General Besson Will Visit Here Tomorrow

Rivalry Aids Success Of Fund Drive

The directorates are friendly feuding again and the rivalry that they are generating is sparking the Arsenal to one of the finest showings even in the Joint Fund Drive.

With the four-week campaign at the half-way point, Arsenal personnel have responded to the solicitation campaign with 51 per cent participation in the National Health Agency drive and 39 per cent in support of the National Service Joint Crusade.

In the friendly feud that is becoming traditional with fund drives at the Arsenal, Supply and Maintenance has the upper hand at this time. Len Twinem, vice chairman for the S&M campaign, has his organization headed for a perfect record with a 93 per cent reading in each of the drives.

However, neither of the other large directorates appears ready to (See RIVALRY on Page 3)

AOA To Hear Gen. Eifler

Government-industry contractor relationships will be discussed today by Brig. Gen. Charles W. Eifler, Deputy Commanding General for Land Combat Systems, Army Missile Command.

He will be speaker for the noon meeting of the Tennessee Valley Post of the American Ordnance Association.

The General's talk will be the kick-off of a new meeting schedule for AOA. In the past, meetings have been held in the evening. The organization's executive committee has decided to try noon luncheon meetings with a one hour deadline as a convenience to members, and to ease competition for attendance between the large number of professional groups which presently have conflicting evening meeting schedules.

FIRST LADIES MEET—Mrs. John G. Zierdt (right), the First Lady of the Army Missile Command, was introduced to the First Lady of the Land last week when Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson made a whirlwind, one-day visit to Huntsville. The two met during a reception held in honor of Mrs. Johnson at Headquarters of the Marshall Space Flight Center.

Cut Costs, Keep Quality Is Goal Of Missilemen

Producing missile hardware for the modern soldier requires vast resources of people, know how and facilities—which add up to money!

As a result, cutting corners wherever possible, without sacrificing quality, is a high priority program at the U. S. Army Missile Command which is encouraging intensified efforts on the part of management personnel to achieve cost reduction.

One successful area has been the sound management practice of buying only what is needed to achieve balanced readiness, thereby reducing invested funds.

The Missile Command has effected a cost reduction of $798,000 in the third quarter of Fiscal Year 1964 through a program of management improvement action. The savings were made on purchases of more than 45 inventory items ranging from electronic parts to nuts and bolts required for maintenance of Army missile systems.

Management improvement action means, simply, that items of high dollar value are being reviewed and procured more often, thus reducing dollars invested in inventory on hand and on order. (See CUT COST on Page 3)

Hawk Contracts Total $5.1 Million

Two contracts totaling more than $5.1 million were awarded Monday to two firms for production of equipment for the Army's Hawk air defense missile system.

The larger of the contracts totaling $3,635,484 was awarded to the Raytheon Co., Lexington, Mass., for production of Hawk missile guidance and control systems.

Farmer's Tool and Supply Corp., Denver, Colo., received a $1,472,870 contract to produce missile shipping containers. The contract was awarded by Watertown Arsenal, Watertown, Mass. Farmer's Tool and Supply Corp. is a small (See HAWK on Page 3)

Senate Gets Nomination For 4th Star

The boss of the U. S. Army Materiel Command will make an official visit to Redstone Arsenal Thursday for a briefing on facilities at the Army Missile Command.

Lt. Gen. Frank S. Besson, Jr., Commanding General of AMC, who has just been nominated for his fourth star, will spend the day at the Directorate of Procurement and Production being briefed on data retrieval, exchange and documentation procedures in use here. Included in the briefings will be a look-see at the EDS-0009 (Engineering Data System-0009), ADRES (Army Data Retrieval Engineering System), and the Documentation Center.

Nominated for his fourth star on March 24 by President Johnson, and now awaiting Congressional approval, Gen. Besson will be the youngest four-star general on active duty with the Army.

He will continue to serve as Commanding General of the Materiel Command at the higher grade.

Gen. Besson will fly into Redstone Airfield Thursday morning for the day-long briefings, and (See GEN. BESSON on Page 3)

Col. Mehlinger Becomes Lance Project Manager

The Army-industry team developing the high-priority Lance missile system yesterday welcomed a new quarterback.

The new voice calling the signals is that of Lt. Col. Walter E. Mehlinger, a man who has worked with Army missiles for the past 12 years.

Col. Mehlinger, the new Lance Project Manager, was introduced to the Lance team by Brig. Gen. Charles W. Eifler, Deputy Commanding General for Land Combat Systems at the Army Missile Command.

Col. Mehlinger met his teammates at the opening of the Second Lance Quarterly Status Review at the Missile Command headquarters. Sessions will conclude today.

Attending the meeting are representatives of all military agencies and private contractor firms participating in the Lance program. The new missile system is being designed to provide greater fire support to Army divisions.

Officials attending the Lance review include those from the Department of the Army, the Combat Developments Command and several elements of the Materiel Command. In addition, officials from the weapon system's prime contractor, Ling-Temco-Vought Michigan, are attending the progress review with their sub-contractors.

Col. Mehlinger will head the Lance team as successor to Col. W. W. Holmes, who retired from active Army duty at the end of March. As Project Manager, he will answer directly to Gen. Eifler.

Col. Mehlinger takes over the Lance Project with a broad background of work related to missile systems and other advanced weapons. He formerly served with Gen. Eifler in the Office, Chief of Ordnance, Washington, D. C.

University Prexy Says Try Fiction

Missile maintenance specialists were advised last week to lay aside their technical manuals and electronic charts occasionally and delve into the realm of fiction—and not science fiction.

The advice came from Dr. LeRoy A. Martin, president of the University of Chattanooga, who addressed 55 graduates from five Allied nations at the Army Ordnance Guided Missile School last Friday.

Colleges today are grateful if they can obtain students who have acquired the habit of reading, Dr. Martin said, for such students make the greatest progress in today's universities.

The best students of all—the ones who almost invariably succeed in their professional jobs, he said, are those who read a most indiscriminately, who often disagree with standard texts, absorb ideas old and new and range through fiction, history, biography, philosophy and the whole spectrum of human experience.

Dr. Martin was introduced by I. Col. Lawrence B. Kelly, professor of military science at the University of Chattanooga at a ceremony in the Post Theater presided over by Col. William J. Macpherson, OGMS commandant.

For an average of 96 in the guided missile repair course, P. Frank E. Bakos of Carteret, N. J. received an outstanding student award from John E. Hatch, J. president of the Tennessee Valley Chapter of the Association of the U. S. Army. Bakos came into the Army from Rutgers University.

Honor graduates included Sgt. John J. Arnold of Cranford, N. J.; Sp/5 Joe A. Apodaca of Denver; and S/Sgt. Michel Ramage of France.

Cherished American Freedom Is Right Of Privacy In Home

(An award-winning editorial from the San Diego, Calif., Evening Tribune, reprinted with permission.)

Home is a sacred place to us, a place of refuge, of nourishment for body and soul, of growth and love—home. This is our world within a world.

And just as we wish man's bigger sphere to be free and secure, so do we insist on the safety and sanctity of our individual homes.

The Founding Fathers, steeped in the belief of man's dignity and worth, and wary of jack-booted tyranny against his home and his person, sought safeguards for himself and for all Americans who were to come after them.

In Article IV of the Bill of Rights — the first 10 Amendments to the Constitution—they showed their concern in these words:

"The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures, shall not be violated, and no warrants shall issue, but upon probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched, and the persons or things to be seized."

This fundamental right of privacy in one's home is a cherished part of America's freedoms today because we can contrast it with the absence of such decent regard for the individual in other lands.

The abode may be humble, it may be stately, it may be bare, or crammed with elegance, or harbor dark secrets.

But the law-abiding citizen can retire at night, secure in the knowledge that his privacy will be respected; that he will not know the dread of the rap on the door; the unwarranted intrusion into the world of the free American family.

The freedom of our homes is closely allied with another right we hold dear: the right to move about freely at home and abroad.

We move freely in our cities and counties and between states, subject only to the regulations which have been adopted freely for the safety and well-being of society.

The regulations on travel abroad are not denials of the right to move freely, but actually expressions of the government's concern for the individual's freedom when he is away from the homeland.

The withholding of passports to areas wherein an American's freedom and safety cannot be assured—such as Communist China—is an example.

We believe that a man was meant to be free—free to come and go at his will, so long as the exercise of this freedom does not infringe upon the freedom of another.

We believe a man should be free to wrap himself and his family in the intimacy of his home, and be guaranteed against unlawful prying and entry.

These are bulwarks of the American way of life. (AFPS)

TIPS FROM THE BOSS—Maj. Gen. Raiph J. Butchers, Provost Marshal General for the Department of the Army, talks with Post police officials during his staff visit to Redstone Arsenal last week. Gen. Butchers addressed members of the civilian police force as well as employees of the Provost Marshal's Office.

13th Ordnance Transferred To OGMS From AMSC

The 13th Ordnance Detachment (explosive disposal) has been transferred from the Army Missile Support Command to the Army Ordnance Guided Missile School, Col. William J. Macpherson, commandant, has announced.

The group, under the command of Lt. Vincent Villani, is charged with the mission of rendering safe any hazardous or explosive items at Redstone Arsenal. In addition, the unit carries on a program of instruction for civil defense and police department units in Mississippi, Alabama and Tennessee on the proper methods of explosive disposals.

Two such classes were held in March in Mississippi and another is planned there in April. A similar class also is planned in Tennessee next month.

The 13th is attached to OGMS and is part of the Third Army Command. They are under command and operational control of the 547th Explosive Ordnance Detachment at Fort McPherson.

March 6, 1836—Alamo garrison fell after 13-day siege by Mexicans under Santa Anna; 187 Texans killed. On 21-22 April, Mexican forces were defeated and Santa Anna captured at Battle of San Jacinto.

The 4th German Sergeant Missile Support Detachment commanded by Capt. Heinz Leder of the West German Army said farewell to the Ordnance Guided Missile School Wednesday in ceremonies in Bankhead Hall. It was the first general support unit from Germany to complete training at OGMS.

Guest speakers were Lt. Col. Hans Proske, assistant military attache to the United States, and Col. William J. Macpherson, OGMS commandant. Present for the ceremony was Col. Hans Uslar, German liaison officer to the Army Materiel Command.

The unit will now go to Fort Sill, Okla., for further training with an artillery missile unit of the German Army.

Howard Andrews, vice-chairman in P&P, indicated that all but four of the 18 reporting agencies in his directorate had reached 100 per cent. The directorate-wide figures are 84 per cent, for the Health Agencies, and 76 per cent, Joint Crusade.

R&D has reached 76 and 71 per cent respectively for the two parts of the drive, according to Walt Redden.

CUT COST

By the same token, benefits are also realized in that detailed management and special control are being exercised over these items, lessening the possibility of stockpiling excess and obsolete inventory.

Costs incurred by more frequent review and purchase actions are more than offset by storage and administrative savings due to reduced stock on hand.

Joe C. Cleere of the Missile Command's Supply and Maintenance Directorate says:

"Our supply managers are making the President's austerity program a reality at Redstone Arsenal."

"We are supporting highly complex and expensive missile systems," he said, "which are critical to the defense of the free world. We are not forgetting, however, our responsibility to the taxpayer—to do the job at the lowest possible cost!"

The Raytheon contract was awarded by the Army's Boston Procurement District, acting for the Hawk Project Office of the Army Missile Command here.

Hawk is the Army's anti-aircraft missile system designed as a defense against high performance targets at extremely low altitudes.

The dart-like missile is about 16 feet long and 14 inches in diameter.

The Hawk is used by both the Army and the U. S. Marine Corps.

System management is provided by the Army Missile Command.

DISCUSS PERSONNEL MANAGEMENT—Roy K. Davenport, Deputy Under Secretary of the Army for Personnel Management, chats with officials of the U. S. Army Missile Command during his recent visit to Redstone Arsenal. At left is Col. Robert M. Allgeier, Assistant for Intelligence, Operations and Security and at right is Jack N. degree in civil engineering from the Citadel, Charleston, S. C., in 1942.

Col. Mehlinger was commissioned in the Army Artillery Corps in 1942. Ten years later, he was transferred to the Army Ordnance Corps.

In 1946, Col. Mehlinger entered the graduate school of the University of Chicago, where he received his Master of Science Degree in nuclear physics in 1948.

The son of a retired Marine Corps Colonel, the Army officer has served in Hawaii, Saipan, Tinian, Leyte, Okinawa, Oklahoma, New Mexico, Rhode Island, Germany, Pennsylvania, and Washington, D. C.

He comes to direct the Lance ballistic missile program from the Missile Command's parent agency, the U. S. Army Materiel Command.

Col. Mehlinger was a member of the Army's Project 80, the committee responsible for the Army wide reorganization in 1962, when the Army Materiel Command was created.

Col. Mehlinger will direct development of the Army's first missile system to use pre-packaged storable liquid propellant.

Prime contractor for the system is Ling-Temco-Vought's LTV Michigan Division. The Lance is being designed to replace the Lance, Honest John and possibly the Little John.

THREE NEW ANNOUNCEMENTS

The U. S. Board of Civil Examiners has announced openings in three areas.

Raytheon is the prime contractor for the system.

CWO and Mrs. Andy Garrabrant were winners at Monday night bridge last week at the Squirrel Hill Officers Club.

Runnersup in the women's and men's groups were Mrs. Jay Billings and Maj. Jack Donnelly.

Mrs. Peter Iber is no longer handling reservations. Instead, two members of the group, Mrs. Jack Donnelly and Mrs. A. Cobban will accept reservations until Sunday afternoon to play with the group.

Hats Can Be Made From Many Things

Spring is when college students turn to stunts and the ladies turn to mad hats.

First group to embrace the mad hatter craze this Spring was the Army Missile Command Officers Wives who concocted fantasy, utility and fun for headgear at the monthly coffee at the Squirrel Hill Officers Club.

Maddest of the creations was a tinker toy airplane belonging to the Wyatt Bros. The model was Mrs. S. A. Wyatt whose husband is on the technical staff of the Research and Development Directorate.

The funniest hat was a diet, complete with food and instructions, perched atop the coiffure of Mrs. Joe R. Tinney whose husband is in the Sergeant Project Manager Office.

Mrs. C. L. Ferrell was adjudged the prettiest. It was a pixie drape creation of pink net with deeper pink flowers in the folds. Lt. Col. Ferrell is in the Supply and Maintenance Directorate.

The occasion was a brunch with approximately 50 members of the Missile Command Officers Wives and their guests meeting in the Redstone Room.

Wives of officers in the Sergeant Project were in charge of the arrangements. They all wore hats of tinselled snow topped by a miniature Sergeant missile pointing skyward.

The coffee table was covered with Easter decorations including a white tree trunk blossoming with tinselled eggs, some of them baskets for miniature chicks and flowers.

The prizes were donated by three florists in Huntsville: Giles, Alberts and Ropers.

School Wives Present Spring Fashion Show

Wives of officers of the Ordnance Guided Missile School sponsored a Spring show of clothes from Dunnivant's and included a collection of diamonds and other precious stones.

No one color dominated the collection modelled by 12 members of the Wives Group. The models were trained by Jane Whitley and included Mrs. Robert Dudley, Mrs. Verne Wolfe, Mrs. James MacDonnell, Mrs. Michael Deegan, Mrs. Don Maliskey, Mrs. Estel Hobbs, Mrs. Thomas Lewis, Mrs. James Hodges, Mrs. Raymond Rembish, Mrs. Thomas Christianson, Mrs. David Landram and Mrs. George Harrison.

Navy, red, yellow, blues and blacks appeared in shifts and suits. The prints in materials ranging from the softest silks to sturdy denims came straight from the palette of a surrealist artist using daring combinations of blue and fuschia, turquoise and avocado, and black and white.

Styles ranged from a prim sailor design in three pieces and topped with rolled-brim white straw hat to a vivid polynesian silk print in a floor-length gown with a V-back ending near the waistline.

A heavenly blue dressing gown hung in almost classic Greek lines from the shoulders and flowed softly around the wearer.

One full sleeved shift came close to a harlequin pattern with alternating diamonds of blues and greys, covering the torso and accented from shoulders and hem with cones of the same shades.

The raincoats shown were in red and in white, both accented with black. Accessories included slim umbrellas, bulky bags — one an oversized canvas case in red with black patent leather handles and bindings. A wig and a wig case were shown, the former in conjunction with a cocktail dress, the latter with a travel suit.

The collection had few masculine touches. Even the coveralls were softly feminine, in washed blue with a white blouse.

Mentor for the overall planning was Mrs. Robert Robinson. Her committee included Mrs. Jack Lower, Mrs. Monroe Webb, Mrs. Richard Field, Mrs. Ray Lee, Mrs. Ward Gilbert, Miss Mary Gilbert and Mrs. Leonard Stanley. Reservations chairman was Mrs. Willard Anderson. The show drew approximately 480 women.

Accompanist for the models was Malcolm Tate at the organ, and hair styles were donated by the Studio of Hair Design.

Mr. Throne of Dunnivant's supplied the jewelry, including a 16 carat ruby, pearl earrings and matching ring valued at approximately $7,000. Total value of the diamonds, emerald and other precious stones was estimated at $100,000, but these were not for sale.

Redstone Starts Fast, Loses Third Army Basketball Tournament At Bragg

The inability to sustain early leads proved the undoing of the Redstone Rockets last week when they were unsuccessful in their attempt to capture the Third Army basketball championship played at Ft. Bragg.

In each of the four contests the Rockets jumped off to early leads, and in each instance they lost the range on the basket and fell behind. Twice the locals were able to mount winning rallies late in the game, but in the other two the deficits were too much to overcome. The Rockets opened play with an 80-71 win over Ft. Stewart and came right back to thrash the Atlanta General Depot, 56-41. Ft. Jackson handed the Rockets their first setback to the tune of 102-50 and Ft. Gordon applied the crusher with a 102-71 decision.

After winning the first two games, Rocket coach, Bill Watkins was confident the Arsenal cagers led by Frank McMillan and Ed Lucas, would be in the scrap all the way. But that was before he had a chance to see the tall and talented Jackson team in action.

The South Carolinians fell behind on three quick baskets by the rockets but caught fire and took the lead with five minutes gone in the first half and from there built an insurmountable lead. By the halftime intermission they had stretched their lead to 50-19.

The loss to Ft. Gordon was the real heartbreaker for the locals who were forced to play the game a scant two hours after the close of the game with Ft. Jackson.

As in each of the other games the Rockets jumped off to a fast start and after falling behind momentarily came back and were in contention until five minutes from the end. They trailed by a single point at the halfway point, 50-49, and were only down by ten with five minutes to go, 78-68.

But then the strain of playing two games in a short span of time took its toll and the Rockets were unable to keep up with the fast breaking Georgians. The Gordon five outscored the Rockets 24-3 during the closing minutes.

McMillan, a one-time Livingstone College athlete from Brooklyn, N. Y., was the one really bright light in the Rocket camp throughout the four games and he was the leading scorer in each. The OGMS soldier hit the nets for a total of 115 points.

Lucas accumulated 51 points and George Weidemann added 49 in the four games.

Missile School is being planned along with several games with teams from other bases and colleges in Alabama and Tennessee, according to Capt. Paul E. Cothran, sports officer at the School.

The teams are made up of students from Belgium, France, Denmark and Germany. The German and French teams are scheduled for a four-game tour May 16-17 in Atlanta. Each team will play Georgia Tech and Lockheed Aircraft in a pair of doubleheaders.

Other games being arranged include a similar trip to Montgomery for matches with Auburn University and the Air University at Maxwell Air Force Base and with a newly organized soccer association at the University of Tennessee.

The level of intramural play has shown a marked improvement recently, to such an extent that the French team edged the previously unbeaten German team 4-3.

New Tax Twist May Cost You At End Of This Year

(Note: The following is an article which appeared in The Washington Post, March 9, 1964. In order to prevent large, lump sum payments of unwieldy tax bills at the end of the year, it strongly reflects the advisability of computing 1964 taxes in advance.)

A peculiar twist to the 1964 Revenue Act will leave some taxpayers with an unpleasant tax liability at year end.

Tax collector Mortimer Caplin will step forward and advise these people they owe money to Internal Revenue they never dreamed about.

Here is the way the law works:

Because of the reduction in personal tax liability for 1964 and thereafter, the rate of withholding on wages has been lowered from 18 per cent to 14 per cent. At the same time, individual tax rates are being cut in two steps to a 14 per cent to 70 per cent schedule in 1965. But this year the personal rate is 16 per cent to 77 per cent.

New Rates Not in Effect

Thus, since the 1964 withholding rate is based on lower rates which are not in effect until 1965, there may be too much left in some employees' pocketbooks this year. Those who fall into this category will have a larger tax due at year's end instead of an expected refund.

For example, Taxpayer A earns $12,000 a year, with payments semi-monthly. He is married with two children. Because of past experience he has cut his withholding exemptions to two rather than owe taxes at the end of the year.

For 1963, at the 18 per cent withholding rate, he had $1918 withheld in contrast to an actual liability of $1836, based on the 10 per cent standard deduction, and four $600 personal exemptions. At the end of 1963, he was due a refund of $82.08.

How to Avoid Liability

Contrast A's 1963 position with 1964. With identical income and deductions his income and withholding tax will be computed this way:

Withholding for the first four pay periods (since he is paid semi-monthly) was at the 18 percent rate, and for the remaining portion of the year, at 14 per cent. For the full year, withholding will be $1562, with actual tax (at 1964 rates) of $1621, leaving A with a debt to Internal Revenue of about $59.

Taxpayer A and others in his group have a couple of methods of avoiding such a liability. First, he might consider reducing the number of his withholding exemptions by filing an amended Form W-4 with his employer. If such a course is not warranted or possible, the taxpayer may arrange with his employer to have more tax withheld from his wages than the amount shown in withholding tables.

Taxpayer A had another problem, too.

As A had the good sense to work out his taxes in advance, he discovered that in 1964 he must file a declaration of estimated tax since he will have gross income in excess of $10,000 and taxes withheld will fall more than $40 short of his final 1964 tax.

But by filing the amended W-4 form or having more withheld from wages, a taxpayer can forestall an unwieldy tax bill at the end of the year and thus avoid the filing of a declaration of estimated tax.

REDSTONE ARSENAL, ALABAMA

TIFFANY

A FIRST AT REDSTONE—A Department of Army Certificate of Appreciation for Patriotic Civilian Service has been awarded John A. Belding by Maj. Gen. John G. Zierdt, Commanding General, Army Missile Command. As far as can be determined, this is the first time that Patriotic Civilian Service award has been made at Redstone Arsenal. Belding is a contractor pilot of Army Aircraft for the Missile Command Aviation Branch.

Belding Receives Award For Patriotic Service

John A. Belding, contractor for the Army Missile Command, has been awarded the Department of Army Certificate of Appreciation for Patriotic Civilian Service. It is believed that he is the first to be so honored at Redstone Arsenal.

Presentation of the citation was made by Maj. Gen. John G. Zierdt, Commanding General of the Missile Command.

Belding, who is with the Transportation Division of the Aviation Branch, pilots the command's C-54 aircraft.

The award cited him for the exemplary manner in which he has conducted his duties. It spoke of his contributions to the national effort during the Cuban crisis when he helped transport materiel and equipment to certain areas in Florida:

"He accomplished his missions by flying with very high priority and dangerous cargo at unusual hours, with very short notice, and at much sacrifice to his family and personal life.

"He has superior respect for and observes all rules and regulations. Consequently, he has had no accidents nor flight delays which are attributed to his carelessness. Because of his outstanding traits as an Aircraft Commander, he is highly respected by his crew and Army personnel assigned to the Aviation Branch.

"The accomplishments . . . plus many compliments received from high level military and civilian executives who have flown with Mr. Belding, leave no doubt that he has contributed much to the Missile Command, the Department of the Army and his country."

First National To Build Branch Bank On Arsenal

Col. Thomas W. Cooke, Commander, U. S. Army Missile Support Command, announced Saturday that the Secretary of the Army has authorized The First National Bank of Huntsville, to construct a Branch Bank on Redstone Arsenal. This authorization was the direct result of an unsolicited proposal to the Department of the Army by the Bank officials.

Since February, 1943, The First National Bank of Huntsville has been the U. S. Treasury Department-designated Federal Depository to provide the official banking services required by the Federal Government's activities at Redstone.

Since June 1, 1960, The First National Bank has operated a branch bank in Bldg. 3651 to meet the minimum cashier-teller banking needs for military and civilian personnel here. When the First National Branch Bank opens in September it will provide all types of banking services.

The bank will be in the community center near the Chapel, Theatre, Service Club, and Post Exchange.

"Many thanks for your loyal support that has made possible our growth to a full service branch bank."

DOES ARMY OWE YOU TRAVEL PAY?

WASHINGTON (ANF) — Active duty and former members of the Armed Forces will benefit from a new law which opens the way for filing travel claims.

Public Law 88-238 is the basis for authority to pay claims for travel performed on a previous change of station order. Under this law, service personnel whose orders were canceled or modified while they were on leave or enroute to a new station may be reimbursed.

Formerly, a member was entitled only to travel reimbursement from his old duty station to the new station even though he may have traveled hundreds of miles in the wrong direction, unaware of a change.

The period covered extends from October 1, 1949, to December 23, 1963, date of the legislation. Deadline for filing is December 22, 1964.

Details and assistance can be obtained from the Finance Office or Personnel Office of any military installation.

Soldier Finds Simple Way To Get Things Done

Leave it to a soldier to come up with the simplest way to get things done.

It's a time-honored tradition that stretches from Concord Bridge to the marshy Mekong Delta—and still works near-miracles in the vastly more complex age of missilery.

Take the instance of a thoughtful, soft-spoken soldier-scientist at the Army Missile Command, where the senior service's polished new missile systems are born.

Army SP/4 Don R. York, a chemist by training and professional inclination, has reduced a potentially monumental task to its simplest form, and it works remarkably well.

The soldier's job is a tedious, continuing study of the size and shape of certain particles used in solid propellants that power most of today's sleek new weapons.

It's a well known fact that the size and shape of particles have a significant effect on how well the propellant burns.

And it means a lot to increase the density of the propellant, or make more punch per pound.

In addition, particles have a profound mark on how well the propellant burns by eliminating vacant spaces or "voids."

All of which serves to point up the importance of York's research and development projects.

Even though York has the particle study field to himself, he is typical of many highly skilled enlisted men playing key roles in a variety of intriguing projects at this missile center.

York sums up his work with characteristic simplicity and a grin:

"It's sort of like watching underwater movies."

York's point is a lucid dramatization of his job. Particles which come under York's scrutiny flow suspended in a liquid solution beneath a microscope.

"I really don't measure the particles," he points out. "Only the resistance they cause when they pass through a narrow opening."

Because the particles are suspended in a solution when they pass under York's eyes, the soldier-scientist has the impression of watching underwater movies, with shadowy shapes flowing under the lens.

While a staggering amount of equipment could be assembled to do the job, York works with a simple vacuum system. Equipment used is purchased from standard commercial firms.

York came to the Missile Command's Propulsion Laboratory well prepared to take up the reins of particle study.

He is a graduate of Loyola University of Chicago, where he received a Bachelor of Science degree in chemistry.

SOLDIER-SCIENTIST STUDIES PARTICLES — An Army soldier-scientist, Sp/4 Don R. York, makes intricate adjustments on a device he uses to study particles in solid propellant for missiles. The crew-cut soldier is a chemist working as a propellant particle analyst at the Army Missile Command. He performs his intriguing examinations in the Research and Development Directorate's Propulsion Laboratory.

Command Spends $700,000 In South During February

The Army Missile Command spent more than $700,000 in the southeast during February to cover the purchases of goods and services in support of the Army's missile and rocket programs.

Another $650,000 went to firms throughout the United States for the same kinds of supplies and services.

Huntsville firms received more than $440,000 worth of business. Birmingham concerns shared approximately $80,000, and $55,000 went to other Alabama cities.

The total of business going to Georgia and Tennessee was $130,000.

The Army bought such items as office supplies, chemicals for laboratory use, repairs for equipment, electrical energy, medical and dental supplies, food, and all the materials necessary to keep daily operations going at the Missile Command.

Administration of these multiple orders, varying from a few cents to several thousand dollars, is the responsibility of the personnel in the Missile Command's Purchasing and Contracting Division and Procurement and Production Directorate.

These orders do not include the contracts for a million dollars or more which are placed with major firms throughout the United States to procure missiles and related equipment.

MISDIALING IS NO MISDEMEANOR

A misdialled telephone number can reap surprising results.

This is uniquely true at the Army Missile Command, a vast center of mysterious goings-on, where the Army's polisher missile systems are born.

One slip of the finger and a cool voice answers:

"Emergency Operations."

Even the most accomplished misdialer is apt to feel he's accidentally tripped a fire alarm, and that the police will be along shortly to ask a barrage of embarrassing questions.

But rest easy.

Chances are good that the secretary on the other end of the line will actually be relieved if you slipped.

For the Missile Command's Office of Emergency Operations is geared for the single-minded task of cranking up for massive mobilization and movement in the event it should ever become necessary to vacate sprawling Redstone Arsenal.

It is the office responsible for pulling off such practical passive defense tests as were seen last year when some 20,000 employees evacuated the installation under mock emergency conditions.

The Emergency Operations' job is not something simple, for it must acquaint the Army's missile making men and women with the realistic dangers of all-out warfare, its precautions and its consequences.

Although the office has been in existence for the past couple of years, it has only recently made the desirability and necessity for long-range "emergency" planning felt on a wide scale.

This is what the office of Mobilization and Emergency Operations is aiming at in its effort to cope with potential emergency conditions:

—An effective plan to warn employees at the earliest possible time, using horns, sirens and telephones.

—A plan for evacuation and/or shelter.

—Orientation of families of personnel.

—Preparation of family emer-

Letter Writing Contest Focuses On Voting Rights

VALLEY FORGE, Pa. (AFPS)—Officials of the Freedoms Foundation Letter Awards Program for Armed Forces members have announced that the 1964 contest will focus on voting, under the theme, "My Vote: Freedom's Privilege."

Competition for the $1,000 first prize and 100 other cash prizes totaling $7,500 opens April 1 and closes November 1. All members of the Armed Forces on active duty are eligible to enter.

Cash awards include 50 of $100 each and 50 of $50 each. A George Washington Honor Medal will go with each cash award, and a number of medals will go to top entries that fall short of cash awards, it was announced.

Letters must be limited to 500 words. Each entry must include full name, rank or serial number, branch of service, military address and home address. Type or write plainly on one side of paper only. Entries should be sent to Freedoms Foundation, Valley Forge, Pa.

Letters entered in the competition must be non-partisan in approach, and should stress the American heritage of freedom. Letters should discuss the responsibility of all Americans, including those in uniform, to vote intelligently—after they have studied issues and candidates, officials said.

Five top winners will be invited to Washington for the Presidential Inauguration, one each for the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marine Corps and Coast Guard. There they will receive their cash awards and medals and meet top officials of their respective services, as well as U. S. Senators from their home states.

Winners of the next five awards will be invited here on George Washington's Birthday, Feb. 22, 1965, to receive their awards. They will then go to Washington for visits with top officials and trips to historic sites.
