Adult Scout Leaders Meet Make Plans For Roundup

Col. Thomas W. Cooke, Redstone Arsenal Post Commander, welcomed more than 65 Boy Scout adult leaders to a program planning session last week at the Arsenal.

The meeting was to outline this year's Boy Scout Adventure Roundup, during which Scouts will encourage other youngsters to take part in the Scouting program. The Roundup will be climaxed in December by an awards ceremony at Redstone Arsenal.

Col. Cooke is Roundup Chairman for the Tennessee Valley Council.

Attending the meeting were representatives of all districts and divisions of the Council and technical representatives of Army agencies at Redstone.

Highlight of the meeting was discussion of this year's program by the chairman of each district and division.

The meeting was held at Redstone Arsenal's picnic area number one, on the bank of the Tennessee River.

GATES 2 AND 3 ARE NOW OPEN FOR BUSINESS

Gate 3 (Redstone Road) is now open 24 hours a day for traffic and the issuance of visitor's passes.

Gate 2 (Buxton Road) will close at 6 a.m., Saturday, August 24, and will remain closed until Monday, Aug. 26. Thereafter Gate 2 will be open from 6 a.m. to 6 p.m., Monday through Friday, except holidays.

Gen. Reynierse, NATO Group Visiting Redstone

A group of 17 officials from the North Atlantic Treaty Organization today continues their visit to the Army Missile Command.

Lt. Gen. William J. Reynierse (ret.), of the Royal Netherlands Air Force, heads the group. He now is general manager for the NATO Hawk management office in Europe.

Gen. Reynierse arrived in Huntsville Monday night and was greeted by Brig. Gen. H. P. Persons, Jr., Deputy Commanding General for Air Defense Systems,

Col. Charles R. Graham, Hawk Project Manager, and other representatives of the Missile Command.

Gen. Reynierse and his group are visiting the Hawk Project Office to gain knowledge of the United States' missile management procedure.

NATO hopes to apply U. S. experience in developing plans for the NATO Hawk missile system maintenance facilities and procedures.

Among the visiting officials are key personnel from throughout the NATO Hawk team. They represent the planning and management area of the NATO Hawk production organization, the consortium nations and the European Industrial Organization.

Gen. Reynierse and his advance party met Tuesday morning with Gen. Persons and Col. Graham. The remainder of the group arrived in Huntsville Tuesday night. They will visit here through Thursday.

Five NATO countries, the Netherlands, Germany, Belgium, France, and Italy, are represented by the group.

MISSILE SCHOOL USES TEN FIRMS

The Army Ordnance Guided Missile School has awarded contracts totaling about $1,500,000 to 10 large industrial concerns for assistance in training some 5,000 maintenance supervisors and technicians during fiscal 1964.

Col. William J. Macpherson, commandant of the school which draws students from all branches of the U. S. armed forces and 16 Allied nations, said the contracts call for maintenance of equipment and special assistance in the complex training program.

The largest contract is held by Teleprompter Corp., with 35 local employees and a $418,000 budget. It supplies production and engineer specialists for the Missile (See MISSILE SCHOOL on Page 2)

Brig. Gen. Frederick J. Clark, director of military construction in the Office, Chief of Engineers, Washington, met Monday with Col. I. O. Drewry, Nike Zeus Project Manager.

During the visit, Col. Drewry briefed Gen. Clark on the Nike X anti-missile program. Also taking part in the orientation was Col. William H. Roedy, Deputy Project Manager for Engineering Activities in the Nike Zeus Project Office.

Discussion centered around construction of Nike X test and development facilities, including those at White Sands Missile Range and others to be erected at the Nike X test facility on the Kwajalein Atoll in the mid-Pacific.

Gen. Clark was accompanied on his visit to the Nike Zeus Project Office by Col. B. D. Jones, also of the Army Chief of Engineering Office in Washington, D. C.

Managers Job Equality Classes Begin

All middle managers and first-line supervisors employed by the Army at Redstone Arsenal are scheduled to receive training in equal employment opportunities. The first class of sixty middle managers will be held at 9 a.m. tomorrow in Bldg. 3743, Training and Development Division, Civilian Personnel Office.

Subject of the three-hour training course is equal employment opportunities which includes hiring, employee development, employee advancement and other conditions of employment in the Federal service without regard to race, creed, color or national origin.

The middle managers and first-line supervisors—there are 1700 of them—are from the Army Missile Command, Zeus Project Office, the Army Ordnance Guided Missile School and Shillelagh Missile Engineering Division.

The course will be given twice weekly and each class will complete the course in a single session. The course was planned and will be conducted jointly by the Deputy Employment Policy Office (See EQUAL on Page 3)

Redstone's Anniversary Shot Is Complete Success

The Army's "Old Reliable" Redstone ballistic missile was successfully fired by soldiers yesterday at White Sands Missile Range, N. M.

The firing came 10 years—almost to the day—after the first Redstone was launched in research and development from Cape Canaveral, Fla.

Yesterday's Redstone, launched by soldiers in their annual service practice test, contrasted vividly with the engineers and technicians who first sent the missile off its pad on Aug. 20, 1953.

The missile was fired by troops of Battery B, 2nd Missile Battalion, 333rd Artillery, who were brought back from their duty station in Europe for the practice shot.

The highly accurate surface-to-surface missile has accomplished an impressive list of "firsts" since research and development began. They include:

—the first U. S. ballistic missile to successfully employ an inertial guidance system, making it immune to known types of counter measures.

—the first U. S. missile to carry and detonate a nuclear warhead.

—the first large U. S. ballistic missile to be fired by troops.

—the first U. S. ballistic missile to be deployed overseas, joining the NATO Shield Forces in June of 1958.

As a modified composite vehicle, the Redstone booster was chosen to play an important role in scientific and technical progress.

The Redstone booster was modified for a composite Army vehicle, known as the Jupiter C. The missile carried the first heat-protected nose cone into space and returned it safely to earth.

It also was: —the first missile to carry scientific instruments into orbit about the earth, including the Explorer I satellite.

—the first modified booster to be selected for a space mission in lofting the first American astronaut to sub-orbital flight.

Urgent National Business

In the days ahead you will hear much about increasing the productivity of the Federal work force. This is urgent national business, brought on by rising demands on our total resources.

You, the Federal employee, provide the mind and muscle for carrying out national and international policies, commitments, and programs. You have done exceedingly well, but the days ahead will be more demanding—and, I hope, richer in the personal satisfactions of high achievement.

Increased productivity can come from an increased sense of purpose. I urge you to seek a fuller understanding of your job in relationship to our total national endeavor. Our country counts on you to meet the special challenge with a special effort.

Merchandise Quality Control

New York—A quality control program developed by Army and Air Force Exchange Service headquarters here assures that merchandise sold in local post and base exchanges meets established standards of quality and value, according to William Greenwell, chief of the quality control section.

The goal of the section is to protect the soldier and airman against possible inferior merchandise in his post or base exchange through testing and inspection.

Manufacturer's performance reports are compared to those accepted in the industry and, in some cases, to federal specifications. The section also makes tests at independent and government laboratories. A formal product evaluation report is sent to the requesting post exchange buyer.

The section also conducts plant inspections to determine if a manufacturer's in-plant quality control inspection methods meet accepted standards. As a result of these visits the manufacturer is alerted to post exchange tolerance requirements.

The testing conducted by the quality control staff is either self-initiated to establish product standards, or results from a particular request by a post exchange buyer. The request may be to evaluate the quality of a given item or to compare it to similar competitive items.

Testings during the past year have included such diversified products as underwear, chamois skins, charcoal briquettes, and women's hosiery.

Currently being developed is an exchange service vendor's experience control system for compiling data on a manufacturer's performance with respect to the quality of his merchandise as determined by tests. Buyers will be made aware of repeated shipments of substandard products from a particular manufacturer.

"The most important phase of our program," asserted Greenwell, "is to have manufacturers tighten up their inspection of all shipments destined for post and base exchanges. This is primarily a job of selling the manufacturer the idea that the post exchange will buy only quality merchandise," he concluded.

In addition to Greenwell, the quality control section is staffed by two technical specialists, Joseph Churak and Joseph Werres. The trio has a combined background of technical, merchandising and industrial engineering experience.

TOP SCIENTIFIC AWARD—Dr. William C. McCorkle (right) receives the Army Research and Development Achievement Award from Col. D. F. Dr. McCorkle is chief of the Directorate's Advanced Systems Laboratory, and received the award primarily for development of the Automatic Meteorological Compensation System (AUTOMET), which was incorporated into the guidance system of the Lance missile. Dr. McCorkle has been granted two patents for developments in the missile field, and has applications pending for five others.

Nike Zeus Project Manager Presents Lecture At Ft. Lee

Col. I. O. Drewry, Nike Zeus Project Manager at Redstone Arsenal, participated Tuesday in a three-way presentation as guest lecturer at the Army Project Manager's School at Fort Lee, Va.

Taking part on the program with Col. Drewry was C. A. Warren, director of the Nike Zeus Project for Bell Telephone Laboratories, and Col. John W.

Graham of the New York Procurement District. key roles in project programs. As a part of their presentation, the guest lecturers working on the Army's Nike X anti-missile program explained their role in management relationship.

SLATTERY WILL SPEAK AT SCHOOL

The director of public information of the Marshall Space Flight Center will address 95 students from six nations at a graduation ceremony to be held Friday at the Army Ordnance Guided Missile School.

Capt. Bart J. Slattery Jr., U. S. Navy (ret.), will speak to the missile graduates at a ceremony in the Post Theater at 10 a.m. Friday.

Denmark, China, France, Netherlands, Norway and the U. S. are represented in the group which is completing studies on several air defense and ballistic missile systems.

Slattery will speak on civilian and industrial benefits thus far derived from the National Aeronautics & Space Administration's vast research and development program involving both missiles and aircraft.

A native of St. Louis, Mo., Slattery recently retired from active duty after a 21-year Navy career which included combat off Japan during World War II. He is also a member of the X-15 research airplane information committee.

Community Leaders Told Equal Opportunity Policy

Representatives of U. S. Army agencies at Redstone Arsenal, the George C. Marshall Space Flight Center of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration and the Huntsville Contractors Association spoke at a joint executive session of the Army and Marshall Center Community Advisory Committees held Aug. 16, in the Huntsville Utilities auditorium.

Members of the Huntsville City Council and Board of Education; Madison County Commissioners and the County Board of Education and the executive committees of the Huntsville Industrial Expansion Committee and the Huntsville-Madison County Chamber of Commerce were invited to attend by the Advisory Committees.

Request Assistance

Purpose of the meeting was to provide the community with factual information on the Federal Equal Employment Opportunity Program being implemented by the federal agencies and their contractors and the Department of Defense Equal Opportunity Program for military personnel and their dependents being implemented by the Army agencies. The assistance of the community was requested in providing an environment that will enable these programs, being implemented under federal directives, to proceed.

Col. Thomas W. Cooke, Commander of Redstone Arsenal, welcomed the group and explained the purpose of the meeting.

In discussing the recent Department of Defense directives on Equal Opportunity in the Armed Services, Cooke pointed out that military commanders have always had the prerogative of placing individual establishments off limits for the protection of the health, welfare or morals of their troops. New in the recent directive was the fact that no commander can place an establishment off limits without express permission of the Secretary of the Army. "Certainly no entire community can be placed off limits by a local commander on his own authority," Cooke said.

Harry H. Gorman, Deputy Director of Marshall Space Flight Center spoke for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration establishment and praised the formation of the Huntsville Contractors Association. He lauded the purpose of the organization and pointed out that they were accepting their obligations, not only as contractors to the government, committed to fair employment practices by their contracts, but as citizens of the community.

Full Texts Shown

Col. Robert M. Allgeier, assistant to Colonel Cooke for community relations, covered the Department of Defense program for Equal Opportunity in the Armed Forces. Full texts of memorandums from the Secretary of Defense to the President and the Department of Defense Directive on the same subject were shown to the group.

The Army and other services have yet to issue instructions implementing the Secretary of Defense's order. What these will be and when they will be received here is not yet known. Col. Cooke and Col. Allgeier, added however, that the Army will operate within the frame work of the Secretary of Defense's directives and will follow additional orders as received.

Allgeier pointed out that before applying the off limits sanction in the past in matters pertaining to discipline and safeguarding the health, morals and welfare of military personnel, base commanders have been enjoined to follow specific procedures. Among them:

1. Forwarding a letter advising of specific objectionable practices to the alleged offender.
 2. Providing the alleged offender a reasonable opportunity to determine the facts and opportunity to present himself at a hearing to determine the truth or falsity of the allegations.
- Allgeier said the results of such a hearing provided the basis for action by the base commander in requesting that individual establishments be placed off limits.

Allgeier also showed the group the text of a telegram received from the Department of the Army implementing Department of Defense policy regarding assignment of children of military personnel to public schools.

The telegram directs base commanders in 15 Southern states to obtain certain information from local school boards regarding procedures for assignment and transfer of children of military personnel to public schools on a non racial basis; to counsel all military personnel regarding these procedures and advise them of the availability of legal action in the courts to secure their constitutional rights regarding integrated school facilities for military dependent children.

Court Decision Cited

Allgeier informed the group that because of the action required by the message and the decision rendered in Federal Court this week in the Huntsville integration case, Army authorities at Redstone have requested the City and County Boards of Education to provide the information required. In addition, he said, the City and County School Superintendents have been requested by Army authorities at Redstone to ask their respective Boards of Education to admit the qualified dependent children of all military personnel stationed at Redstone Arsenal to the schools nearest their homes without regard to race, color or creed.

Fearson Shortridge, special labor relations assistant to the Commanding General Army Missile Command; Marion Kent, assistant deputy administrator, Marshall Space Flight Center, and A. V. Pilling, representing the Huntsville Contractors Assn., presented facets of the Federal Equal Employment Opportunity Program.

Shortridge traced the origin of the program, pointing out that the first Executive Order on the subject was issued in August, 1953. The orders prohibit discrimination in employment practices of federal agencies and their contractors. Shortridge noted he had recently furnished the Chamber of Commerce with a listing of businesses in the community who qualify as government contractors under the terms of the executive orders "and very few firms in Huntsville were not on that list."

Housing Needs

Marion Kent, of Marshall, recounted some of the provisions of the President's executive order 10925 and the action that is needed to implement them. In discussing the Equal Employment Opportunity Program, he pointed out that affirmative action was called for.

"This means that personnel procedures must be reexamined," he said, "and if necessary overhauled to insure that practices which tend to inhibit advancement of minority group employees do not exist, and that a positive attitude toward promotion and upgrading of qualified minority group employees be the rule." He also cited the needs of the community for adequate housing and recreation and the upgrading of education at all levels to insure a ready pool of qualified people.

Pilling said he was attending to report back to the contractors organization on subject matter discussed at the meeting in order that the membership might consider and assess it "toward possible committee actions in these areas or related areas in close coordination with all other interested Huntsville organizations."

He explained the broad objectives of the contractors organization and pointed out that the group plans to elect officers at its next regular meeting, Sept. 5. "It is planned to form an executive committee and appoint working committees to initiate actions on items voted priority as relates to the Huntsville area well being," he said.

Pilling said the key note in the association objectives relates to improvement and upgrading of the industrial community consistent with the needs of the aerospace industry. Other objectives include translating executive orders on equal employment opportunities into positive equal employment programs and rendering mutual assistance in the implementation of positive programs on a timely basis.

er of the Missile Command and selected staff members of the Civilian Personnel Office of the Missile Support Command.

Each of the training sessions will be introduced by Maj. Gen. F. J. McMorro, Commanding General, Missile Command, in a film welcoming the participants and stressing the importance of the equal opportunity program.

A lecture by the Deputy Employment Policy Officer, entitled "Equal Employment Opportunity—Basic Requirements for Supervisors," will follow. There will be a showing of the Army motion picture, "The New Girl," followed by a panel discussion and question-and-answer period. Each session will conclude with a workshop during which the class will be divided into groups and given case studies to work out and report on at the close of the session.

The equal employment opportunity training course was given a full-scale preview yesterday, before key staff members and supervisors of the Civilian Personnel Office. Attendance at the course is mandatory under the provisions of Civilian Personnel Regulations.

Attendance is being scheduled by the Civilian Personnel Office in cooperation with line management.

Complete Text Of DOD Directive No. 5120.36 July 26, 1963

SUBJECT Equal Opportunity in the Armed Forces

I. POLICY

It is the policy of the Department of Defense to conduct all of its activities in a manner which is free from racial discrimination, and which provides equal opportunity for all uniformed members and all civilian employees irrespective of their color.

Discriminatory practices directed against Armed Forces members, all of whom lack a civilian's freedom of choice in where to live, to work, to travel and to spend his off-duty hours, are harmful to military effectiveness. Therefore, all members of the Department of Defense should oppose such practices on every occasion, while fostering equal opportunity for servicemen and their families, on and off-base.

II. RESPONSIBILITIES

A. Office of the Secretary of Defense

1. Pursuant to the authority vested in the Secretary of Defense and the provisions of the National Security Act of 1947, as amended, the Assistant Secretary of Defense (Manpower) is hereby assigned responsibility and authority for promoting equal opportunity for members of the Armed Forces.

In the performance of this function he shall (a) be the representative of the Secretary of Defense in civil rights matters, (b) give direction to programs that promote equal opportunity for military personnel, (c) provide policy guidance and review policies, regulations and manuals of the military departments, and (d) monitor their performance through periodic reports and visits to field installations.

2. In carrying out the functions enumerated above, the Assistant Secretary of Defense (Manpower) is authorized to establish the Office of Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense (Civil Rights).

B. The Military Departments

1. The military departments shall, with the approval of the Assistant Secretary of Defense (Manpower), issue appropriate instructions, manuals and regulations in connection with the leadership responsibility for equal opportunity, on and off-base, and containing guidance for its discharge.

2. The military departments shall institute in each Service a system for regularly reporting, monitoring and measuring progress in achieving equal opportunity on and off-base.

C. Military Commanders

Every military commander has the responsibility to oppose discriminatory practices affecting his men and their dependents and to foster equal opportunity for them, not only in areas under his immediate control, but also in nearby communities where they may live or gather in off-duty hours. In discharging that responsibility a commander shall not, except with the prior approval of the Secretary of his military department, use the off-limits sanction in discrimination cases arising within the United States.

III. IMPLEMENTATION

Not later than 15 August 1963 the military departments shall forward for the approval of the Assistant Secretary of Defense (Manpower) an outline plan for implementing this Directive.

This Directive is effective immediately.

Thiokol Launches 'Quality Thinking'

Thiokol Chemical Corporation, Alpha Division—Huntsville Plant, has launched a "Quality Thinking" program, designed to instill a spirit of perfection among employees.

Plant Manager, John H. Goodloe, at a kickoff rally Aug. 14, invited employees to sign a pledge to "accept the challenge to strive for defect-free workmanship" in the manufacture of solid propellant rocket motors for the Army, Air Force, Navy, and NASA.

Flight Center, spoke to employees of the Thiokol plant on the importance of quality to space and defense missions.

The Space Center director praised Huntsville Plant for starting the "Quality Thinking" program.

"Thiokol has been known for a long time, of course, for its reliable products. And I'm glad to see that you now are going to settle for nothing less than the very best in quality control . . . nothing less than top quality rocket motors," said Dr. von Braun.

"Mistakes must not be made" in the products for America's space and defense missions, declared the prominent space leader. He pointed out that the lives of men, the money of taxpayers, and the prestige and safety of the nation are at stake.

The plant is hopeful that all of its more than 1,700 employees will sign the quality pledge card.

Contests, achievement awards, and other media will be used to remind employees of their pledge to the program.

Menu Makers Master Exotic Dishes To Satisfy

A missile scientist from Germany likes sauerbraten; an American engineer from Boston relishes veal scallopine; a Turkish student yens for curried veal; and a technician from Alabama insists on corn bread.

They all clamor for the ear of Robert Heil.

Well-fed Heil ("people wouldn't trust a skinny cook") is the Post Exchange food supervisor on Redstone Arsenal. His realm includes eight cafeterias, 12 snack bars (including four on wheels), a fleet of coffee carts—and the popcorn stand at the base theater.

An Army Missile Command engineer, poring over a knotty problem in electronics, gulps a cup of coffee—Heil supplied it; a total of 7,500 cups are consumed by Army employees in an average day.

A French student, in the United States learning about American Army missiles, grouches because he can't get a pint of wine with his lunch. A German student wonders if a waitress would draw him a liter of "bier."

Here Heil draws the line.

From early morning until night Heil packs his briefcase with cookbooks for menu making at home. Redstone Arsenal's apple checked major domo of the cafeterias strives to meet the tastes of his 8,000 daily customers. But, sometimes, as in the cases cited above, he just has to say no—or non, nein, iie (Japanese).

The coffee carts (greatest thing since automation) are a thing of pride. Equipped with chimes to attract customers, and dispense everything from apples and donuts to bacon and biscuit sandwiches. A homemade biscuit with a healthy stuffing of bacon costs 13 cents and sells like—well, hotcakes, a commodity the carts don't carry.

Heil comes from Sacramento and has been with the Post Exchange Service for more than 15 years. He's in the Army-Air Force Exchange Service Executive Management Program.

He got into the food business during World War II when he was, of course, a mess Sergeant. He wielded the cleaver over the mess at General MacArthur's headquarters in Japan.

Of the some 9,000 Army employees on Redstone Arsenal, nearly everyone either eats at one of Heil's places—or "brown bags" it. "Brown baggers" carry their own lunch.

The cafeterias serve 6,500 meals a day—including nearly enough hamburgers to pave a block on Main Street.

MENU MAKER—Diners at Redstone Arsenal's cafeterias have pretty discriminating tastes and keeping them happy calls for heavy homework by Food Supervisor Robert Heil. Here Heil sits in a cafeteria at the Army Missile Command Headquarters and clowns over some rare dishes for the benefit of the photographer. Because his patrons come from many parts of the country and as many as 16 foreign lands, Heil's menus carry such dishes as home-made biscuit sandwiches, corn pilaf, veal scallopine, German roast beef, pork chop suey—and a good nickel cup of coffee.

Ft. McPherson and Redstone Split

The Rockets took off for Ft. McPherson Friday, Aug. 9 for a pair of games Friday night and Saturday afternoon. Redstone split, by taking the first game and losing the second.

In the first game, Ed Drabczyk, Rockets pitcher shut out McPherson 3-0, allowing only five hits.

Redstone got its first run in the second inning when Irv Lyles with two out singled. He was then followed by Al Elliott who also singled. Elliott, in attempting to take second on the single to left, allowed Lyles to score when he drew a throw from the left fielder who nailed him.

Brad Davis, leading off in the fourth, took first on a walk. Vinnie Gebhard then lined a single moving Davis to third. Bob Woletz the next batter hit a sacrifice fly to right, allowing Davis to tag up. This made the score 2-0, in favor of the Rockets.

Redstone took advantage of a pair of McPherson errors in the fifth and managed to bring in another run, making it 3-0. Up to the seventh inning the score remained 3-0 and the game was then called.

In the second game of the series played Saturday afternoon, Aug. 10, Redstone came up with a run in the first followed by two McPherson runs in the same half of the inning. In the top half of the fourth Redstone managed to tie it up when lead off batter Anderson walked, scoring on singles by Davis and Elliott. The tie didn't last long, because in McPherson's half of the fourth, on a pair of Redstone errors, McPherson went ahead by one run.

Redstone was scoreless in the fifth but McPherson got 3 runs on 3 hits in their half of the inning, making the score 6-2 in favor of Ft. McPherson. In the last half of the eighth with one out Odom, first baseman, singled. He was followed by Falciani, who also singled making it first and third. A sacrifice by Fischer, McPherson pitcher, brought in a run and a single by left fielder Cozad brought in another run, running the score up to 8-2.

Redstone made one last bid in the ninth but couldn't catch up, scoring 2 runs on 4 hits.

Junior, Bantam Bowling Clinic Will Be Aug. 28

A free bowling clinic for Junior and Bantam bowlers will be held Aug. 28-29. The clinic starts at 4 p.m. and lasts an hour. This clinic will be conducted by Major Jim Connolly. The Junior clinic is the 28th and the Bantam the 29th.

Military personnel interested in bowling a Wednesday night Army-Airforce Officers League, please contact Maj. J. Connolly (Ret) at 881-3084 before Aug. 22.

All couples interested in bowling in the Monday night Officers' Mixed League, call Mrs. R. F. Sullivan, 877-5351 or Mrs. D. P. Vander Heyden, 539-7310. A meeting of last seasons' team captains and the new league officials will be called during the last week in August to discuss organizational matters. The league will begin bowling on Sept. 9.

The Redstone Arsenal Officers' Wives Bowling League starts Friday, Sept. 6, at 9:30 a.m. Interested individuals may call Mrs. Vander Heyden or Mrs. Sullivan for details.

THIRD ARMY GOLF TOURNEY STARTED

SOLDIER OF THE MONTH HONORED—PFC. and Mrs. Nolan Raborn are welcomed to Huntsville's Parkway Country Club by Arthur Cole, club president. Entertainment at the club was part of city's Chamber of Commerce activities which honor each Soldier of the Month.

At the Service Club

By: Brenda Hanson

Even though the lazy, sunny, August days are fading fast, don't fret because we still have fun-filled activities planned for the rest of the month.

Tonight at 7 p.m. our new dance instructor, Sp/4 Ruiz Perez, will teach you the basic steps and the techniques of the latest popular dances. Ruiz is replacing Pfc David Izen, who has been the instructor for the past few months. Lots of luck David, we will miss you.

Thursday, Aug. 22 is the evening set aside for favorite card games at 7:30 p.m. Bring your partner with you and challenge others to the game of your choice. Lately hearts has been the most popular game, and I might mention there are some sharp players around.

Attention all pool players!! Friday, Aug. 23, will be your night to shine. The monthly pool contest will begin at 8 p.m. Remember the more Enlisted Men that we have to participate; the bigger the prize.

Saturday, Aug. 24, the big program of the month will take place, western round up. At 6:30 p.m. a chuck wagon supper will be served western style.

After the vittles, Pfc Bob Perry will spin popular records for the round up dance. Record albums will be given away periodically and special entertainment will round out the evening. Wear western clothes for a big Saturday night at the Service Club—dude, hoss or cowboy.

Yours Truly will serve coffee and donuts on Sunday, Aug. 25, at 9 a.m.

Sunday evening, Charlie Lyle and his orchestra will furnish music for the starlight interlude dance, at 8 p.m. The Huntsville and the Birmingham Hostesses will be here to dance with you to the starlight tones.

An evening of games will take place in the main lounge Monday, Aug. 26, at 8 p.m. An alarm clock is the grand prize plus other fine prizes. Come down!! You may be one of the lucky winners.

On Tuesday, Aug. 27, let's gather in the kitchen for a popcorn popping party at 8 p.m.

DON JOHN IN HADES, the 3rd Army, All-Army Show proved to be a big success. Pfc Art Kalin, Sp/5 George Maillet, Pfc Jeff Tucker, and Sfc Bob Henderson are four Enlisted Men that Redstone Arsenal can be proud of since they put on a great performance.

Since most of you seem to like variety shows, check the Service Club calendar for future shows. To keep up to date on the shows and other events pick up a schedule from the bingo case monthly. See you at the Service Club.

Army Scientists Study Range Instrumentation

WHITE SANDS MISSILE RANGE, N. M.—A group of top Army scientists and engineers completed a three-day detailed study last week of modernization plans for White Sands range instrumentation.

They are members of a special instrumentation group of the Army Scientific Advisory Panel and represent the office of the Army Chief of Research and Development. Chairman of the committee at White Sands is Dr. Charles C. Lauritsen, professor of physics at California Institute of Technology.

Other members of the committee are Dr. Hendrik W. Bode, vice president of Bell Telephone Laboratories Inc., Whippany, N. M.; Wilbur S. Hinman Jr., Stafford, Va.; and Dr. Edward C. Stevenson, associate director for research at the Laboratories for the Engineering Sciences, University of Virginia.

Among top Army scientists also participating in the study are Dr. Craig M. Crenshaw, chief scientist of the Army Materiel Command, Dr. W. W. Carter, chief scientist of the Army Missile Command, A. W. Rogers, chief engineer of the U. S. Army Electronics Command, Col. Benjamin S. Goodwin, special assistant to the commanding general of the Army Test and Evaluation Command. Accompanying the group were Maj. J. E. McCleary of the Office of Chief of Army Research and Development and Lee E. Davidson, electronic engineer of the Logistics Directorate, Test and Evaluation Command.

The group was welcomed and briefed on the range by Maj. Gen. J. Frederick Thorlin, White Sands commanding general.

Other subjects studied were the range's technical development plan, range scheduling, missile flight safety, major test programs of all Department of Defense range users, optical systems and electronic tracking systems.

Briefings were given by both WSMR staff personnel and contractor employes engaged in programs at the national missile range.

Logistics Management Is Studied

Seven Redstone Arsenal civilian employees and four Army Missile Command officers are attending the Army Project Manager course at the U. S. Army Logistics Management Center, Ft. Lee, Va.

The course is one of 14 offered at the Center devoted to post-graduate level logistics management education.

GSA Spends Millions For Paper And Pens

General Service Administration reports in one year some 900 million paper clips and 60 million pencils are used at a total cost of nearly one million dollars. Only 1,800,000 ball point pens are used at a cost of 1,200,000—but fifteen million pads were issued in one year . . . and 4 million reams of mimeograph paper were issued at a cost of $2,500,000. As the supplier of these and many other office supplies in use everyday of your working life, GSA is interested in Uncle Sam obtaining maximum utility. It asks that the next time you discard a paper clip with waste paper or fail to use up the white space on a scratch pad—think of these statistics.

COL. W. F. KAISER

Col. Kaiser Assigned At White Sands Range

WHITE SANDS MISSILE RANGE, N. M.—Army officials at White Sands Missile Range announced the assignment of Col. William F. Kaiser as the missile range's new Chief of Staff.

Coming to White Sands from Korea where he was commander of the Army Ordnance Depot, Colonel Kaiser succeeds Col. Martin Cunningham who retired from the Army in July.

The WSMR chief of staff entered active service in 1940 and served in ordnance assignments.

He served as deputy chief and later chief in the Control Office of the Army Ballistic Missile Agency at Redstone Arsenal, Ala. While at Redstone, he also served with the Army Ordnance Missile Command Headquarters as chief of Control Office and as deputy to the Deputy Commanding General for Ballistic Missiles until he left for Korea in 1962.

Col. Kaiser is married to the former Blanch M. Swanson of

SFC R. E. Cathey Awarded Degree

SFC Reginald E. Cathey, instructor in the Hawk system at the Army Ordnance Guided Missile School here, was awarded the degree of Bachelor of Science last Friday at summer graduation ceremonies of the Alabama Agricultural & Mechanical College in Huntsville.

Cathey, one of the first Negro instructors named to the faculty of the Missile School, is likewise the first member of his race to complete his college training at the local State institution under the Army's career advancement plan. He has been assigned to OGMS since 1958 and has served 12 years in the Army.

Cathey is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Graham M. Cathey, 1606 East 14th St., Winston-Salem, N. C. He and his wife, Eva, and their two children reside at 105 Whitney Ave., in Huntsville.

Cathey was recently featured in an article on the Missile School published in "Ebony" magazine.

BURNETT TALKS TO GRADUATES

Responsibilities of missile maintenance supervisors and technicians are increasing as efforts to reduce lead time on new systems put weapons into production before all research and development tests are completed.

"Feedback" information on the performance of weapons in the field thus becomes of paramount importance to weapons system managers, declared William P. Burnett, chairman of the control and review board in the Army Missile Command's directorate of supply and maintenance, in an address here last Friday.

Burnett spoke to 54 officers and men of five nations who received diplomas from the Army Ordnance Guided Missile School in a ceremony at the Redstone Arsenal Post Theater.

2nd Lt. Jack E. Lower, 25, of Lafayette, Indiana. They have a son, James. The family is living at 222 Jupiter Dr., WSMR.

Covington, Ky., was high man in the Ordnance Guided Missile Officer's course which included students from France, China, Norway, Turkey and the U. S. He also received the outstanding student award of the Association of the U. S. Army for an average of 96. The award was presented by C. J. Markvart of the Tennessee Valley Chapter.

An AUSA award was also won by Pvt. Gerald E. Friton who averaged 96.3 in the electronics helper course. Pvt. William J. Dunn was honor student in a similar course.

Col. George H. McBride, assistant commandant of OGMS, presided at the ceremony. Prayers were led by Lt. Col. Alister Sinclair, assistant Post chaplain. Music was provided by the 55th Army Band.

CS Commissioner Lists Steps To Raise Efficiency, Cut Costs

"Put more PEP into your operations," Civil Service Commissioner L. J. Andolsek recently told Federal managers attending an incentive awards conference.

Commissioner Andolsek defined PEP as "Progress and Efficiency through People."

He listed eight steps Federal managers should take to raise efficiency and cut costs:

1. Tell employees about the objectives and goals of their work group. "No one," he said, "is going to work very hard if he doesn't know the purpose and if he doesn't have a goal."

2. Ask employees for their help in meeting and exceeding goals; foster a spirit of pride in their ability to exceed the goal. "Only the unusual supervisor does this at present," he said, and asked: "Why shouldn't it be done by all supervisors?"

3. Tell employees about operating-level problems that need attention; be sure they know about solutions that were tried without success. This, he said, can be done in periodic staff conferences.

Ask for Ideas

4. Ask employees for their ideas and suggestions for overcoming these problems. "Frequently," he said, "an employee is waiting to be asked."

"In the meantime, he goes home to his wife and blows off steam, saying, 'I wonder why they don't do this or that or the other.'"

"Employees don't write out suggestions for their boss unless they have seen some convincing demonstration that he is receptive to ideas."

5. Set a goal for each division the supplies are wasted, where the bottlenecks are, where the methods are outdated, where the equipment is inefficient, where instructions are inadequate, and where goals are not clear," he said.

Beyond Job Responsibility

6. Make sure you recommend an award for the constructive idea that goes beyond job responsibility.

"This is follow-through," Mr. Andolsek said, adding: "It expresses appreciation to the idea man and it demonstrates to the whole work force your interest in making improvement and progress."

7. Make sure you recommend an award for the people whose performance is substantially beyond job requirements.

"Whether you use the 'quality' pay increase (authorized under the Federal Salary Reform Act of 1962) or the lump sum award (authorized under the Federal Incentive Awards Act of 1954), you give recognition to the people who help get the job done with fewer man-hours, or ahead of schedule, or the ones who meet emergencies," he said.

Supervisor Awards

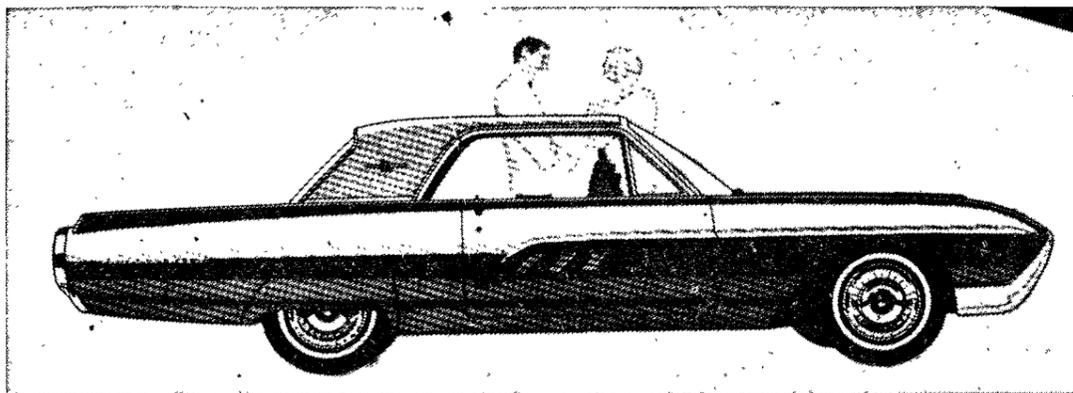

8. Remember that you can give an award to a supervisor who does a particularly effective job of motivating the manpower resources of his group.

"The productivity of his people is the biggest variable a first-line supervisor can work with," Mr. Andolsek said. "His budget is usually set by the comptroller. His machines and equipment are given him by the engineers or management staff. But he usually selects his people, and certainly he has the major impact on their motivation and productivity."

"We must have progress in order to attain the lean, fit, efficient Federal establishment the President has asked for," Mr. Andolsek concluded, "and progress can come only through good ideas and special effort."

REDSTONE ARSENAL, ALABAMA

ARSENAL DRIVERS KEEP ACCIDENTS TO A MINIMUM

Two minor accidents marred an otherwise perfect vehicle safety record for the Army Missile Command during July. Command drivers accumulated over a million miles in Army vehicles. At the same time the Missile Command Safety Office reported only one lost-time injury suffered by a civilian employee during the month. The civilian work force worked over 1.5 million man-hours in July. Contractor employees put in 675,000 manhours and the military personnel of the Command totaled 34,611 man days without a lost time accident. Both the accident rate and the injury rate were below the expected frequency rates for the Missile Command and the Army Materiel Command, although the rates had been reduced following an outstanding safety record established last year. During FY-63 there were 35 lost time injuries recorded by the Command and 27 motor vehicle accidents. The total cost, including first aid treatment and property damage, was $126,488. The report covered the entire Missile Command complex, including the Watertown Arsenal and the Charlotte (N.C.) Ordnance Depot.

Despite such remarkable technological achievements as automation, manpower is—and always will be—indispensable to execution of the Government responsibilities. People, not machines or procedures, constitute the means for making the Federal Government responsive to the needs of the individual citizen and the Nation as a whole.

German Army, Air Force Students Study Pershing

Almost 400 German Army and Air Force students will be in training at the U. S. Army Ordnance Guided Missile School here during the present fiscal year, it was announced this week by Col. William J. Macpherson, commandant.

This will be the largest group from a single nation to be enrolled at the Missile School during any 12-month period since the institution's establishment in 1952, he said.

The increase in German students results from a recent agreement between the U.S.A. and the Federal Republic under which Germany is purchasing the Pershing missile system.

All instruction will be conducted in the English language. However, training manuals are being translated into German and interpreters will assist the students if they encounter language problems.
