Ready For Real Thing

A Civil Defense disaster drill was held on Friday, involving elements of the entire Madison County area. The drill assumed the touchdown of tornados in Huntsville and on Redstone, and an aircraft crash at the Huntsville-Madison County Jetplex.

The drill was used to test an emergency medical transportation plan utilizing helicopters assigned to Flight Operations at Redstone.

Simulated victims of the airport crash were flown directly to the Ambulatory Care Center in downtown Huntsville. The victims were role-played by Flight Operations personnel and included Sergeant Gary Merritt (compound fracture of the femur), Specialist-4 Bradley Theis (hysteria), and Specialist-4 Daniel Luke (neck and whiplash injuries).

Concerning the success of the trial run, Major Michael Lopriore, chief of Flight Operations, commented, "A lot of lessons were learned, and we're more alert for when the real thing happens. It was well-worth the effort."

SERIOUS INJURY—Sgt. Gary Merritt

AER Is There—When Needed

Every year Army members and their families face emergencies when funds in their bank accounts are low or non-existent, yet there are urgent needs to meet crises.

The traditional channel for securing financial aid at such times is Army Emergency Relief (AER) through interest free loans or outright grants up to $300, depending on the circumstances.

AER has been in existence for 35 years to help Army personnel, active duty and retired, their families, and spouses and orphan children of deceased members.

A death or sudden illness in an immediate family, a delay in pay for a soldier during transfer, or other situations beyond the control of the Army member are examples of situations covered by AER.

The AER officer at an Army post—1st Lt. Larry G. Abrams is the AER officer at Redstone—is there to receive applications for loans or grants when needed. A soldier first contacts his commanding officer, then goes to the AER officer.

Last year, AER provided $27,730.87 in assistance to Army personnel and their families at Redstone. Total amount collected during the local drive was $4,765.44.

The only source of funds is through contributions from Army people, active duty and retired. No appeal for funds is made outside the Army.

A campaign to collect funds for AER is scheduled annually. It is from March 14 through April 22 this year at Redstone with Maj. J. M. Roberts as Project Officer. The kick off for the drive, which covers three pay days, was held yesterday.

Contributions may be mailed to AER, Bldg. 3484, Redstone Arsenal, Al, 35809. Each unit on the Arsenal, that includes military personnel, has a project officer to receive contributions.

SERIOUS FRIGHT—Sp. 4 Bradley Theis

Here's Where Your Money Goes

Income and social insurance taxes are the largest sources of Federal revenues. In 1976, individuals paid $131.6 billion in income taxes and corporations paid $41.4 billion. Social security and other insurance and retirement taxes and contributions totaled $92.7 billion. Receipts from excise taxes were $17 billion. The remaining $17.3 billion of receipts came from a variety of sources.

Government revenues provide a wide range of public services. Following is a breakdown of how the Federal Government dollar—basically your dollar—was spent in 1976.

National Defense: $90.2 billion. Twenty-five cents of each dollar spent by the Government in 1976 went for equipping and modernizing our Armed Forces, for military assistance abroad, and for atomic energy defense activities.

International Affairs: $4.5 billion. More than one cent of each dollar went for international programs, such as economic and technical assistance, Food for Peace, and the operation of embassies abroad.

General Government: $3.0 billion. About one cent of each dollar went for managing Government finances and property, and other general activities.

General Science and Space: $4.2 billion. Spending for development of space shuttle, other space research and technology, and general science and basic research took one cent of each Federal dollar.

Natural Resources, Environment, and Energy: $11.7 billion. Programs to maintain and conserve the Nation's natural resources, control pollution, and promote energy research and development took three cents of each Federal dollar.

Agriculture: $2.0 billion. One-half cent of each dollar spent was used for farm income stabilization, agricultural research, and food inspection.

Commerce and Transportation: $17.2 billion. Programs to assist in the development of transportation through funds for highway construction, mass transit, and railroads; operation of Federal airways and grants for airport construction; the Coast Guard; support of mortgage credit and thrift insurance; the Federal payment to the Postal Service; and other aids to commerce accounted for nearly five cents of the Federal dollar.

Where it goes:

Community and Regional Development: $5.0 billion. One and one-half cents of each dollar were spent on grants and loans to develop both urban and rural areas and on programs for disaster relief and insurance.

Education, Training, and Social Services: $17.7 billion. Five cents of each dollar went to improve elementary, secondary, and vocational education and aid to college students; training and employment services; and grants to States for social services.

Health: $33.6 billion. Through medicare and medicaid, the Government helps to pay the medical bills of the Nation's aged and poor. In addition, the Government provides funds for medical research, training for health professions, construction of health facilities, disease prevention and control, and consumer safety. These programs took nine cents of each dollar.

Income Security: $126.9 billion. This category includes social security, unemployment, and other disability and retirement benefits which are financed by taxes specifically levied for these programs. It also includes cash, housing, and food assistance for the needy. These programs accounted for nearly 35 cents of each dollar.

Veterans: $18.4 billion. Compensation and pensions, hospital care and medical treatment, education and training, life insurance benefits, and other veterans programs took about five cents of the Government dollar.

Law Enforcement and Justice: $3.3 billion. Enforcement of Federal laws, judicial and correctional activities, and financial support for law enforcement activities of State and local governments took one cent of each budget dollar.

Revenue Sharing and General Aid: $7.1 billion. Almost two cents of each Federal dollar was given to State and local governments to spend according to their own needs and priorities subject to only minimal Federal restrictions.

Net Interest: $27.7 billion. Interest payments on debt held by the public required about eight cents of each dollar.

* The breakdown of cents per dollar is approximate, not exact.

Question: I wore a badge for years. Now they say I don't need one anymore. Why do some of us wear a badge and some of us not have to wear a badge? I thought everything we did here was important. If this is to save money it's a dumb way to do it.

ANSWER: Setting up MIRCOM and MIRADCOM made it necessary to issue new security badges. In the past everyone had to wear a badge. Now they are being issued only to people who must regularly enter secure areas.

It's not being done to save money although some will be saved by not issuing badges to everyone.

Those who no longer wear the badge have mixed reactions if a quick telephone check the other day is any indication. A few people felt not wearing the badge was a loss of prestige or status. Most of the men and women we talked to said they did not miss wearing the badge. Women, in particular, seemed glad not to try and figure out how to hang the things on their clothing.

A few people, apparently some who forgot to wear their badge from time to time, said they were happy to be rid of the hassle.

Some expressed concern that they now had no way to identify people and to tell government employees from contractors. When told that contractors would continue to wear the badge, a few asked: "Suppose they take the badge off?"

The answer to that one is you are still responsible to know the people you are talking to and who are in your work area. When in doubt, ask them for identification.

Major Improvements

A wide range of pollution abatement and environmental improvement and protection work is proposed for Redstone in an Environmental Program Plan prepared by Facilities Engineer.

Looking toward tougher regulatory requirements in the future, the plan lists a number of proposals for water and air pollution abatement, as well as forest, game and land management projects.

WASTE WATER

Beginning July 1 the installation's waste water monitoring program is being stepped up under terms of new discharge permits obtained from Environmental Protection Agency. The program will include daily measurement for things like oxygen demand, suspended solids, chlorine, dissolved oxygen and some heavy metals, with average measurements reported to EPA periodically. The discharge permits last until 1981 when new water quality standards take effect.

Upgrading the arsenal's sewage treatment to meet the 1981 standards is expected to cost several million dollars, according to Bill Schroeder of the FE Environmental Office. Two of the three plants date from the early days of the arsenal, Schroeder said, and the other was built 18 years ago.

An architectural and engineering survey into reworking the plants or building a new central plant is presently being done by the Corps of Engineers, which will draw on data from water quality surveys by the Army Environmental Hygiene Agency in April and June. More than two hundred discharge points will be examined to find out what is in the discharge and how to treat it.

A machine that generates ozone to neutralize cyanide in processing wastes is slated to be installed at the Photo Lab. A similar machine has been installed at the motion picture lab.

A monthly inspection and cleaning of water-oil separators began recently. The arsenal has numerous separators in use in vehicle maintenance and other areas. The separators are used to prevent oil from getting into domestic sewer lines or receiving ditches and streams.

DRINKING WATER

A contract is expected to be let in June for installation of sludge settling basins at the three water treatment plants here. The sludge is solids removed in treatment and alum used to settle them. The sludge will be put in landfills after drying in the basins instead of being discharged into streams.

The installation of a large main to prevent water shortages in high demand periods in the northeast part of the arsenal is also planned.

CLEANER AIR

Late this summer the Army Environmental Hygiene Agency will run an air quality survey here.

Funds are being requested in the FY79 budget for an incinerator for hazardous material to supplant open pit burning of dangerous wastes, and in FY80 for a new centrally-located multi-fuel boiler plant that would burn coal primarily, and burn cleanly.

Being considered as boiler plant adjuncts are incinerators that use trash to preheat water before it goes into the boiler to be made into steam. Besides saving on the cost of preheating—it's now done with oil—the incinerators would substantially reduce the amount of solid waste buried in landfills.

NATURAL RESOURCES

A number of proposals in the areas of forest, land and game management are in the Environmental Program Plan. They include tree planting and harvesting, weed control, drainage and idle land improvements, fish pond improvement and construction and game plot management.

Around 5,000 pine seedlings are being put out this month. They are being planted at an old sanitary landfill, on a plot near the Photo Lab where a pond contaminated with arsenic in World War II has been filled and on a number of small areas to reduce mowing.

"After this year our planting program will be pretty well up to plan and we'll be concentrating more on forest management", says Dave Bryant, wildlife manager and forester.

Bryant said also that field work has been completed on a comprehensive inventory of the arsenal's forest resources. Each wooded area of the arsenal has been catalogued as to type, size and quality of timber, management required and timber production capacity of the soil. With these data it can be determined whether a given area is producing the volume and variety of timber it is capable of and whether management of the area is worthwhile, Bryant said, adding that he hopes to have the data computerized.

BURNING

Burning is presently being carried out to improve wildlife habitat and control nuisance vegetation.

Kudzu-choked plots in the igloo area, near gate 2 and on Rideout Road are being burned and treated with herbicide in preparation for planting pines on the plots later, while small selected areas are being burned to create openings and expose forage for quail.

Selective burning has helped boost the arsenal's quail population over the past two years by clearing areas that were too choked with vegetation for birds to move about, forage and nest in.

A large program of wildlife habitat improvement is being planned using money collected for hunting and fishing fees, but program details are not available at this time.

PARKER

Parker Addresses NCMA Meetings

William A. Parker, Jr., formerly the deputy director of procurement for the Missile Command, will return to Redstone on Thursday, March 31, as guest speaker at the regular monthly meeting of the National Contract Management Association.

Parker will speak at two sessions of the meeting on the subject: "The Differences between DOD and ERDA Procurement". He now is located in Washington where he is deputy procurement director for the Energy Research and Development Administration.

A luncheon meeting is planned for the Officers Club starting at 11:30 and the dinner meeting is set for 6:30 at the NCO Club.

Reservations for either session may be made with Becky Robinson (539-1745).

Optical Society

The regular monthly meeting of the Huntsville Section, Optical Society of America, is scheduled for Thursday, March 24, at the Twickenham Station restaurant.

The guest speaker for the evening will be Dr. Peter Franken, director of the Optical Sciences Center at the University of Arizona. Dr. Franken will speak on the subject "Searches for Chest Cancers, submarines, and the Ether Drift."

Section members, their guests and interested persons are welcome to attend the 7 p.m. meeting.

Annuity Raise

A 4.8 percent increase in Federal retirement annuities became effective March 1, reflected in April 1 checks.

The next adjustment, under the 1976 law for computing annuity adjustments, will be effective Sept. 1 for October 1 checks.

Another adjustment will become effective March 1, 1978, for April 1, 1978, checks.

British Officer In Charge Of MMCS Division

When a visitor enters a building on a United States Army installation, he naturally expects to see a U. S. Army officer in charge of the place. If he should come to the Missile and Munitions Center and School and happen to visit Toftoy Hall, he may be in for a surprise. The head man at Toftoy is not a U. S. Army Officer, or any other kind of American.

He is Maj. Christopher R. Dolby, a British officer assigned here as part of the officer exchange program between the U. S. and her allies. The program is designed to improve the understanding of each other's military, and also to help promote better relations between the countries.

Dolby is in charge of electronics division, which teaches students the basics of electricity, and prepares them for training on missile systems. The electronics division runs 37 courses that last anywhere from 10 to 73 days and cover a total of 19 military occupational specialties.

According to Dolby, whose office is on the ground floor, working for the U. S. Army is about the same as working for Great Britain's, except that our Army is much larger. "The rules are just about the same," he said.

One minor problem he has encountered in his office here, but didn't in England, is talking with his secretary. Getting her used to his British style of speech has taken some doing. He said, "My secretary is trying to teach me how to speak American English and I'm trying to teach her to speak English. I'm not sure who's winning at the moment."

Originally from Leicester, England, Dolby is halfway through a two-year hitch here, after which he'll go back to his homeland. As one might expect, he talks with a crisp accent, is delightful to listen to, and adds a touch of old world charm to the office. Currently, the major is living on post with his wife Anna and their two children, Lindsay 13, and Neil 10.

Although Dolby misses England, he does like living in America. "I'm thoroughly enjoying it," he said. "I think Huntsville is great. It has so much in it for a city of its size."

As for the rest of the family, they have grown to like it also. "They obviously miss home," said the officer. "They like it now. The children enjoy the relaxed school system."

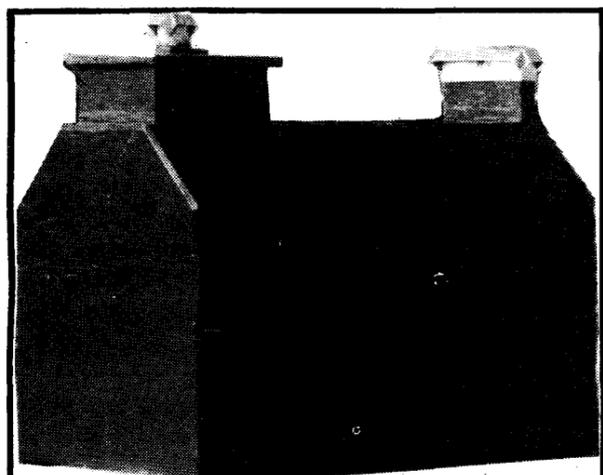

Dolby said there are differences between the U. S. and England, but he feels they aren't great. He said, "I think most of the differences are explained by the difference in size of the countries. Everything in England is more compact. England is, I'd say, about the size of Alabama."

When they find free time, the Dolby family finds the Huntsville area great for relaxation. "I enjoy visiting the Von Braun Civic Center, eating out, and visiting the country" Dolby said. The decision on where to go away from Huntsville isn't an easy one for the British family.

"There is too much to see here in two years," he said. When the March school break comes along, they have found one place they plan to visit, Disneyworld in Florida.

Dolby, who has a brother and a cousin who live in the states, said that he probably won't be able to return to America after he leaves next year. "I doubt I'll be able to afford it," he said with a touch of regret in his voice.

But until he leaves, the U. S. Army has the pleasure of receiving Dolby's services, and is pleased to have him here to aid in the advanced training of soldiers.

Draftee That Stayed Is Junior Officer Of Month

Few draftees make the Army their career, but Captain James Murdock did.

Since 1958 when his number came up, Murdock—now assigned to the U.S. Army Readiness Group, Redstone—has worked at a wide range of jobs and duties, forging a career that began with involuntary service.

He started out taking care of trucks as a wheeled vehicle mechanic. Then he drove them. Then he took care of people as an operating room technician before going to Officer Candidate School at Fort Knox, in 1967. He was commissioned upon graduation.

After OCS, Murdock served a tour in Vietnam, later commanded a company at Fort Lee, then served as advisor to a Reserve unit in Montgomery.

Now, Murdock works in the Supply section of the Administration Team at the Redstone Readiness Group. His job is to assist all Reserve component units in Alabama, Tennessee, and Mississippi in matters relating to unit and organizational supply.

These duties require him to travel almost constantly, shuttling from one Reserve unit to another. During Reserve summer training periods, he moves his office to Camp Shelby, Mississippi for several months.

Occasionally, he is able to visit his family in Birmingham and get in a little of his favorite (and only) sport, bowling. His wife and 18-year old daughter share his enthusiasm for bowling, although his infant daughter, has trouble handling a ball.

Capt. Murdock, one time draftee, says: "I have no regrets at all about staying in the Army. It's been good for me, and I feel I've been good for the Army. I've contributed."

LOOKING GOOD—Captain James Murdock looks over the supply lists for the Headquarters Company of the 279th Signal Battalion. The March Junior Officer from the Readiness Group spends most of his time on the road coordinating with and advising Reserve groups on questions of supply.

President Orders Hiring Restriction

President Carter last week ordered all federal agencies not to fill more than 75 percent of their civilian vacancies, a move interpreted as an indication he plans to reduce the total number of federal employees.

The President's directive March 2 to all executive branch departments and agencies told them to fill no more than 75 percent of their civilian vacancies that occur after February 28.

The directive will continue in effect until the Office of Management and Budget develops new employment ceilings for each department and agency.

Indications were the new ceilings would not be known until sometime in April at the earliest.

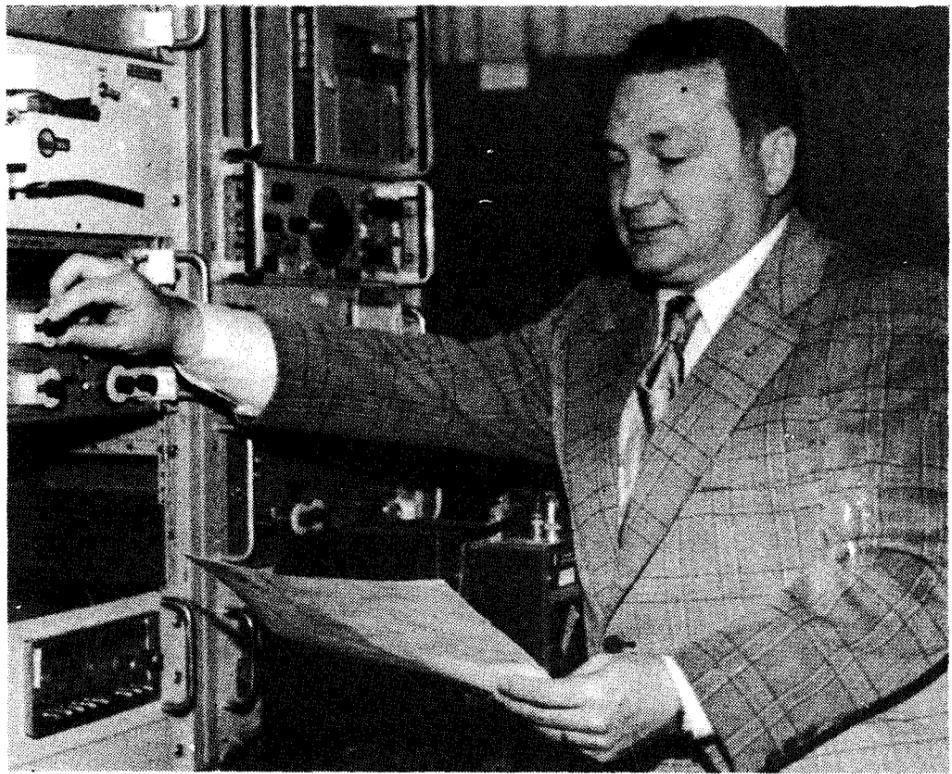

There already is a ceiling on the total number of federal employees. The implication of the President's order was that he intends to lower it.

There are about 10,000 civilian jobs in Army commands and agencies in Huntsville and at Redstone. Average turnover is about 50 per month.

Most local commands curtailed hiring months before the President's latest order because of money problems or the need to draw down their manning levels to meet new end-of-year totals.

Little immediate impact on local commands, as a result, is likely from the President's order. It will contribute to the problem of skills imbalance that exists in the commands attempting to reach new ceilings by attrition.

There was no indication at all this week of what the Army's new manning level is apt to be or what impact that would have on local federal agencies.

TOASTMASTER—Noel Donlin, a Research & Development electronic engineer, was recently named Distinguished Toastmaster by Toastmasters, International. The worldwide civic and speakers organization grants the title only to its most outstanding members. Donlin is only the fourth person in Alabama ever and is among 500 out of a million Toastmasters to ever achieve that rank.

Raise Projected At 6.5 Percent

A 6.5 percent pay increase is projected for Federal employees in the 1978 Budget of the United States. Under the Federal Pay - Comparability Act the increase would go into effect in October. It would cost $2 billion.

This, however, is merely a projection and the final amount, higher or lower, depends on findings by the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

"The basis for pay adjustment," the Budget says, "are annual surveys conducted nationwide by the Bureau of Labor Statistics."

The Act also provides that the President may propose an alternate pay plan if he considers the comparability pay adjustments inappropriate because of a national emergency or economic conditions affecting the general welfare.

Obligations for civilian compensation and benefits in 1978 are projected to reach $48.2 billion, excluding the Postal Service. The increase in obligations is due to pay adjustments, increased employment, and increased interest payments to the Civil Service Retirement trust fund.

Total employment for all three branches of Government including the military stood at 5 million in June 1976. Civilian employment in the Executive Branch including the Postal Service was 2.8 million.

Residents of Madison County can receive prompt assistance in emergencies by dialing 911, the Huntsville Fire Department Emergency Center.

The Center maintains direct connections with Huntsville ambulance, police, sheriff, state troopers, utilities and fire services, and can dispatch help immediately once an emergency is reported.

Officials at the Redstone Army Hospital have pointed out that this service is available to active duty and retired personnel and their dependents living off post. The service is not available to on post personnel but will bring off post patients to the Redstone Hospital.

Alumni Club

Dr. Joseph Pettit, President of Georgia Institute of Technology, will be guest speaker tonight at a dinner meeting of the Huntsville Georgia Tech Alumni Club.

Activities will begin at 6 O'clock with a social in the Redstone Officer's Open Mess.

For reservations, call Mickey Hallum at 876-5424 or Pete Redding at 536-1376.

'MS' to be Added to Personnel Forms

In response to the widespread use of "Ms" by American women, the U.S. Civil Service Commission has announced that it is revising all of its personnel forms—including job application forms—to make "Ms" available for those who prefer it. As present stocks are depleted and the forms are reprinted, the change will be incorporated in all Commission forms which require a title.

The Commission has also instructed all Federal agencies under its jurisdiction to incorporate "Ms" in addition to "Miss," "Mrs.," and "Mr." on their internal personnel forms.

Federal employees have had the option to use "Ms" and or their maiden names in payroll and personnel records since November 1975 when the Commission prescribed procedures for Federal agencies to use in officially changing the records of a woman's name and or title upon request. This action was in response to the Comptroller General's decision A-84336 which held that a woman has the right to use her maiden name and or the title "Ms" on Government records notwithstanding her marriage provided that she uses the same name consistently on all such records.

Research Seeks New ID Aids

A technique known as Kirlian photography is being seriously investigated for causes and possible practical applications by a team of Athens State College researchers, funded in part by the Missile Research and Development Command.

Since its discovery in the 1930's by a Russian X-ray technician, Kirlian photography has seldom been given serious attention by western scientists.

Dr. Joe Slate, head of the Athens State College psychology department, however, has been investigating Kirlian photography for several years, corresponding and collaborating with other researchers. The Army funded a 12-month effort to determine whether Kirlian photography reveals a consistent, understandable phenomenon, and whether that phenomenon might have practical applications after getting an unsolicited proposal from Dr. Slate.

In Kirlian photography, an electric discharge from the body is used to expose a piece of film. This is technically referred to as a corona discharge. The photographs show a bright pattern around the physical point used in making the photo. Kirlian, the Soviet X-ray technician, believed, as do others who accept his work, that the body imprints some kind of data on this discharge, which can be interpreted from the image formed on the film.

Dr. Slate uses the right index finger as the point of contact in his research. The patterns show day-to-day changes in their overall appearance, but seem to have a stable basis. Slate says student volunteers participating in the experiments have been able to learn to pick their own Kirlian patterns out of a group of several photos.

Exactly what the patterns reveal is debatable. They have been described as everything from an effect of body moisture to the "life-force" itself.

"I don't accept either of these extremes," Dr. Slate says. "I believe what we're seeing is the combined effects of several factors, both physiological and psychological."

"Patterns from the same individual appear larger and brighter when he is tense or anxious than when he is relaxed. We also believe we can see differences between male and female patterns."

What some believe may be the most important development of the Athens research is in the field of identification.

"We've found that Kirlian patterns seem to parallel or be continuations of the fingerprint," Slate said. Since fingerprints themselves can be removed or concealed, this would be a major development for police and security forces.

Also, with certain kinds of color film, the fingerprint becomes visible in a Kirlian photo, which appears to show more detail and accuracy than conventional ink-prints. The FBI is presently examining the results of the Athens research.

Despite efforts, Slate's team has not yet been able to systematize the identification of Kirlian photos. Even though successful identification of individual patterns and mood or sex differences have been made by eye, no basic, numerical outline has yet been found that can be applied by computer to all Kirlian photos. The patterns themselves remain an enigma.

Slate described some of the possible future applications of the Kirlian technique beyond identification. "I believe the (day-to-day) changes are reflective of mental and physical variations in the individual. Once the exact causes for these changes are learned, the Kirlian photo could become a diagnostic tool in identifying and treating physical and mental illness."

Slate also speculated on the use of Kirlian techniques as an early-warning system for mental breakdowns due to stress.

6 Rms, Riv Vue

"6 Rms Riv Vue", Redstone's Little Theater presentation, opens at 8:15 tomorrow night in the Little Theater, Bldg. 3745 with performances scheduled at the same time and place Friday and Saturday nights. The comedy is directed by Lynn Peterson.

This is the second production by the Little Theater which was formed last October by about 20 soldiers and civilians. The first play, "The Real Inspector Hound," was presented in December.

Fourth Students Cool Cops in Title Game

Adams Sparks Drive . . .

Playing before a spirited crowd here a week ago last Monday, the 4th Student Company defeated the 291st MP's 55-49 in a hard-fought contest for the post intramural basketball crown.

The students managed to hold off a late MP comeback and claimed the title they missed last season. Dominating the league last year, they made the championship game easily only to be demolished by the 8th Student Company 61-41. This year, however, they played a different kind of ball game.

The tempo was even at the start, with the 4th coming out of the first quarter leading 16-13. But the MP's ran into a tough student defense in the second and scored only eight points, ending the half trailing 29-21.

The students were beating the cops with a balanced scoring attack from four starters: Terry Adams, Arthur Shanks, Joseph Blevens, and Doug Serban. They faced a taut defense containing the MP's big three: Willie Rice, Richard Mitchell, and Charles Davis.

The 4th got red hot in the beginning of the third, pulling into a 15-point lead, and it looked as if the game was going to be a laugher for the students. The cops came on a little towards the end of the quarter, but still finished it trailing far behind, 43-31.

Although action was fast throughout the game, the fourth quarter was fantastic. With the crowd screaming and the adrenalin flowing, the MP's made a mad rush. Led by the hot hands of Rice and Mitchell, the cops pulled within five points with three minutes remaining, and it looked as if they might overtake the slumping 4th. Then, not unlike those magnificent old Celtic teams did so many times in winning 13 NBA championships, the students came on just when they needed to, scoring a couple of desperately-needed field goals to end MP chances for the title.

The victory seemed only right after the 4th's humiliating defeat last year, when they were so heavily favored to win it all. This year, unhampered by overconfidence, they played fine ball and deserved to win.

Scoring went like this. For the 4th Student Company under Coach Jack Milford: Adams 16, Shanks 12, Serban 11, Blevens 10, Mack Black 4, and Keith Washington 2, for 55 points.

For the 291st MP's under Coach Chastian Mallory: Rice 17, Mitchell 14, Davis 15, James Marrier 2, and Stanley Williams 1, for 49 points.

The Intramural Scoring

Championship trophy went to the MP's Rice, who finished the regular season averaging 23.2 points a game. Rice an all-around athlete, also won last year's scoring honors. The tournament MVP went to Adams of the 4th Student Company. Adams had an exceptional playoff series, not just in scoring, but defensively.

Team awards went to the 7th Student Company, Western conference runner-up; the 291st MP Company, Western conference champions and post runner-up; 6th Student Company, Eastern conference runner-up; and the 4th Student Company, Eastern conference champions and post champions.

DISTRICT CHAMPIONS. The MICOM women's basketball team capped a shortened season by capturing the championship of the District II tournament played during February in Ft. Payne. Regular season play was cancelled after five games due to the winter fuel shortage. However, the CWF quintet was ready for tournament action and won four straight contests including a 43-41 decision over Madison in the final round. The district champions pictured are: kneeling left to right: Ann Burke, Catherine Wade, Pat Shipp, statistician, Lynn Van Meter and Anita Whitaker. Standing: Janice Riddle, Carole Bissinger, Coach Jack Bissinger, Gladys Johns, and Chenetta Hill. Team members Helen Perry and Linda Fersch were not present.

Get Approval First

The Army's Military Traffic Management Command (MTMC) has been instructed not to ship any POVs made in 1976 or later, unless the owner can produce written authorization from USARJ. This authorization has been spelled out in AR 55-71 since 1972 but has not been enforced until recently. The reg states that anyone on PCS orders to Japan or Okinawa must request that the MILPOs and USARJ expedite these requests.

Regardless of your duty station, all cars must be inspected near Tokyo. If your car is one of the lucky ones to pass, your problems may just be starting. If you're stationed on the island of Okinawa, you must pay shipping costs to and from Japan. This can cost as much as $1,000.

Named Top Executive

John P. Carrigy recently was presented the 1976 Senior Civilian Executive Award for his superior performance as deputy chief of the training support division at the Missile and Munitions Center and School.

Carrigy, originally from New Orleans, has been working at Redstone 10 years. Before coming here, he worked as a television producer for the Teleprompter Corporation in New York City.

He is a graduate of St. Aloysius High School, New Orleans, and attended Loyola University there, receiving his degree in business administration in 1952. He spent eight years in the Louisiana National Guard.

First Time's The Charm For Commissary Cagers

There's nothing like starting out on top and that's just what the Commissary Warehousemen accomplished in their first Civilian Welfare Fund basketball season.

The warehousemen grabbed the crown with a 66-63 decision over the Corps of Engineers as the four month season ended last Wednesday at Evangel School.

The two teams actually ended in a dead heat with identical 16.2 records. The Commissary was awarded the title by virtue of having won two of the three regular season games between the two.

Product Assurance upset Nike, 61-53, and RD & E trampled the Missile School, 75-57, in other season finale contests.

The warehousemen scored first in the championship game and had the upper hand throughout although the working margin never was more than five points.

The engineers were on the short end of a 29-28 tally at the half and trailed 50-46 after three periods.

Jerry Dooley sparked a rally down the stretch and the Corps closed the gap to a single point with a minute and a half left on the clock. Roosevelt Williams canned a pair of free throws to build the lead to three points but Andy Tippins made it one again with a 12-foot jumper.

Another pair of free throws by Williams closed out the scoring as the Engineers missed on a couple of desperation shots in the dying seconds.

Williams topped the Commissary attack with 22 points and Mason Hammonds connected for 16 more. Dooley, Tippins and Claude Steele shared scoring honors for the engineers with 16 apiece.

A pair of jump shots, both from more than 20 feet, by Randy

Richardson provided the winning margin in the PAD upset of Nike.

It was a close game all the way with the score tied on 12 occasions before Product Assurance moved out to a four point lead with a little over two minutes to go. Nike was unable to cash in on several scoring opportunities but the only scoring during the two minute span was the two Richardson goals.

Mike Krembler kept his mates in the game with a 22-point production in the losing cause. Richardson ended with 18.

RD&E got off to an early 12-2 lead and then staved off a second period rally to post a 36-32 half-time margin. The second half was all RD&E as the third placers scored their 13th victory in 18 games.

Lloyd Brooks topped the winners with 18 points with Mel Waters and Jim Vann collecting 15 apiece. Robert Jennings accounted for over half the MMCS scoring with a 30 point production.
