SCOURING PADS SCREEN RADIATION—James H. McAdams examines samples of materials with which the men in the Test and Evaluation Laboratories of the Directorate for Research and Development are experimenting to shut out radiation leaks which affect both men and equipment when working with radar. One of the most successful is a regular copper mesh scouring pad like the ones used in the kitchen.

Simple Scouring Pads Used To Screen Radar Waves

A copper scouring pad like dishwashers use to clean dirty pots and pans is now working to screen radar waves from entering a steel chamber to protect operators and equipment from radiation.

James H. McAdams has a patent disclosure on his door seal. He attributes his brainstorm to the fact that the men governing missile research finance kept stating that it must be as inexpensive as something from the dime store. While McAdams was in the dime store, he picked up some copper scouring pads for experimentation. It worked.

He is an engineer in the Test and Evaluation Section of the Directorate for Research and Development at the Army Missile Command.

Missile School's Enrollment Rises

The average monthly training roster of the Army Ordnance Guided Missile School here has risen from 1,003 a year ago to 1,495 this month and will reach about 1,750 by October, it was announced Monday.

Col. William J. Macpherson, commandant, said the average monthly total of students undergoing individual and unit training will probably rise again after Jan. 1 when classes formerly held at other Army training centers are transferred here, and new subjects are added to the local curriculum.

More than 5,000 students from the U. S. Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps and 14 Allied nations are scheduled to be trained here during the Army's fiscal year which ends July 1, he said.

Col. Macpherson noted that the Missile School began in 1952 with only seven students. Some 60 courses on nine missile systems and related equipment are now offered and vary in length from almost a year to only eight weeks.

A new cycle of NATO training on both air defense and ballistic missile systems plus the addition (See SCHOOL on Page 2) opment at the Army Missile Command. McAdams is highly skilled in RF (radio frequency) attenuation. He is toying with other patentable ideas. He also has had three articles in this field published since he came to work here in March 1955.

The scouring pad concept is not the final answer to keeping the chamber door radiation tight. It is really a ship's hatch with an electric seal. Radiation can enter the chamber through a bolt hole that has a pin-sized hole in the weld.

The men in T and E started their experimentation in the sealed chamber by entering through a manhole just large enough to accommodate a man. With this arrangement, several gave way to claustrophobia and now avoid the chamber.

Precise Measuring

The instrumentation inside is so sensitive that the football-shaped masses of energy that accumulate in the chamber can be measured. In the open, measurement is harder because the masses move.

Some of the materials with which they are experimenting include such precious metals as gold and silver plate over the coppermesh and metal finger designs. Monel and other exotic met-

Col. Palsrok Is Promoted

Promotion ceremonies for Col. John Palsrok, Finance and Accounting Officer for the Army Ordnance Missile Support Agency, were held recently in the office of Col. Thomas W. Traffic on Redstone Arsenal has increased nearly 10,000 vehicles per day during the year, according to a recent survey.

Vehicle counts at all Arsenal gates during a ten hour period totaled 53,884 vehicles passing through the five Arsenal gates. The figure does not include military personnel living on post who do not use the gates for travel to and from work.

As a further aid to handling traffic, the new Martin Road overpass is scheduled for full operation Aug. 13. The new cloverleaf at the intersection of Martin and Patton Roads has been open on a part-time basis since July 31.

All four access roads to the overpass will be operating, with right turns only permitted in the overpass complex. The new overpass is designed to funnel traffic on and off the Arsenal quickly. It is part of a program that started almost two years ago when Martin Road was converted to a four lane highway.

A new access gate on the eastern side of the Arsenal was opened in 1961. It extended Martin Road as far as Memorial Parkway. When work is completed on the access road it will reach to Whitesburg Drive.

Another aid to traffic control on Arsenal roads is the addition (See OVERPASS on Page 2)

FOLLOW THE ARROWS—Traffic flow over the cloverleaf at the intersection of Martin and Patton Roads is marked by arrows. The traffic pattern is scheduled to begin next week.

An Improvement For You

Opening of the Martin Road-Patton Road cloverleaf is another advance in the continuing effort to improve highway safety factors on Redstone Arsenal. A bonus comes in the time saved for persons having to travel back and forth in the course of their daily job.

Safety projects such as this cost thousands of dollars. It is evidence of the interest being taken by management in the well-being of those using Arsenal facilities.

One small road accident can cost hundreds of dollars in damages, to say nothing of work time lost. More serious accidents run to astronomical losses.

Delays in transportation also cause lost time on the job. With as many vehicles on the go as we have here, just a few minutes in a traffic jam will tie up dozens of people whose total manhours become an expensive waste.

Whatever discomforts may have been experienced during construction on this project will be more than repaid in your safety and in job accomplishment.

The eagle insignia of a full colonel was pinned on by Mrs. Palsrok and Col. Cooke.

Col. Palsrok came to the Arsenal in October, 1953, following an assignment as chief of the Management Engineering Division in the Comptrollers Office at Fifth Army Headquarters.

The colonel is scheduled for assignment in the Department of the Army Chief of Finance Office in Washington.

He is a graduate from Roosevelt University in Chicago with degrees in Commerce, Personnel and Business. He earned a law degree at the University of Maryland.

The Colonel is a noted chess player who has played in Professional and Master's tournaments. In 1937 he placed fourth in the National Chess Tournament of the Orient which was played at Manila, P. I.

In exhibition play he has had as many as 50 opponents simultaneously.

During his assignment in the Orient, the Colonel earned two decorations from the Chinese government: the Royal Breast Order of Yuan Huy and the Army Navy Air Force Medal.

The U. S. Army has awarded him the Legion of Merit and the Army Commendation Medal.

His overseas tours have also included assignments in Germany and France. He is married to the former Maria A. Velton. They have two daughters Diane, and Linda.

FY 1963 Missile Budget Totals $1.25 Billions

This Dollar Outlay Does Not Include Watertown Arsenal

The Army Missile Command will receive approximately $1.25 billion for new Army missile development and production work during the current fiscal year.

The dollar outlay does not include the Watertown Arsenal, Mass., facility recently acquired by the Missile Command or work done by the Missile Command for other agencies.

The budget has been approved by Congress as the fiscal year 1963 appropriations for continuing work on the 19 missile systems managed by the Army Missile Command.

A breakdown of the budget shows:

Operations and maintenance, $66.5 million. It provides for procurement and supply management operations carried on by the Army at Redstone Arsenal.

Procurement and production,

$794.5 million. Purchase of all Army missiles and related equipment are included under this funding. The Industrial Directorate of the Army Missile Command works through the Ordnance District offices scattered throughout the U. S. to award contracts to industry.

Research and development, test and evaluation: $383.6 million. This money provides for the development of new equipment, projects and missiles along with the test equipment needed to prove the reliability of Army missiles.

Approximately $102.3 million of the total figure will be spent for internal operations during fiscal year 1963. Although most of the Army missile work is done by contractors, the Missile Command maintains eight laboratories on Redstone Arsenal to work on breakthroughs in missile development and to retain the capability of technical management over government contractors.

The 1962 fiscal budget of an-

All roads and traffic control devices have been added to help the flow of vehicles and cut down travel time between home and Arsenal.

School

Foreign enrollment currently totals 437 students from 13 nations of Europe and Asia, he said.

Col. Macpherson also announced that the entire Signal Corps detachment of 256 officers and men, stationed here for several years on detached duty from the Army Signal Corps School at Fort Monmouth, N. During World War II he went through five campaigns in Europe, then remained on occupation duty after the war.

He also served in Korea during the conflict in that country. Among the decorations and awards he has earned are the Legion of Merit, the Bronze Star Medal, the Purple Heart, the Air Medal, and the Commendation Medal.

He is married to the former Helen Joan Joyce. The couple has three children, Robert, 9; Linda Joyce, 7; and Gerald, 6. The family lives at 13 Ripley Drive, Redstone Arsenal.

Salute to 49th State: A Whopping Bargain

Ninety-five years ago, on March 30, we closed one of the greatest real estate bargains in our national history—and the irony of that is that a large body of public opinion was in the scoffers gallery about the whole transaction.

"Seward's Folly," "Walrussia," "The Polar Bear Garden," "The National Icehouse"—these were some of the derisive names many Americans coined after Secretary of State William H. Seward signed the treaty purchasing the 590,000 square miles of Alaska from Russia for the sum of $7.2 million.

Today, of course, we see Seward's "buy" as an epochal stage in our growth as a world power. It is more than three years since another stroke of the pen—by President Eisenhower—admitted Alaska to the Union as the 49th State, making the wheel come a full circle. The vast territory that cost no more than the price of today's Atlas missile was at last an official member of the family.

Alaska is significant in our history, like the earlier Louisiana Purchase—875,000 square miles for $15 million—as an example of territorial expansion by peaceful means. Many of us have never set foot on our "Last Frontier," but we can be proud of the hardy and resourceful people who populate it—some 226,000 by the 1960 census. It is undoubtedly higher today, for the young state is still developing its treasure house of natural resources and attracting newcomers drawn by its invigorating climate and scenic grandeur.

But if Alaska ever needed any testimonial to its attractions it would only have to quiz the service people who make up a good percentage of its population—the Navy men at Kodiak, the soldiers at Ft. Richardson, the airmen at Elmendorf AFB. There are no heartier enthusiasts for life in the National Icehouse, the state that five years from now will celebrate a century of growth and progress under the American flag. (AFPS)

MISSILE SCHOOL REWARDS ALERT EMPLOYEE—A simple but effective suggestion that saved the Army Ordnance Guided Missile School more than $13,000 in one year has won a special cash award for Linwood I. Varney of 1614 Hampton Rd., Huntsville. Varney, who retired as a Lieutenant Colonel in 1958 and now is Chief of maintenance at the Missile School, is shown receiving an initial check for $475 from Col. William J. Macpherson, commandant. Varney suggested that costly and bulky Diesel-burning generators supplying current for missile training equipment be replaced with electrical converter stations. Results of a year's test showed that the generators cost $275 each to operate for a year, while converters cost only $15 to work during the same period. A changeover is being made throughout the Missile School. Varney has been recommended for additional awards under the Army Suggestion Program which rewards alert employees for cost-saving ideas that work.

To Read Is to Know: Libraries Are Tools

"Read and Watch Your World Grow"—that's this year's motto for National Library Week which we observe April 8-14. Across the country the spotlight will be thrown on the vital role of the library in educating, informing and enriching Americans of all ages. It isn't an occasion for urging people to read books one week in the year; rather, it calls attention to the fact that libraries are much more than mere repositories of learning and that all of us would be poorer without them.

In the Armed Forces, of course, the spotlight will be global, for never in their respective histories have the services put more emphasis on the value of education than they do today. Libraries at military installations large and small are stocked with books, technical manuals, magazines and recordings for language teaching.

These are tools—the instruments of learning by which we can advance our careers, military or civilian, and broaden our understanding of the world we live in and the political, economic and social forces which galvanize it. This understanding makes all the difference between the man who acts with a purpose and makes decisions based on reason, and the man who fumbles out of confused ignorance and panics at a critical moment.

Such understanding isn't to be acquired from non-fiction works alone. For example, Arthur Koestler's powerful novel, Darkness at Noon, is unique for the insight it gives us into the Communist mentality, just as Boris Pasternak's Doctor Zhivago provides a sweeping panorama of the Russian revolution. We may read these and other novels for their dramatic values, but we leave them with a better appreciation of modern history.

So our library card is a key—to knowledge, to books that stimulate the imagination, to magazines that keep us abreast of great events. "Books are not men and yet they are alive," said Stephen Vincent Benet. These are the words of a man whose own John Brown's Body and The Devil and Daniel Webster made a whole generation prouder of being Americans. (AFPS).

ELECTRONIC TECHNICIAN — Mrs. Doris Recob is the only woman electronic technician employed at the Army Missile Command. She spends her days interpreting data from missile tests and relaying it to the engineers conducting the tests.

Woman Electronic Expert Works in Engineering Lab

Doris W. Recob is the only woman electronic technician in the Engineering Laboratories of the Industrial Directorate, Army Ordnance Missile Command. Off the job she is officially Mrs. John Recob. On the job the men don't exactly ignore the fact that

SPEAKING OF LIBERTY

"BUT LET NOT THE MISCREANT HOPE VAINLY IMAGINE THAT WE FEARED THEIR ARMS. NO, THEM WE DESPISED; WE DREAD NOTHING BUT SLAVERY."
...John Hancock

she's a woman, they take her as much for granted as one of the amplifiers on a missile test hook-up. And they tease her about her shoe collection. (She has at least 40 pair).

She discovered she had a talent in the field of electronics while serving as a SPAR, the feminine branch of the Coast Guard. After discharge from the Coast Guard Mrs. Recob studied electronics at the American Institute of Technology in Chicago. While at school she met her husband. She was unique—the only woman in a student body of 5,000, a fact that kept her working hard enough to be the first woman to graduate.

After graduation Mr. and Mrs. Recob set up a television shop at Jacksonville, Florida, and worked at the Naval Air Station there. Mrs. Recob's studies had prepared her to be an expert television repairman. At first when she would answer a house call, the caller would raise an eyebrow. The next time he or she was in trouble, the call to the shop taken by Mr. Recob would be "send your wife."

The Recob's came to North Alabama in September, 1958. Mrs. Recob has been running tests for missile instrumentation since then and offered a suggestion for an Electronic Counter which netted her $225 cash.

Mr. Recob is in the Electro Magnetic Laboratories of the Research and Development Directorate.

Together the couple operate a small experimental laboratory from their home at Madison, Ala. to further their study of electronics.

During the bowling season (which never really stops), Doris can be found on the alleys chalking up a healthy average against all comers.

Bowling

In another month the winter leagues of 1962-63 bowling season will begin.

The alleys at the Redstone Arsenal Bowling Lanes are in great shape for the coming season. Many are practicing on the week-end to improve their averages for the coming season.

One change known in the rules for 1962-1963 season is the "100 over average" award. It works like this:

If you bowl a 150 average and in one game bowl a 250 game, 100 pins over your average, then the league secretary will submit your score and name. You will then receive the new award.

The summer season has been a "wee" disappointment in participation but hopes are high for the winter season. Now is the time to contact your league secretary for information about your league or check into joining a league.

Remember Saturday and Sunday are good family bowling nights. Wear off some of the "summer tube" by bowling this coming winter.

The Enlisted Mens Couple League is holding a meeting on Aug. 17 at 1900 hours at the Redstone Arsenal Lanes to discuss the league, time, and league matters. If you can't make the meeting, call 877-4349 and give name and phone number.

The Officers Couples League will start on Sept. 10 at 1830. Most leagues formed will start in that week of September. Most leagues will continue through April, 1963.

Little League Baseball

Although Special Services Division does not have any connection with the Little League Program here at Redstone Arsenal, our appreciation and cheers should go out to the kids who are playing their hearts out to be a good future ballplayer and to receive notice, when notice is due.

Here at Redstone there is the Little Boys League, Minor League, Pony League and the Colt League. Each of these leagues have given the fans many thrills and much enjoyment of the game. At the present time, some of the kids from the Redstone teams are playing in All-Star games at Birmingham, Ala.

Win or lose, the players have stuck it out through this hot summer season and whether they were in first place or last, they kept trying, which is the mainspring to being a well-adjusted man.

Those who control the leagues and work with the boys are due many thanks. Through their teachings, the boys become ones to be proud of. The fathers of these future ballplayers can feel satisfaction on seeing their boy play at this age with all the guts and try that professionals have.

The kids play with their heart, as well as their ability. With a possibility of the Pony League field being lighted next season, a lot of good baseball is in store for the spectators for 1963.

During the week, games of Minor League at Birmingham, resulted in the following scores: Nationals 15 and Midfield 14 in the first game played, in the second game Hueytown defeated the Nationals 11 to 1. The Nationals consists of Humphries, Neil, and Means, also Attaya of Redstone Arsenals Minor League team.

Sports Car Buffs

By Ray Mosling

During the afternoon of July 29, 25 sports cars grumbled around in little circles at the Parkway City shopping center. The event was the Twickenham Auto Club's Circle Gymkhana, conducted by Gene Salyer (Consolidated Systems Corp.).

Seen at the starting line were all types of cars from a race-prepared Berkeley, featuring front wheel drive and a three-cylinder engine, to a rear-engined Corvair.

The Corvette class provided some interesting competition as the entrants found life somewhat difficult when trying to make a very tight U-turn in the center of the course. Curt Flurry (Thiokol) provided the most spectacular U-turn of the day, although Bob Cortner (Linde) also demonstrated some interesting driving when crossing the finish line.

First place in the 0-1300cc class, and fastest time of the day, went to Curt Flurry driving his MG Midget. Second place in this class was won by Martha Barnes (AMC) driving an A-H Sprite. The 1301-1600cc class was led by Bill McClain (Phileo) in his MGA, followed by Ray Mosling (Thiokol) in a Porsche.

Gene Salyer and Joe Davis took first and second places, respectively, in the 1601cc and over class. First place in the Corvette class was captured by Jim Riquelmy (NASA).

Gene Salyer, driving a Corvair, again took top honors in the Sedan class, followed closely by Norm Goldberg (Boeing) driving his Triumph Herald.

Everyone thoroughly enjoyed this event and Gene Salyer deserves a big hand for making it possible.

RECEIVE COMMENDATION LETTERS—Col. H. H. Wishart, Director of Procurement and Production for the Army Missile Command, awards letters of commendation to four of his departments for their submitting the four most valuable cost reduction ideas for the last six-month period under the Management Improvement Program. Left to right are Col. Wishart, Lawrence Garrison, L. N. Highfower, Major C. F. Owens and Col. E. V. Lau. Savings benefits from all implemented and/or planned improvements within the Directorate are expected to be nearly $6 million by the end of the 1963 fiscal year.

Commendations Awarded Four Industrial Groups

Col. H. H. Wishart, Director of Procurement and Production, Army Missile Command, has presented letters of commendation to four departments under his supervision for the four most valuable suggestions for cost reduction and saving under a management improvement program.

The program was originated during the 82nd Congress when President Truman was in office. It has been credited with saving millions of dollars through the constructive and imaginative thinking of government personnel.

The Procurement Division was commended for standardizing five disposition form formats and one standard letter format. Clerical and administrative savings will amount to $3,518 per year.

The Quality Assurance Division developed a "laboratory on wheels" compatible with equipment at contractors' plants. Specifically, it is a portable test lab mounted in a government van, eliminating the need for some test equipment of missile manufacturers. $55,000 will be saved on its first application and further savings will be realized as it is applicable to other contracts.

The Low Altitude Air Defense Weapon System Division is credited with a "fixed price incentive" contract with Raytheon Company, prime contractor for the Hawk missile.

This type of contract establishes a target price with an incentive feature that if actual cost is below the target cost, the government will keep 75% of the savings and the contractor 25%. If the actual cost exceeds the target cost, the government absorbs 75% of the excess and the contractor absorbs the remaining 25%. It is believed that this contracting method will stimulate contractor efficiency in plant management and production schedules.

The Engineering Division has developed a new method of scoring the accuracy of Hawk missile firings. Study is now in progress for its application to other mis-

Attaya Addresses Secretary Group

"Missile system management know-how is our most precious asset at Redstone Arsenal," Lt. Col. H. E. Attaya told the Decatur chapter of the National Secretaries Association at their July meeting.

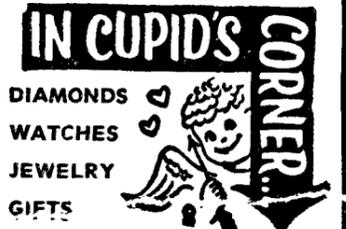

Col. Attaya, executive officer of the Research and Development Directorate, spoke to the chapter on "The Secretary's Role in Missile Development."

"Although most work is contracted, we cannot contract the responsibility for providing a needed weapon system," Attaya said. "When a soldier needs a missile, he needs it badly. He either has it or he doesn't. The weapon works, or it doesn't work. The final responsibility is ours, and the Army Missile Command must have sufficient facilities and scientific know-how to assure that the job is done right."

"A secretary may be called upon to do almost anything, but her most important task is efficiently managing her boss' time," Attaya said.

Reserves Receive Warm Welcome On Arrival Home

Thirty-five officers and soldiers of Company C, 926th Engineer Battalion, U. S. Army Reserve, were welcomed home on Thursday, Aug. 2, after a year of active duty that began during the Berlin crisis of last summer.

Commanding Officer Capt. William K. Strange, 1st Lt. James W. Talbot Jr. and 33 men of the unit were officially greeted by Mayor R. B. Searcy and civic leaders at a ceremony at the Army Reserve Center on Meridian St.

The Engineers' work in support of airborne troops at Fort Campbell, Ky., during the past 12 months was commended on behalf of Third U. S. Army by Col. William J. Macpherson, commandant of the Ordnance Guided Missile School.

A plaque was presented by Walter V. Linde, president of the Huntsville Madison County Chamber of Commerce, Joseph Moquin, local president of the Association of the U. S. Army, cited the group for "unselfish service in a time of national need."

Participating in the ceremony were Commander Frank Rice of the American Legion post; Commander Jack Roberts of the Veterans of Foreign Wars; and Karl A. Woltersdorff of the AUSA.

Maj. C. W. Lewis of Decatur, representing the Alabama Sector Command of IV Corps, presided.

A musical salute to the returning soldiers was given by the 55th Army Band of Redstone Arsenal.

laboratories and supply agencies on the arsenal, Smith built the cleaning machine in two weeks.

The machine is really a vacuum cleaner, since the ruby rod is placed in a vacuum under a glass dome for the scouring process.

Using 3,600 volts of electricity, the machine excites the ions in the chamber, causing them to rush across the vacuum toward a second rod.

As they rush across the space they scrape the end of the ruby rod, clamped in place to intercept the maximum number of ions. The oil and dirt on the rod is knocked loose and either ionized itself or sucked into the vacuum pumping system. It takes only five minutes to polish the rod using the glow discharge system.

In operation, the cleaner presents a colorful display with the ionized chamber glowing a soft violet and the ruby shining a deep red in the middle of the glow.

Although the machine does a professional job of cleaning the ruby rods, Smith isn't satisfied with his product. He plans on stepping up the power in the machine to 14,000 volts for a better cleaning job.

Smith, who plans to major in electrical engineering, lives with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Coleman H. Smith, at 2331 Whitesburg Drive, Huntsville.

3,600 Volt 'Vacuum' Makes 'Dirty' Ruby Come Clean

The job of laboratory assistant is sometimes confined to bottle-washing but at the Army Missile Command they do a more exotic kind of cleaning job.

Coleman Smith, Jr., laboratory assistant at the Electromagnetics Laboratory of the Research and Development Directorate here, uses tiny particles called ions to clean the ruby rods used in lasers.

A laser, short for light amplification by stimulated emission of radiation, is an instrument that can project intense light for great distances, like a giant flashlight. The end of the ruby rod that acts as the focusing lens of this flashlight must be antiseptically clean where it is plated with silver to reflect the light in the right direction.

The best manual cleaning process still leaves a thin film of oil on the end of the rod. Smith, a sophomore at the University of Alabama working here during his vacation, decided to build an ion bombardment machine that could clean the rods electronically.

100,000 Expected to Hear Billy Graham Speak Here

Redstone Arsenal is preparing to host more than 100,000 persons who may visit later this month to hear Evangelist Billy Graham.

Dr. Graham is scheduled to speak at 4 p.m., August 26.

Estimates of the number of visitors from throughout the Tennessee Valley range as high as 60,000 but Arsenal officials will be prepared for thousands more.

Col. R. M. Allgeier, who is overall coordinator for the Graham program for the Army Missile Command, said, "We are making preparations for as many as 110,000 persons. We have parking facilities alone for 25,000 automobiles."

But he asked for cooperation from the people who will be here. "Despite the planning we are doing and will continue to do, we will need the utmost in cooperation from the people to avoid confusion and to avoid inconveniencing our visitors," the Colonel emphasized.

The evangelist will speak at the Redstone Air Field on the west side of the Arsenal. Visitors will sit on the concrete runways at the Air Field or on adjacent grassy areas.

"We suggest that the people bring blankets or cushions to make their seating arrangement more comfortable," Col. Allgeier said.

Gates to Redstone Arsenal will be opened at 8 a.m. All except Gates 2 and 5 will permit traffic.

A water truck will be at the Air Field throughout the day, as well as mobile canteens serving soft drinks and sandwiches. Visitors will be permitted to picnic if they wish. Col. Allgeier said provisions should be made for two meals in the event of a delay in relieving the traffic congestion which may develop after Dr. Graham has completed his address.

Also scheduled to be on hand is commercial wrecker and automobile repair service in the event motorists get into difficulty.

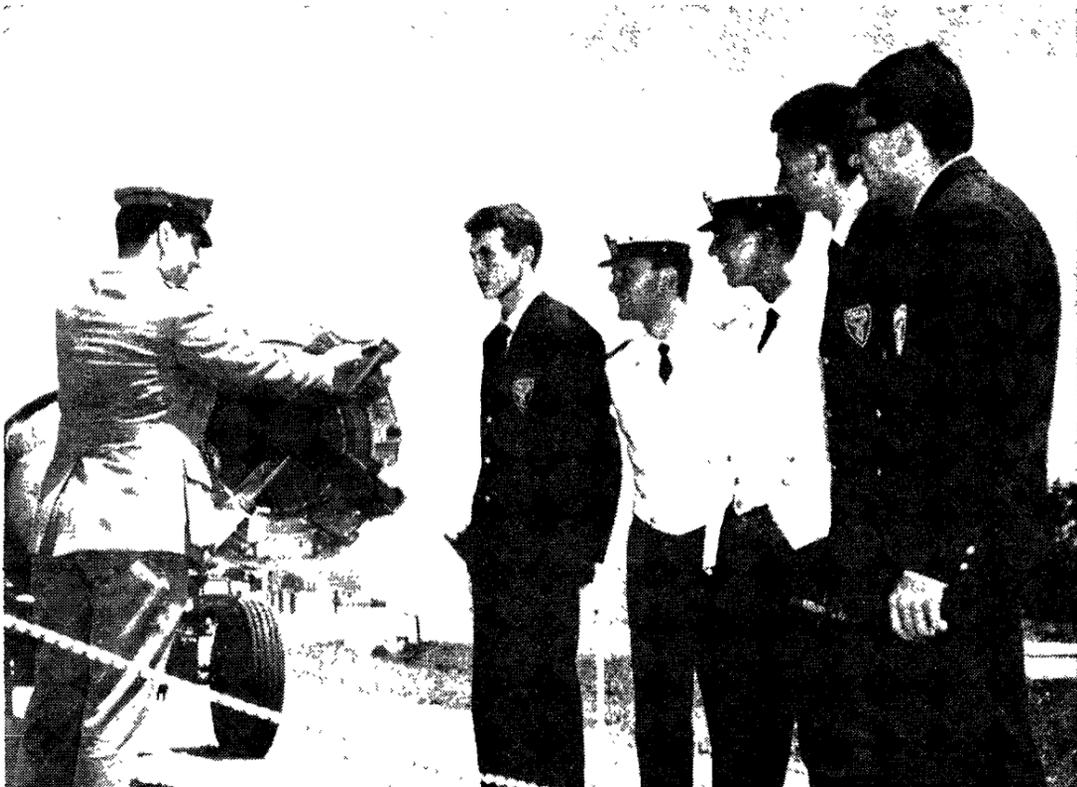

Because of the missile work done at Redstone Arsenal security will not permit visitors to bring on the Arsenal either cameras or binoculars.

This will be the first major public visit of Dr. Graham to Alabama. The evangelist is coming to Redstone at the invitation of the Huntsville Ministers Association and Col. Thomas W. Cooke, commander of the Army Missile Support Command.

Hundreds of volunteers are being trained as counselors for the event. They will assist in seating and other duties connected with the Graham address.

Efforts are being made to get a choir of 2,000 voices from throughout the Tennessee Valley. Already more than 1,000 persons have been recruited.

Recognizing the inherent problems connected with handling a crowd so large, Col. Allgeier urged those who plan to attend the Graham address to read their newspapers, watch television and listen to the radio for additional detailed information on arrangements made at Redstone.

INSPECTING AMERICAN MISSILE—Sgt. Major Luigi Fusco, Italian Army student at the U. S. Army Ordnance Guided Missile School, explains the Corporal missile to his visiting countrymen as Redstone Arsenal played host to Antonio Bianchi, Milan University; cadets Francesco Ratto and Antonio Simonini of the Italian Air Force Academy; Giampaola Pagani, Feltrinelli Technical School, and Eugenio Rosmann, Trieste University. The visitors are members of the Cadet Exchange Program sponsored by the Civil Air Patrol. Many states are host to a country. Alabama in this case, is host to Italy for a period of ten days.

From the aircraft corporation in Kansas, McAdams went to Cheyenne, Wyo., to work in an electronics laboratory. Openings with the company occurred in Alaska and Alabama after about a year in Cheyenne. He chose Alabama. When the contract with his firm was terminated, he stayed in essentially the same job, measuring missile trajectories, designing and engineering new radar concepts and instrument control systems, particularly with the SCR 584 radar which tracks high velocity small missiles and determines trajectory.

The McAdams family includes five children, a registered Dachshund and a loud-mouthed parakeet. The children are Sondra, Linda, 15; Tom, 14; Frederick, 12; Lesa, 10.

age during the experiments, and meters of varying designs and capacities record and measure the entrance of energy. These are so sensitive a man sitting in the chamber can watch himself breathe on the instrument dials.

McAdams has been working with radio and electronics since he was 12. He had his own ham station in his mother's pantry, operating on the extremely high frequency of 60 megacycles which is now reserved for television.

The equipment for his station came from the basement full of radios left over after his cousin sold out a radio shop in Wichita, Kan., where McAdams was born and reared. He and his buddies didn't stop with radios. They strung telegraph wires in the alleys to communicate with each other and endangered the neighbor's chimneys and upstairs windows with homemade rockets.

Graduating from high school with both scholastic and vocational honors, McAdams was offered the choice of a college education or an electrical repair shop. He chose the shop and took in a partner. He also joined the Naval Reserve and obtained a ham operator's license.

In 1940 he was called to active duty. By that time he was working with Western Electric in telephone exchange equipment. Following World War II, he returned to work for them. Meantime, he had cruised round-the-world on a troop transport, earned a Navy commendation for his work with radar, underwater sound and radios, and earned a warrant officer rank—rising from second class radioman. He was awarded a Purple Heart after a kamikaze attack on his ship. During 1941, he married Miss Mary Lou Willmore of St Joseph, Mo. She is now a salesman for electrical supplies.

McAdams' first experience with shields on door cracks happened soon after the war ended while he was working for an airplane manufacturer. He helped design a
