and dedication to duty that mark your history and that Army items of ordnance will continue to be unsurpassed.

Other activities will begin at 10 a.m. in downtown Huntsville when the annual Armed Forces Day parade starts.

More than a dozen high school bands are expected to participate as are marching troops, the 55th Army Band at Redstone, and representatives of all the Armed Services.

Many of the missiles from Redstone Arsenal also will be in the parade.

At Redstone Arsenal, open house begins at 12:30 p.m. and will continue until 4:30 p.m.

In addition to rocket firings, the parachute jump, and a sky-dive by two men of the 20th Special Forces Group of the Alabama National Guard, there will be hundreds of displays on exhibit.

These will be housed in two of the world's largest air supported domes, part of a five-part structure called a pentadome.

Special parking areas have been established on the Arsenal for the expected 50,000 visitors during open house. Military policemen will be on duty to direct visitors to the parking areas. From these areas, buses will run shuttle service to the various events as they are scheduled.

Gen. McMorrow Welcomes Visitors

It is a genuine pleasure to welcome you to Redstone Arsenal. We of the U. S. Army Ordnance Missile Command are proud to have you citizens who are our real bosses inspect certain of our facilities and witness results of some of our efforts.

The major portion of our mission is to manage the development of missiles and rockets which are or will become the major part of the Army's modern arsenal of rugged, punch-packed weapons.

We must assure that your fighting forces have missile and rocket weapon systems that are effective, reliable, simple and economical to produce in order to provide the security you need in return for your investment.

Our job is difficult. We operate in an area where scientific breakthroughs occur day to day.

We are pleased for you to have the opportunity to pass judgment on how well we are doing our part to secure the future of America.

If we had a motto it would be: A good weapon in the soldier's hand today . . . a better one on the way.

canvas walls.

Air to inflate the domes is supplied by blowers mounted on the outside. One blower remains in operation constantly.

Although the domes are but one of the attractions planned in the day's events which will also include parachute jumps, Army rocket firings and a look at the Marshall Space Flight Center's immense eight engine Saturn space booster, they caused an unusual after effect for Russell and his crew.

The glaring white surface of the domes reflecting the sun's rays gave all of them sunburns.

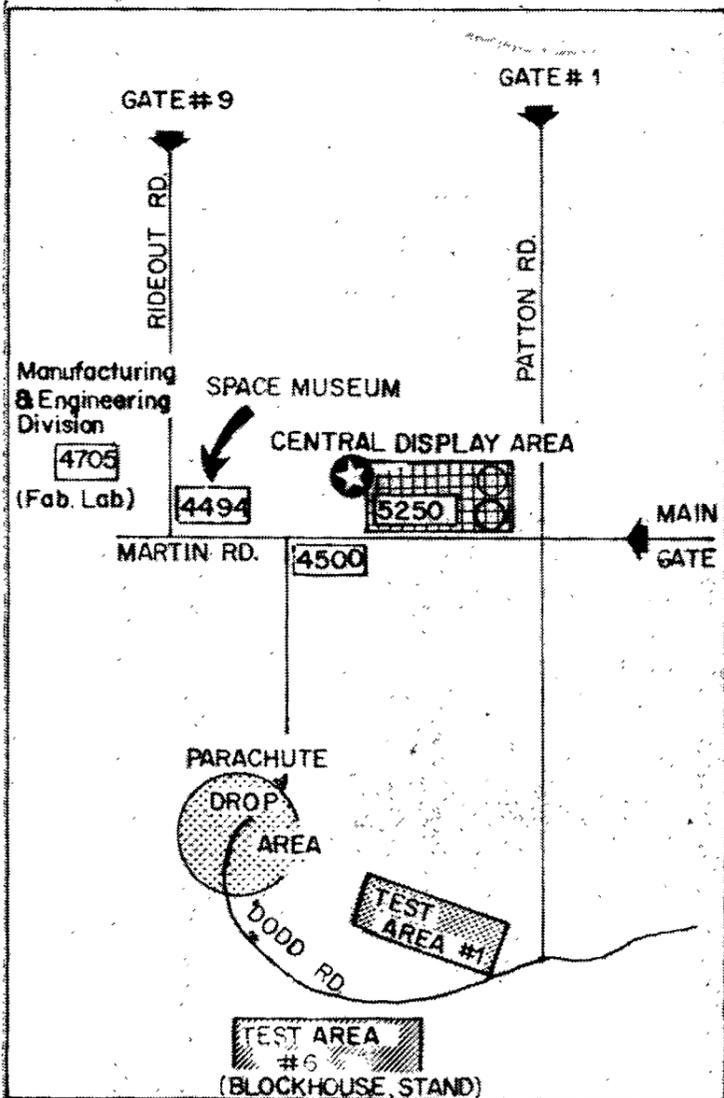

Only one slight hitch developed as the men erected the massive structures. Rain that fell just prior to inflation had to be swept off. Russell figured his crew had to get 1,000 gallons of water off the fabric before inflation began.

Brig. Gen. John G. Zierdt, Deputy Commanding General, Guided Missiles, AOMC, said all test objectives were met.

Zeus streaked from its launcher and roared over the desert to intercept the target which was simulated by tape recorded information fed into the missile system's target intercept computer.

Technical Library Serves Co-Ops

By Lucile D. Ridings

Co-op students at Redstone Arsenal find the Technical Library a vital part of their continuing education and experience. Utilization of scientific and technical information accelerates their work and reduces duplication of effort.

Science and engineering Co-op students, after their freshman year, attend college for three months and work at home in their major field for three months, alternately, through their junior year; then they return to school to complete their Bachelor of Science degree. Upon graduation they are given the opportunity to return to home and to continue their professional development as scientists and engineers.

James Clark, reference librarian; in cooperation with Russell Cooper, Coordinator, Cooperative Education, AOMC; has organized, and conducts, orientation tours of the library and explains the resources and services that are available.

The co-op students have access to the same information treasures, and under the same conditions, that are offered the full-fledged scientists and engineers. Knowledge gained from library sources is a necessary part of understanding and performing the jobs to which they are assigned. The Technical Library is vital to the continuing education and experience provided by the Cooperative Education Program.

The Technical Library is operated by the Research and Development, Scientific Information Center and is controlled by a Library Board composed of members from the Army Ordnance Missile Command and the Marshall Space

Flight Center.

It serves all personnel connected with agencies and organizations on the arsenal. The library is rapidly expanding its resources to meet the needs of new, as well as old, disciplines related to missiles, space, and other official fields of interest to its patrons.

Subject coverage is both broad and deep, foreign and domestic. Types of materials run the gamut —books, periodicals, reports, pamphlets, films, slides, micro-

The game wasn't two innings old when three errors in a row provided Signal Det. with a 5 run lead that was never headed. The Medical Det. must have loosened up, for they defeated 3rd ETC the next evening by 14-3.

There is still a lot of bleacher room for fans, so come out Mondays-Tuesdays and Thursdays and help bring your favorite a victory. Facilities are available at the game, pop for the kiddies, beer for the Pop.

The Sports Car Buffs

By Pat Patterson

This week we must travel back to May 5th for our event coverage, as the Bon Huer Car Club of Florence held their monthly meeting, which as usual was preceded by a short rally.

For the first time the event was organized by some members of the club from Huntsville. John Amoroso and Dick Bauman (both OGMS) put their heads together and came up with a 31 mile, 73 minute Hare and Hound event, which they hoped would get all of the eight starters to the finish control.

This, however was not to be as each car proceeded to get lost at one point or another and only three cars were able to reach the finish control. Percentage wise the number of finishers was higher than it has been in quite a while at these pre-meeting rallies. However it still maintains the tradition of the club of having rallies so simple that most participants do get lost.

This may sound contradictory but it is funny that rally crews who can, and do compete in some of the toughest events in the area, and finish, run these short, simple type affairs and always wind up lost.

Nevertheless it was a good event and the finish positions went like this. In First was the Corvette of A. and Jean Lynch followed not too closely by the MGA of this writer and Bill McClain while the third finishing car was the TR-3 of Dr. and Mrs. Hardiman.

Meeting Follows Rally

At the meeting which followed the rally, a new secretary, in the person of Martha Anne Hardiman, was elected to fill the vacancy caused by Lue Thorn's returning home for the summer season. The future TVR-SCCA races were discussed and some movies of various sports car events were shown by Dr. Hardiman.

Coming up this week is the meeting of T. A. C. tomorrow night at Clark Steadmans with dinner at 6:30 and business at 7:30. Dues are due and every member should try to make this important meeting.

This coming Sunday, the 20th, T. A. C. will hold a Gymkhana at Parkway City with John Schlosser as Gymkhana-master. John assures me that this event will present a real challenge to all the competitors. It should prove a welcome change from the fast slalom type events that have been predominant in the area for the last couple of months.

Races Coming Up

The next event that is firm on the schedule is a weekend of racing sponsored by the Tennessee Valley Region, SCCA. June 2nd and 3rd are the dates and the old

OGMS Transfer To CONARC Is Conference Topic

Financial, administrative and supply procedures for transfer of the Army Ordnance Guided Missile School here to the jurisdiction of the Continental Army Command were worked out at a series of conferences that ended Friday.

Col. William J. Macpherson, OGMS commandant, and his staff met with representatives of the Third Army headquarters from Atlanta to chart methods for the changes required under the current reorganization of the Army's command structure.

Lt. Col. Warren H. Stutler, Lt. Col. William R. Hambrick, Maj. Robert L. Parker of Third Army

OGMS SERGEANT NAMED DISTRICT COMMANDER, DAV

SFC George A. Rauh of the Signal Detachment, OGMS, was elected First District Commander of the Alabama Disabled American Veterans at a district meeting held in Huntsville May 8.

A veteran of nineteen years active duty, Sgt. Rauh served with the famous 45th Infantry (Thunderbird) Division in Europe during World War II, where he was wounded three times while participating in four beach landings.

Active in DAV since July, 1961, Rauh was elected junior vice commander of Huntsville Chapter 26 in January. He is active in the Boy Scout Program and serves as advisor to Redstone Arsenal Troop 308. His interest in young people comes naturally. He is the father of four children. He and Mrs. Rauh reside at 611 Austin Drive, Huntsville.

Elected to serve with Rauh, were Benton S. Fusch of Athens Chapter 51, and Solon B. James of Huntsville Chapter 26. These men will serve as district senior vice commander, and district adjutant respectively.

Courtland Airbase is the location.

Things are shaping up nicely and a full weekend of exciting sports car racing is in store for those who venture out Courtland way that weekend.

Don't miss these first races of the year here in North Alabama. This wraps it up for another week and a reminder here that you should save your racing for the 2nd and 3rd at Courtland and not use the public roads, for when you do you are putting your life, and our reputation at stake. Is it worth it?

operations, administration and logistic offices attended the conference. Under the reorganization, the Missile School is associated with W. H. Smith, Comptroller for the 30 service schools in a nation-wide Third Army area which covers six southeastern states.

Be the first on your block.

Most cars are as uncontroversial as mashed potatoes. Not this Volkswagen Station Wagon. People either love it or hate it.

How do you feel about its boxy body? Its flat roof? Its bus-like shape? Do you know these allow it to carry more than the biggest conventional station wagon? And still be 4 feet shorter? And miles easier to park?

Does it seem odd that the VW is the only wagon with 23 windows and a sun-roof? Do you know what a tremendous view this gives you? That you see more sky and skyline than in any other car, except a convertible with the top down?

Why can you order a VW wagon with seats that include a center aisle? Do you know that this lets you walk straight back to the kids from the front seat? In case they cry or quarrel or get the million ills that kids are heir to?

Does the Volkswagen Station Wagon seem such a strange automobile to you now?

Or does it make a busload of sense?

An art exhibit and a one-act comedy were highlights of the Redstone Arsenal Officers Wives Club Luncheon, Tuesday, May 8, at the Squirrel Hill Officers Club.

Approximately 200 women attended the event at which officers-elect were announced by Mrs. S. C. Holmes, Wives Club president. Installation will not take place until June.

Mrs. George E. Pickett will be the president during the coming year; Others are: Mrs. C. R. Graham, vice president; Mrs. Ben Register, recording secretary; Mrs. R. N. Grove, corresponding secretary; and Mrs. V. J. Laver, treasurer. LAELIA CATTLEYE "STONEHOUSE"—That's the unusual name of the unusual orchid plant that produced seven blossoms at once for Mrs. Glenn Crane at Redstone Arsenal. Col. Crane, who shares his wife's interest in orchids, is the Army's Project Manager for the Nike Hercules anti-missile missile system. The exotic blooms have orchid centers and white petals untouched by any other color. Mrs. Crane began raising orchids more than six years ago at Santa Monica, Calif., and moved her collection cross country by car when her husband was assigned to duty at the Army Ordnance Missile Command headquarters.

Science Students to Show Prize Winning Exhibits

North Alabama students will have their prize winning science exhibits on display at the home of the Army missiles during the Armed Forces Day Open House Saturday, May 19.

This year for the first time, the science students will participate and exhibit their projects in the main display area side by side with missiles and space age displays arranged by the Army Ordnance Missile Command and Army Ordnance Guided Missile School.

Student projects will be grouped in one of the huge air inflated "pentadomes" set up in the main display area at Redstone Arsenal for the once a year open house.

The Redstone-Tennessee Valley

Chapter of the Armed Forces Communications and Electronics Assn. will judge high school level student exhibits in the morning and award prizes during the afternoon.

Redstone will open its gates to the public at 12:30 p.m. following Huntsville's annual Armed Forces Day parade. The student exhibits are but one of the features of the day's activities which will also include Army rocket firings, parachute jumps and a look at the Marshall Space Flight Center's massive Saturn space booster.

Boaz will have the largest representation in the student exhibits, with four entries.

Gerald McDowell, Bobby Lackey and R. E. (Bobby) Bain Jr., juniors in Boaz High School, will have exhibits, as will Randall Moore and Don Jones, freshmen at Snead Junior College.

Other students include:

Huntsville: Howard Flank, Russell Blackledge and John Thornton of Huntsville High.

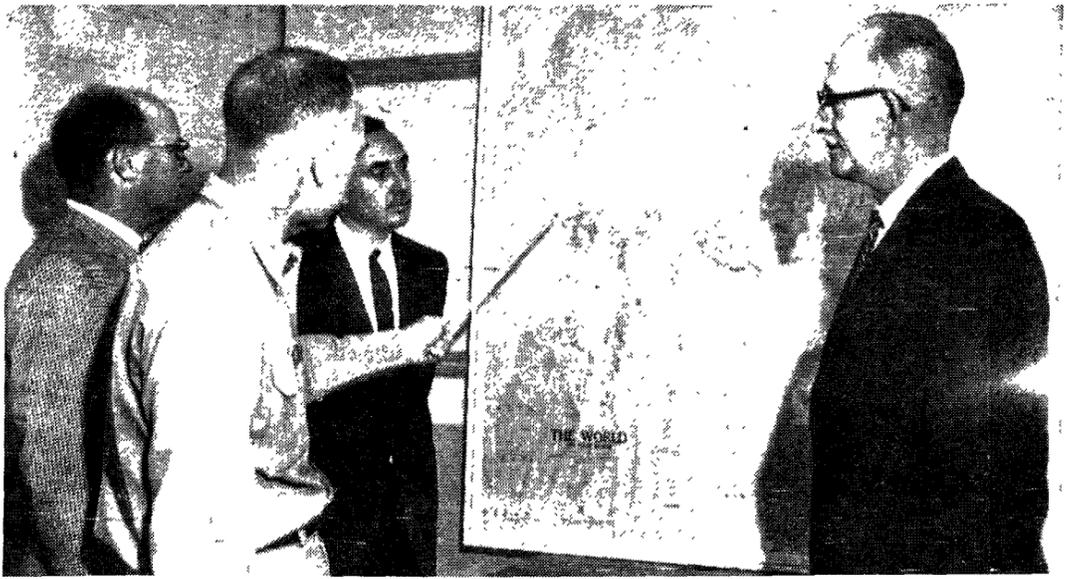

Stevenson: Collen Gorce, James A. Thorne and Cleo Matthews of Stevenson High School.

Albertville: Hal Pruett and Ken Musick of Albertville Junior High School.

Athens: Marilyn K. White of Athens High School.

Somerville: Hugh W. Greene of Morgan County High School, Hartsville.

The student projects include a homemade wind tunnel, a miniature model test rocket, a display of thermal radiation communication with heat waves, a display on rocket liquid and solid fuels, another on electromagnetic induction and one on air currents and their effect on rockets.

TEAM TO CIRCLE GLOBE—Four men from the Army Ordnance Missile Command, an advance introductory team for new missile equipment, will spend 40 days visiting the major overseas commands scheduled to receive new missile equipment. The team will acquaint commanders and their staff with changes and new advances on the equipment scheduled for delivery within the year, and will provide commanders and operational personnel with timely information so that internal plans for receipt of the equipment may be completed in advance. Lt. Col. C. A. Boterf (with pointer) is in charge of the group. He is executive officer of the Field Service Directorate's Maintenance Division. Others are (left to right) Marion Gibson of the Surface to Air Missile Division, Research and Development Directorate; Seymour Gordon, Maintenance Division, Field Service; and Orville W. Cook, Supply Management, Field Service.

"YOU ALWAYS DO BETTER DOWNTOWN!"

Downtown Huntsville

ONE, TWO, THREE—This three photo sequence catches inflation of one of two giant pentadomes erected at Redstone Arsenal to house Army missile exhibits for the annual Armed Forces Day Open House. It takes about 20 minutes to inflate the huge structures. Blowers run constantly to keep them up while in use.

Gen. Hurst Speaks in Texas—

Close Collaboration Called For in Missile Output

The top manager for the Army's ballistic missile programs described the "Mastery of Missiles Management" to members of the American Ordnance Association at El Paso, Texas, Thursday night.

Brig. Gen. Richard M. Hurst, Deputy Commanding General, Ballistic Missiles, Army Ordnance Missile Command, addressed members of the AOA's Missiles and Astronautics Division at a dinner in the Hilton Hotel.

"Management is a job accomplished by a triumvirate of Government, Science, and Industry," Gen. Hurst told AOA members.

"Each has its vital role in the accomplishment of the management mission. The emphasis in recent years has shifted to industry and the manufacturer must carry a major burden of responsibility in fielding a military weapon.

"In the rush of business, the producer sometimes tends to forget the overall requirements of a missile system and thinks only in terms of research and development and production," he said.

"An alert industry will be interested in the needs of the military from initial conception to final fielding of the weapon," Gen.

Hurst said. "The military, in turn, must exercise good management by providing clear guidance for industry to follow."

Gen. Hurst also discussed the M-72 anti-tank rocket's development program and how more than three million dollars were clipped from the program by good value analysis.

"The story of the LAW, as it is nicknamed, is proof that Americans can design a better weapon that can be turned out by our industrial capacity at a better price," Gen. Hurst said.

"The quality of industrial management is a most significant factor in determining the successful completion of a missile program."

Men Are 'on' Backstage To Produce Smooth Show

Public Sees End Result of Efforts Behind the Scenes

Men to move air, others to man five boats, and still more to re-route electrical power join those with more usual assignments to make sure that Redstone Arsenal's Armed Forces Day program goes off without a hitch Saturday.

Col. T. W. Cooke, Commander of the Army Missile Support Agency said: "Several hundred individuals will have a part in helping the Army put its best foot forward for an estimated 50,000 visitors at the once a year open house."

Chances are the average visitor won't see many of the behind the scenes crew most from AOMSA due to man their stations well before the Arsenal gates open at 12:30 p.m.

It will take 90 men, for example, just to move the visitors around. They'll be operating the buses shuttling from the Army Ordnance Missile Command headquarters building and main display area to the rocket firing ranges, missile test stands and Marshall Space

Flight Center.

Earlier in the day, many of the same men will have moved troops and Army missiles off the Arsenal to participate in the 10 A.M. parade in downtown Huntsville and then return them to the Arsenal.

Seventy military police — most equipped with short wave radios — will be coordinating traffic movement on the Arsenal and parking arrangements for visitors.

Medical personnel from Redstone Army Hospital will have field aid stations in all the major display and tour areas with radio equipped ambulances spotted at key points around the 40,000 acre arsenal.

Other highly trained personnel will be on standby at the Post Hospital.

The Army wants its Open House to run like clockwork until the last visitors depart at 4:30 p.m. Extensive use will be made of short wave radio links. MP's in the parking lots will have walkie talkies, others will wear helmets with short wave radios built in.

Other unusual communications links include ground to air nets to insure close coordination between ground personnel, pilots and paratroopers who will make the mass parachute jump scheduled for 2:30 p.m.

Just keeping things on time has required extensive preparation for the men on the Arsenal's rocket ranges who will be conducting missile firings at 1, 1:45, 3:30 and 4:15 P.M. The rocket firings are sandwiched around the mass parachute. One hundred and fifty jumpers will be landing on the rocket range and must be cleared before the next round of firings.

Fifty soldiers will be serving as tour guides. More than 20 young ladies have been special trained to serve as hostesses in information booths. Dozens of other members of the Army's missile team at Redstone will be operating displays and missiles or otherwise participating in the day's activities.

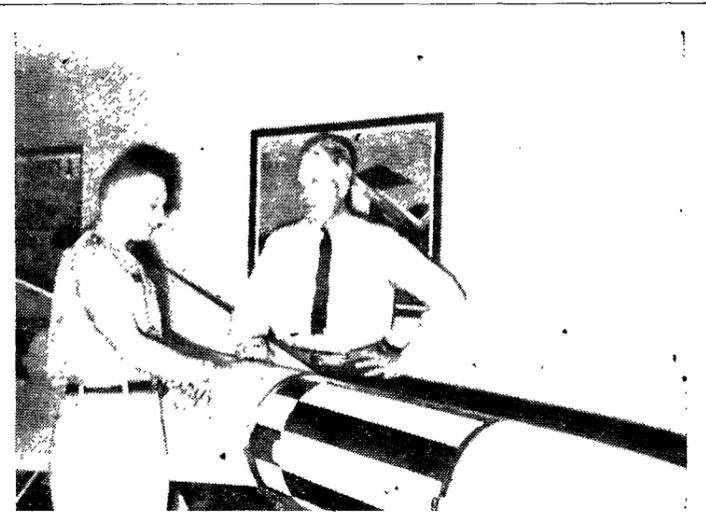

Post engineer personnel will be busy switching power lines to kill current on those in the drop area during the parachute jump or re-route service on lines bordering the field near the main display area where two sky divers are parachuting at 3:30 p.m.

The five boats will be part of extensive safety precautions taken for the parachute jump. The boats and their crews will be spotted on an arm of the Tennessee River near the jump just in case stray winds blow some of the paratroopers over the water.

The men with the primary responsibility of moving air will be keeping a close eye on the massive blowers that run constantly inflating the two 100 foot diameter air supported structures which will house exhibits in the main display area.

The Armed Forces Day activities will go on rain or shine, although high ground winds, a low cloud ceiling or heavy rain could ground the parachutists.

With open house arrangements all but complete at Redstone, the hundreds of persons involved are all carefully watching the one man with the final word—the weather man.

Junior Missileers to Put Fire in Tail of Rocket

A few Missile Age youngsters will get a chance to conduct a countdown and fire an Army missile at the Armed Forces Day show on Redstone Arsenal, Saturday, May 19.

Junior-sized missileers will put fire in the tail of four rocket motors mounted in a static position in test bays, and will start four rocket-propelled sleds on a high speed run up an inclined ramp and over the Arsenal test range.

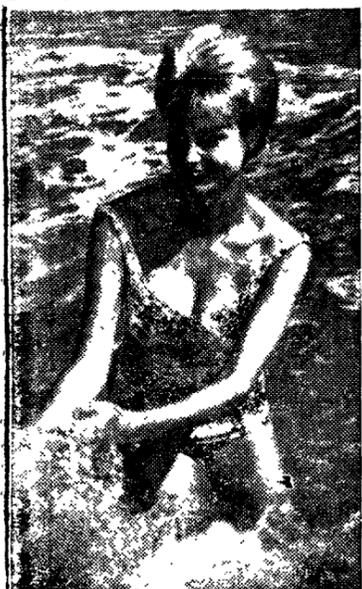

The eight lucky children who start the firing sequence will be chosen at random from among thousands of spectators watching the demonstration. The firing button will be mounted on a console approximately four feet square.

When junior pushes the button, the sequential timer on the console will start lights flashing for the countdown to fire the missile.

A graph will record the thrust developed by the missile's engine when it ignites and burns. The child who conducts the test will get the thrust graph as a souvenir of the day he fired an Army missile.

The firings will highlight the Test and Evaluation Laboratory's demonstration of the power and accuracy of Army missiles. An added feature of the program will be the firing of an SS-11 wire-guided anti-tank missile from a HU-1B turbo-jet helicopter. A trained crew will fire the missile at an Armored target.

The first demonstration in the gala Armed Forces Day show will take place on the test range on Patton Rd. at 1 p.m. Three other rocket firing demonstrations will Water, a good conductor of electricity, provides an ideal setting for this lovely Teuton. She left the world of electrical engineering, which she was studying, to win the title of Miss Universe in 1961.

Mauler Research Contract Goes To Pomona Firm

General Dynamics Pomona, a division of General Dynamics Corp., will continue research and development work on the Mauler air defense missile system under a $7,779,600 contract awarded last Wednesday, according to an Army Ordnance Missile Command spokesman.

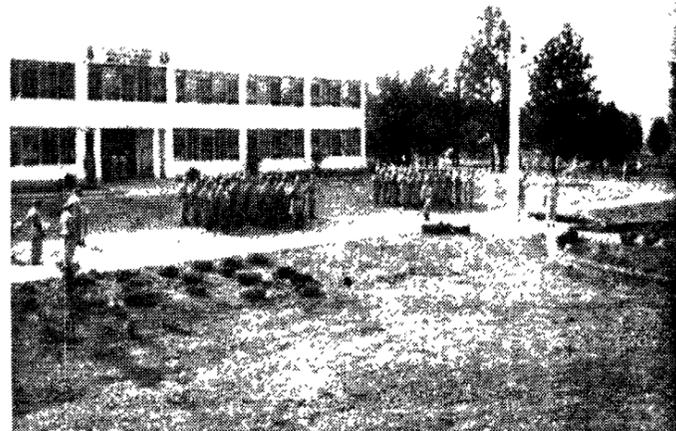

The work will be performed at the corporation's Pomona, Calif. facility.

The Mauler is designed to travel with fast-moving Army units on the battlefield, and protect them against high performance tactical aircraft and short range missiles and rockets.

The Los Angeles Ordnance District administers the contract.

"Where is the balance of your rifle?"

"This is all they gave me, sir."

OGMS FORMAL RETREAT—In the first such ceremony held since its new flag pole was authorized, the Ordnance Guided Missile School held a formal retreat Friday. With the 55th Army Band of AOMSA supplying music, the honor guards of the Unit Training Command were commanded by Capt. Thomas T. Moxley of the 26th Ordnance Detachment. The flag detail was headed by SFC. M. F. Mountz of Co. A, School Troop Command.

A large, overweight man was hit by one of those tiny foreign sports cars and he had to go to the doctor—to have it removed.
