CFC drive prepares for September start

BY SKIP VAUGHN

The 1982 Huntsville Area Combined Federal Campaign is ready to launch its fund-raising effort for health and service agencies.

The campaign will officially start Sept. 28 and run for six weeks ending Nov. 6. Goal is $500,000.

This is the second year for the Federal Coordinating Group here which reviews funding applications and elects a chairman for the fall campaign. Maj. Gen. Robert L. Moore, commanding general of the Missile Command, is this year's campaign chairman.

Fifty-three local, national and international agencies are to benefit from this year's drive.

Willard Holmes, chairman of the Federal Coordinating Group, said agency applications have been reviewed and the responses mailed out, brochures have been printed, and the training program organized.

"Last year was the first year there was a formal coordinating group. Its chairman last year, Ruth Morrison, did a great job organizing," Holmes said. "This year we were able to take the progress she had made and proceed into areas she had not had the opportunity to do last year."

The coordinating group this year took a "more indepth look" into applications for funding, he said. "The organization set up last year gave us an opportunity to do this."

"We're having a chance to look at what the application says they're providing and how they're providing that and whether this meets the eligibility requirements of OPM (Office of Personnel Management)."

The coordinating group consists of representatives from at least the 10 largest federal agencies in the area plus union representatives.

Under OPM guidelines, the coordinating group is not required to evaluate United Way and international service agencies. The group does review applications from national health agencies, national service agencies and local agencies not affiliated with a federated group (such as United Way).

Individuals have the option of making undesignated contributions to CFC, designated contributions to as many as five agencies, or both.

"If he has designated to a particular organization, the money is collected and goes to a central accounting system (a bank) and from there to the agency in accordance with the designation," Holmes said.

If a designated contribution is by payroll deduction, finance officials deduct the amount from that person's paycheck. The periodic deductions are forwarded to the bank and from there to the agency.

MPs list little-known off post violations

Incoming soldiers here are likely to get briefed on a list of little-known violations to Huntsville city laws.

Military police have compiled a list of 10 violations for which people can be apprehended and fined by off-post authorities.

MPs say the most frequently violated local laws by service members from Redstone Arsenal are:

- Sleeping in a parked vehicle
- Public intoxication
- Drinking alcoholic beverage in public
- Inhaling of intoxicating vapors

- Using profanity in the presence of a female
- Harassment

- Possession of untaxed beer
- Possession of alcoholic beverage in a dry county (all counties surrounding Madison are dry.)
- Transporting unregistered weapon in POV (privately owned vehicle)

"These are very unusual things that we here don't get very upset over," said Sgt. Maj. James L. Weaber of military police operations.

"As far as I know, they're all city laws," he said. "They're things that soldiers can get apprehended for downtown."

Front-only decal

Editor:

The recent change requiring arsenal decal and expiration sticker only on front of car was adopted perhaps to reduce costs of these items used; however, this change adds inconvenience to the system for MP's when checking parking lots for violations.

For example, MP's would have to walk through the parking lot rather than drive through since the front-only expiration sticker could not be observed for normal parkers. Also, when a violation occurs — either traffic, decal or expiration sticker — the MP has to record information from front of car and then go to rear of car to record license tag and tag expiration date.

The cost savings should be weighed against the added inconvenience to system. I am sure this problem should trigger thoughts for the suggestion program. Have you turned your suggestion in to DRSMI-JMI?

Parking rules

Editor:

Today I witnessed an interesting scene on how standards are enforced here at Redstone Arsenal. The scene involved illegally parked POVs between the wings of Building 5250. The military police arrived to find four POVs parked in the prohibited area. One had a red decal, one had a blue decal, and two had green decals. The owner of the red-decal vehicle emerged from the building, talked with the MPs and moved his car. Moments later, a female sauntered out and sweetly pointed out to the MPs that she had an official vehicle pass on the dashboard of her car. (She works in Bldg 5250 and parks in the same prohibited parking area everyday). She was allowed to move her car. The remaining two cars were ticketed.

As the MPs prepared to depart the area, the NCO who had moved his car earlier walked past the MP vehicle and he and the MPs exchanged jokes and pleasantries.

The ticketed cars have now been moved and the prohibited area is beginning to fill up again. I wonder if I am in store for a repeat performance.

Retention register

Question: Exactly how does one review his or her listing in the retention register? Also, why are we reviewing it at this time?

Answer: Copies of retention register are provided periodically to each directorate or office to verify their accuracy and allow you to determine your retention standing. The civilian personnel office has done this routinely for several years. Generally, registers are available for review in each administrative office. You should ask your supervisor where you can review yours.

If you want an answer to a question, call or write the "People" information service in Public Affairs Office, 876-4161.

Part-time pay

Question: If an employee returns to work after retirement as part-time permanent employee, what would be the pay rate? Would it be the same rate per hour?

Answer: The same conditions would apply whether you return as a full-time permanent or a part-time permanent worker.

Many vets losing GI Bill benefits

WASHINGTON — Time is running out for approximately 900,000 veterans to use educational benefits of the GI Bill.

About one-fifth of the 4.3 million eligible veterans will lose their eligibility for benefits this year, according to the Veterans Administration. The law permits a veteran to use the education benefits within 10 years following discharge from service, or by Dec. 31, 1989, whichever is earlier.

When the first measure was signed by president Roosevelt June 22, 1944, through June 30, 1981, 18 million veterans received assistance under the GI Bill at a cost of $51 billion. About 35 percent of all trainees have been Vietnam era veterans. This year the GI Bill will assist the education of more than 800,000 Vietnam era veterans.

More than 7.8 million World War II veterans were trained under the original measure, about one-half of all those eligible. Another 2.4 million, or 43.4 percent of those eligible, studies under the Korean plan, and nearly 7.8 million Vietnam era and post-Korean veterans and service personnel have thus far participated in the current program. Some 65 percent of the Vietnam era veterans eligible have received training.

A new program, which requires financial participation by service personnel, is available for those who entered the military after Dec. 31, 1976.

Veterans who want more information on GI Bill eligibility should contact the nearest VA regional office. (ARNEWS)

Home and Sport Center closed

The Post Exchange Home and Sport Center has been closed and its items moved into the main PX shopping area.

"We expanded the Shoppette area and we built the garden center and were able to bring all the items that were in the Home and Sport Center down here for one-stop shopping," said PX manager Joe Robinson.

The move from the Home and Sport Center, Bldg. 3651, occurred Aug. 13. The building is to be used by the arsenal for office space, Robinson said.

"It used to be the main PX at one time," he recalled.

Applications accepted for med course until Sept. 8

WASHINGTON — Medical officers who want to attend the U. S. Defense Nuclear Agency's course on medical effects of nuclear weapons must apply by Sept. 8.

The course, sponsored by the Armed Forces Radiobiology Research Institute, will be conducted from Oct. 26-30 at the agency's headquarters in Bethesda, Md.

On Sept. 10, 20 active-duty officers from the Army Medical Department will be selected to attend. Funds for their attendance will be drawn from the institute's allocation.

If you're a medical corps or medical service corps officer now performing nuclear-related duties, and if you want to sign up for the course, you must submit the following documentation to the commander, U. S. Army Medical Department Personnel Support Agency, Attn: SGPE-EDT, 1900 Half Street, S. W., Washington, DC 20324.

- Three copies of DA Form 3838 (application for professional training), approved by the local approving authority.

- Two copies of certification of a final secret or higher security clearance.

If your name gets selected, you'll be notified by letter with more information.

What if for earlier courses you once applied and failed to get selected? You still have a chance for current consideration, says the course program manager. You may update and resubmit your completed application by telephoning your wishes to the program manager's office. The telephone numbers are Autovon 223-1652-3 or commercial (202) 693-1652-3.

National Guard members and Army Reservists who wish to apply may do so through their unit training officer. The persons selected, however, must have their own organization defray all expenses (per diem and travel). Point of contact for this purpose is Lt. Col. R. A. Gross, Autovon 295-1210-1 or commercial (202) 295-1210-1. Additional spaces beyond the 20 active-duty ones are limited, said Gross, so they'll be filled on the basis of first-come, first served. CHAMPUS starts toll-free line

A direct dial toll-free telephone number has been started for people with questions concerning the Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services (CHAMPUS).

In Alabama, providers and beneficiaries can call 1-800-228-7100.

"Beneficiaries are advised they can utilize this number for specific questions concerning their claims or contact the CHAMPUS advisor, Fox Army Community Hospital," said

Capt. Ron Sullivan, chief of patient administration.

The hospital's health benefits advisor is Brenda Cagle 876-2960.

A recent release from the Department of Defense said DoD has proposed to discontinue residential treatment centers as authorized providers under CHAMPUS. If approved, this action would take affect Oct. 1.

The residential treatment center is "a very small portion of the CHAMPUS program" and affects "a very minority of our population," Sullivan said.

Which would you prefer for your raise — the Jepsen-Exxon 'raise by rank' pay plan or the across-the-board pay plan?

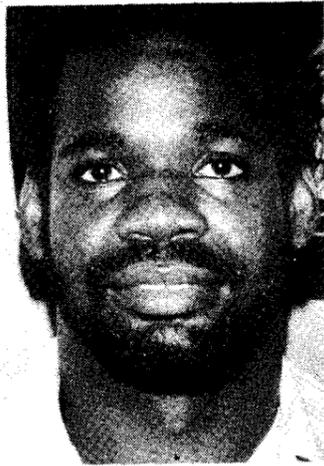

MSgt. Robert L. Suddeath, Co. A — "I think the Jepsen-Exxon raise is better overall for the military because it's geared to keeping the soldier in. Career people are the ones who are getting out before their time is up and the pay plan would give them an incentive to stay in."

SSgt. Wayne J. Todd, Co. B — "Definitely the Jepsen-Exxon pay plan. It would be a good incentive for the career minded service member. If you want the money, then work for it."

Pvt. Dorin R. Vellejo, 8th S. C. — "I like the across-the-board raise. It sounds alot better. I think rank doesn't matter in pay only. Everybody is a soldier and they should get the same pay."

Sp5 Alva S. Benjamin, Co. A — "I think the Jepsen-Exxon plan is the best because it makes a soldier seek self improvement and try to get promoted. And once you get promoted and have years in the service it becomes an advantage."

SSgt. Bobby D. Ross, 6th S. C. — "I favor the across-the-board pay plan because each area that a soldier gets paid for I think should be increased."

Pvt. Philip R. Richardson, 4th S. C. — "I'd rather have the increase by rank because when you get more rank you'll get more money. Right now almost every private usually doesn't know how to handle money well, so as they make more rank they will learn how to handle more money. You get it (money) when you need it."

Germany stiffens sentences for drug abuse

WASHINGTON — The full force of German law will feel even heavier with the recent stiffening of narcotics laws in the Federal Republic of Germany.

Come Jan. 1, 1982, says the judge advocate at headquarters, U.S. Army, Europe, convicted drug abusers can expect a longer jail term.

The increased terms apply to such ordinary convictions at possession and use of illegal drugs in small quantities — in which case the term goes from a maximum of three years to four. If the offense is particularly serious, for example, selling drugs to a minor, the maximum time for the crime will jump from 10 years to 15. Certain other serious offenses calling for the minimum term of one year now will call for at least two years.

The new German legislation also has its compassionate side. It widens the categories of circumstances under which the court may abstain from punishment when the offender takes illegal drugs in small amounts and does not involve anyone else in the use. If the offender discloses his or her own offense to authorities, or discloses to them information that would hinder a planned drug offense by others, the court is empowered to lessen the sentence or to withhold punishment.

Under the new law, proven drug addicts faced with a two year or shorter-term confinement will be allowed suspension of the sentence if they consent to rehabilitation in a drug withdrawal facility. (ARNEWS).

Local group approves agencies for CFC

The local Federal Coordinating Group has approved 17 national health agencies for this year's campaign.

This includes 14 from last year and three new approvals — the American Kidney Fund, Epilepsy Foundation of America and the Leukemia Society of America.

Also approved was Medic Alert, a national service agency. No local non-federated agency met all the eligibility criteria set by Office of Personnel Management for this year's campaign, according to the coordinating group.

These requirements for participation in a local combined federal campaign include:

— The agency must be a non-profit, tax exempt charitable organization supported by contributions.

— It must provide a program of health or welfare services in the area covered by the local CFC.

— It must operate without discrimination and must carry out affirmative action programs.

— Its financial records are audited annually by an independent public accountant.

— Its administrative and fund-raising cost must not exceed 25 per cent of total support and revenue.

The national health agencies approved from last year are the American Cancer Society, the American Diabetes Association, American Heart Association, American Lung Association, Arthritis Foundation, Cystic Fibrosis Foundation, March of Dimes Birth Defects Foundation;

Muscular Dystrophy Association, Myasthenia Gravis Foundation, National Association for Sickle Cell Disease, National Hemophilia Foundation, National Multiple Sclerosis Society, National Retinitis Pigmentosa Foundation and the United Cerebral Palsy Association.

Undesignated contributions go into an account and the money is distributed to the agencies by a formula after the campaign. "Local non-federated agencies are not entitled to undesignated funds, under OPM guidelines," Holmes added.

Holmes, who was MICOM's representative to the coordinating group last year, lists three reasons for contributing to CFC.

"It's a chance to make a contribution to the health and service agencies locally, nationally and internationally; and get involved in helping the community," he said.

"By making a contribution in a combined way, we can have a more effective and efficient use of the monies that we contribute."

A third reason, he said, is "we have more information available to us on the agencies we're contributing to than we might have if they were all independently soliciting money."

Last year's campaign affected by several factors

BY SKIP VAUGHN

Last year's Combined Federal Campaign coordinator hopes the downward trend reverses itself this year.

The goal last year was $574,000 and the effort raised $484,000. Ruth Morrison traces the downward trend to a court decision two years ago on a lawsuit involving another Army installation.

The decision was that no pressure could be used to get people to contribute.

"You give people the opportunity to give," Morrison said. "Some people may have felt pressure but there is not and is not meant to be."

Besides a possible over-reaction to this court ruling, she points to misunderstanding of campaign changes made last year. The Office of Personnel Management (OPM) opened participation to local and national service agencies.

"With the change in the rules of who could be participating, there was considerable interest on who would or would not participate," Morrison said.

People can choose to give without designating and their contribution would be distributed among agencies by a mathematical formula. They can instead designate what agencies they want their money to go to. Another option is to designate some of their contribution.

"I don't think everyone understood it across-the-board," Morrison said of designating contributions.

Agencies in last year's campaign included those in United Way, national health, international service and — for the first time — national service agencies.

The national service agencies — including the NAACP special contribution fund, Medic Alert Foundation, and United Service Organizations (USO) — were all approved by OPM. Medic Alert and the NAACP fund requested participation locally, applied by application and were accepted under OPM guidelines.

Morrison attributes a lot of the problem last year to "concern with the types of organizations within the campaign and not understanding they (individuals) can designate their funds."

"Designated funds go where designated. That's all there is to it," she said. "The structure is there so people can do what they want to make their gift do what they want it to do."

The campaign here was not the only combined federal campaign that did not do as well as hoped last year, according to Morrison. She mentioned "the impact of inflation and the dollar squeeze" as possible reasons for the decline.

"I'd love to see a great increase in giving," she said. "I'd like to have people look within the needs of agencies in the campaign, and within the total campaign and give graciously."

MMCS worker collects dolls

BY RAY ROWDEN

"My two sons thought I'd lost my mind when I started bringing dolls home," said Betty Jones, a secretary with the Maintenance Division of the MMCS Directorate of Logistics.

Three years and about 150 dolls later, she seems sane enough. However, she admits to an addiction.

"My sister has been collecting dolls for a long time. I went with her once to buy dolls and I was hooked.

"The guys I work with almost hate to tell me when they are going TDY. I always make them promise to send me a doll." Her collection includes figures from France, Germany, Korea and Mexico.

"Different people collect different kinds of dolls," she said. "Some like the older walkers, some collect dolls with china heads, and some collect baby dolls. I like pretty dolls."

"My personal favorite is a 'Bye-Lo' doll my father gave me when I was still in school. But I want them all. Sometimes when you look at one it just seems to say, 'Take me home.'"

Jones said she can't take them all home, however. Her collection has already outgrown the case her husband built for her. Also, some dolls are quite expensive.

Jones with her dolls

"I've seen an older German doll priced at $4,000," she said. Jones has never paid more than $100 for a doll and doesn't plan to, "at least until we get both our sons through college."

Caring for her collection isn't difficult, said Jones, although she sometimes has to "carry one up to the hospital in Murphreesboro (Tenn.). People really think I'm weird when I tell them that."

She explained that the "hospital" specializes in repairing and restoring collectable dolls. There is no routine maintenance needed except, "when I first get the dolls I wash and iron their clothes, wash and curl their hair if they need it," she said.

Jones found most of her dolls at flea markets, garage sales or estate sales. She said the older dolls are getting harder to find.

Some new, collectable dolls are also hard to get. Jones said it's normal to spend months on a waiting list for the new Madame Alexander doll.

She said she and her sister have considered opening a doll store in Huntsville. "But I can't stand to part with a doll, so I don't know what I'd do with a store."

CSM's may extend past 30 years

WASHINGTON — More command sergeants major will be serving beyond the required 30-year retirement mark under new rules recently approved by the Army. Other career enlisted soldiers serving in shortage MOS's may come under the new guidelines in the future.

Under the change, up to 5 percent of the active duty command sergeants major are now eligible to stay in the Army for up to 35 years. This will more than double the current number of command sergeants major eligible for retention. Until now, no more than 25 of them could be extended for the longer period.

The new policy also changes the way these NCOs will be selected for the extended service. All command sergeants major within their 28th year of service have been traditionally considered for extension to 35 years by a Department of the Army (DA) selection board. Those who declined consideration by the board and those not chosen for extension have been required to retire at 30 years.

The new selection process requires command sergeants major in their 28th year of service desiring an extension to 35 years to request retention. Those not chosen by the selection board at that time may submit another request for consideration during their 29th year of service.

The policy, said an official, allows command sergeants major to become more involved in extending their service career. Those not desiring to stay in the Army will no longer be automatically considered.

The new policy will be reviewed after a year to determine whether the program should be expanded beyond the command sergeants major group. This review, said the official, will assess the practicality and desirability of including other enlisted soldiers serving in shortage MOS's (ARNEWS)

Limited edition prints presented

WASHINGTON — The Army's two top leaders received limited edition prints of a painting from the centennial class, faculty and staff of the U. S. Army Command and General Staff College, Fort Leavenworth, Kan.

Secretary of the Army John O. Marsh Jr., and General E. C. Meyer, Army chief of staff, accepted the prints during ceremonies at the Pentagon on Aug. 20.

"As in 1881, today's command and General Staff College is the heart and soul of the U. S. Army's officer education system," said Col. Bobby F. Brashears, chief of staff of the Combined Arms Center and Fort Leavenworth, as he made the presentation.

The print, "the staff ride", commemorates "one hundred years of learning, a century of service." The print shows officers of the first class at the School of Application for Infantry and Cavalry established at Fort Leavenworth over 100 years ago.

One thousand prints are being sold by the Fort Leavenworth Museum Association to raise money to pay for the painting. The remainder of the money will be donated to the museum's building fund. (ARNEWS)

Product recalled

WASHINGTON — If your ice cream maker produces a salty product, check to see if it's a Proctor Silex. Army and Air Force Exchange Service is participating in the voluntary recall of this four-quart unit, model No. F401F.

A poorly welded seam of the Proctor Silex brand's metal container causes salt solution used for cooling the cream to seep through. No health hazard is involved, say AAFES officials.

The ice cream maker has been removed from the shelves, and customers are requested to return any purchased unit to their local exchange for the full refund of $21.50 (ARNEWS)

Cardio-pulmonary resuscitation is life saving

BY SKIP VAUGHN

Someone collapses on the job — an apparent heart attack victim. The first four minutes are critical.

If a co-worker knows cardio-pulmonary resuscitation, he or she can save that person's life. CPR is a combination of mouth-to-mouth breathing and chest compressions.

"It's you breathing for the person and pumping their blood through their body," explained Sandi Clayton, a worker here who is certified to teach CPR.

The life-saving technique is taught in a four-hour or eight-hour course with a mannequin serving as the victim. "You should not practice on a real person," said the program analyst with Procurement and Production Directorate.

Annie is a life-sized doll designed by a European doctor whose daughter died after a skiing accident. The doctor felt someone could have saved his daughter by using CPR, according to Clayton.

"You can keep a person alive with nothing but the knowledge of how to do this," she said.

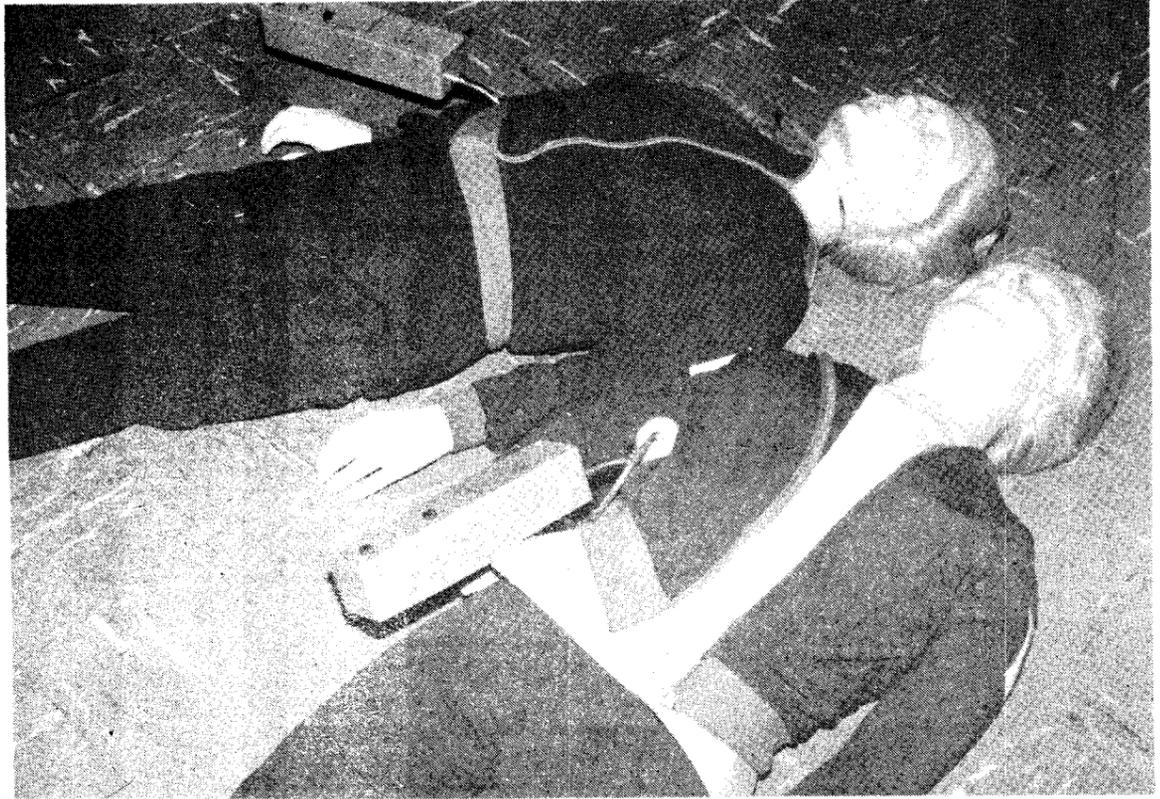

If someone collapses, the first step is opening his or her airway. This means tilting the victim's head back to check for breathing.

"You look, listen and feel for breathing for about five seconds," Clayton said. "If there's no breathing, you give four quick, full breaths by mouth-to-mouth. That's to inflate the lungs."

Next, the pulse should be checked along with continuing to check for breathing. If no pulse or breathing is present, CPR can be started. This would consist of a series of rhythmic chest compressions and breaths.

The chest compressions, 60 to 80 pounds of pressure for an adult victim, can be exhausting for a rescuer. Two people can take turns administering CPR to a victim.

A four-hour course teaches one-rescuer CPR, and how to care for a choking victim; an eight-hour course also teaches two-rescuer CPR and CPR for babies and children. The longer course includes care for younger choking victims.

Two of the six 'Annies' stored at civilian personnel

"It's really not hard unless you're a really tiny person who doesn't have the strength to do the chest compressions," Clayton said.

She recommends the training for everyone. If someone is unable to administer the chest compressions to a mannequin, he or she might feel stronger when a real incident happens, she said.

CPR can be used for responding to victims of heart attack, drowning, electrocution, toxic gases, suffocation or external strangulation.

Clayton, who has been teaching the life-saving technique about three years, became interested in it after her husband Jim suffered a heart attack on his arsenal job in 1976. He has since retired on medical disability.

"The sooner you start CPR, the better the chance your victim has," she said.

Workers here who are interested in taking CPR training should call the civilian personnel office's training division at 876-5843.

Survey shows more people voting absentee

WASHINGTON — Results of the 1980 post-election U. S. Government voting survey are in.

One of the more significant findings, according to survey officials, is that more people are voting absentee.

Local election officials, surveyed for the first time, reported an average increase of 20 percent in absentee voting from the 1976 election. In more than half the districts surveyed, five percent or more of the total vote was cast by absentee ballot.

Military personnel surveyed were randomly selected from the four Department of Defense services and the National Guard. The population sampled included servicemembers worldwide. The federal civilian employees sampled were selected from 10 agencies which collectively employ over 90 percent of the federal personnel stationed in foreign countries.

Thirty-two percent of the military respondents voted absentee, as did 45.9 percent of the civilians, about half of the military respondents and 42.3 percent of the civilians took no action to vote. The rest either voted in person, never received a ballot or received the ballot too late.

A strong relationship was found in the military sample between voting and age, according to the survey. Older individuals were more likely to vote. In addition, those of higher rank were more likely to cast a ballot.

Most of the respondents indicated either they didn't need help in voting absentee or were able to get help from a unit voting officer. Those who used the voting assistance guide rated it as an excellent source of information on voting procedures.

The reasons most often named for not voting was lack of candidate preference. The survey results suggested about 44 percent of both military and civilian groups did not vote by choice.

A section of the survey asked unit voting officers to comment on the voting program. Most said the program in their units went smoothly. The percentage of time spent on voting duties ranged from 3.2 to 4.9. Approximately one third of the voting duties went smoothly. The percentage of time spent on voting duties ranged from 3.2 to 4.9. Approximately one third of the voting officers said they helped more than 100 people.

Four hundred county clerks were asked for suggestions to improve the voting program and the Federal Post Card Application (FPCA). Their responses included stressing early application; having voters apply for a ballot for each election; stressing the importance of complete mailing address; and providing better training for those personnel assisting absentee voters.

More than 80 percent of those who applied for an absentee ballot used the FPCA.

The FPCA is being revised to include a better method of recording home address and voting residence information. This will help local election officials better process applications for absentee voting, explains a voting assistance program official. (AR-NEWS)

Travel allowance no longer cut

WASHINGTON — Service members favored with a box lunch or an in-flight meal or ration while traveling via military aircraft will no longer have per diem allowances reduced.

As of July 8, 1981. The Department of Defense's joint travel regulations require no deduction to be made from authorized travel allowances based on the availability or use of such meals. The change results from a recommendation of the military services, said a transportation official. "In effect, the traveler no longer must be penalized for having an appetite," he said.

The policy change, say officials, will be included in the next printed change to volume 1 of the joint travel regulations. (ARNEWS).

First foreign women learn missile repair

BY LORI KING

Since 1957, foreign students from over 50 countries have traveled here to take the various missile courses. All were men.

But that isn't the case anymore. For the first time at Redstone, two women foreign students from the Republic of Singapore Air Force Base have joined their male counterparts in taking the extensive training.

Cpl. Goh Hoon Juan and Cpl. Ng Ah Mui are among 18 service members here from the Singapore Air Force. They were stationed at the Seletar Air Base in Singapore and will be taking different courses.

Since arriving July 23, Ng is taking the Improved Hawk Radar Repair course. The electronics repair and testing equipment specialist will remain here for schooling until next July.

She said the schooling here is similar to that in Singapore. "The only thing that is different is the working hours."

Goh came here Aug. 13 and has started her Launch Control course. She will stay here for eight or nine months.

Both women are staying off post, but Ng was quartered at the 6th Student Company for her first two weeks here. Goh immediately joined her when she arrived last week and both say they enjoy life off post.

"When we were at Seletar Air Base we stayed with our parents because it's a custom to stay with them until you're married," explained Goh.

"Now we can go everywhere we like and we don't have to inform our parents about anything."

Added Ng, "The only thing we don't like about living off post is cooking."

Senate confirmation on LTC list delayed

WASHINGTON — The U. S. Senate began its summer recess without confirming the Army of the United States promotion list to Lieutenant Colonel.

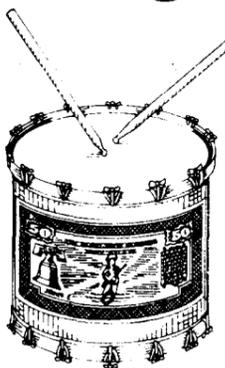

This means that the Army cannot promote those whose names appear on the list.

On July 1, 1981, the Army released the names of majors it has recommended for promotion to lieutenant colonel in the Judge Advocate General's Corps, Army Medical and Dental Corps, and AUS.

Promotions from the lists will not begin until after the Senate returns from summer recess, Army officials state, and complete the AUS confirmation process, as required by law.

The Senate is scheduled to return on Sept. 9, and confirmation is expected later that month. (ARNEWS)

Army leads U. S. to world helicopter crown

The United States helicopter team — four U.S. Army crews and one civilian crew — captured both the team and individual championships in the 4th World Helicopter Championships near Warsaw, Poland.

The U.S. team scored a total of 2253 points during the four-day team competition, just two points more than the West German team. Poland was third with 2233, The Soviet Union fourth with 2115, and Great Britain fifth with 2040. France did not take part in the team competition.

The near perfect slalom performance the final day (Aug. 19) of the team competition pulled the U.S. team ahead of the Polish and West German teams after a ruling by the panel of judges restored some lost points to the Polish and German teams following a protest by these teams.

U.S. Army aviator CWO2 George Chrest, from Nampa, Idaho, held on to his lead to win the title of "world champion helicopter pilot." Chrest scored a total of 761 points over the four days, 11 more than his closest competitor, a German pilot.

U.S. Army CWO Irvin B. Starrak, from

Sarasota, Fla., was 5th in the individual category with 747 points. CWO3 Don E. Jewkes of Green River, Utah, was 6th with 744 points and CWO3 John T. Bailey, of Temple, Tex., was 7th with 741.

Following the third day's event Tues., the US team was listed with a slim lead over the Polish and West German teams. But the meet's judges later allowed a protest from each of the Polish and West German teams over points that had been deducted from their scores during Sunday's first round of competition. So instead of leading the team standings, the US team found itself 19 points behind the Polish team and one point down to West Germany.

In the final event Wed., the US outscored the Polish team 597-558 in the slalom (maximum was 600 points) easily off-setting the Polish team's newly-found 19-point advantage. The US slalom score also was three points better than the Germans, putting them ahead of the German team by two points in the overall tabulation. The Soviet Union team tied with the US for the slalom high score (597) but it wasn't enough to move them out of their overall fourth place spot. Great Britain had a 590 point slalom total.

This was the first time US Army aviators have flown on a US team in this international competition.

"We're very proud to have had the opportunity to represent the United States in Poland," said US Army Major Roy E. Mann, the team captain (FROM Woodbridge, Virginia). "We knew from the beginning that the competition would be tough.

"I sincerely believe the results here are attributable to the superior aviation training coordinated at the US Army Aviation School at Ft. Rucker, Ala.," he added. "We couldn't have won without the individual dedication and discipline of our entire team, the aviators, mechanics and support people."

Team totals (daily total in parenthesis):

A. US — 2253 points (594, 597, 465, 597).

B. West Germany — 2251 points (597, 597, 481, 594).

C. Poland — 2233 points (590, 582, 503, 558).

D. USSR — 2115 points (578, 588, 352, 597).

C. Great Britain — 2040 points (585, 591, 274, 590). (ARNEWS).

New automation-communications command planned

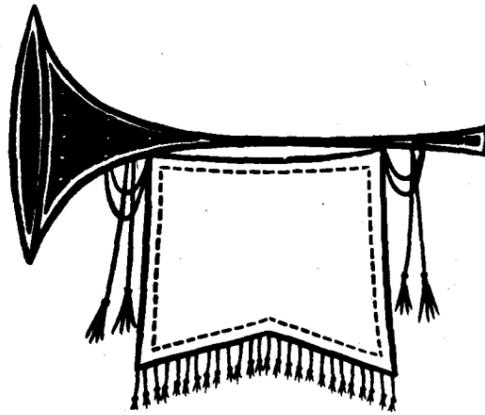

WASHINGTON — The Department of the Army has asked the Army Communications Command to plan for a new Automation-Communications Command.

The new major Army command will be responsible for functions currently performed by the communications command at Fort Huachuca, Ariz., and the U. S. Army Computer Systems Command at Fort Belvoir, Va.

Planning calls for the new command to operate and maintain the data processing activities that support management of stateside installations. Eventually this responsibility could extend to overseas installations. Right now, USACC operates and maintains the communications activities at Army installations, but the installation commander is charged with running the data processing activities.

Once the proposed realignment occurs, the resulting functional integration will parallel that which has existed at HQDA since 1978.

Why the need for a new command? DA officials cite as one reason the overlapping technologies of automation and communications. The other reason is the interdependence of automated systems and communications. Both printed and voice messages now rely in large part on computerized switching. And communications lines are being committed to the electronic transmission of data processed via automated means. "That mutually supportive relationship has been going on for years," said an A-C official. "Now it's time for a closer look at what it means for the future."

Out of that examination should come a more efficient operation, a more effective use of available resources, and a better grasp of the continuing advances in technology, said the official.

"As the plans proceed through formulation and review," said the official, "we'll concentrate on the current and future needs of both the present organizational structure and the proposed one. Any reorganizational turmoil will be kept to the minimum."

According to the official, any relocation of people or jobs, if required, will occur only after all the planning is finished and approved. Once that's done — within the next several months or so — details on the realignment will be announced. (ARNEWS)

FLEP application due Nov. 1

WASHINGTON — The Office of the Judge Advocate General announced recently applications for the Funded Legal Education Program are due Nov. 1.

This new application date is one of the changes made by a revision of AR 351-22 to be published this fall. The items to be included in the application remain the same.

The FLEP program allows 25 selected officers per year to attend law school at government expense while on active duty. Officers in the grades O-1 through O-3, who have not less than two years nor more than six years of active duty at the time legal training begins are eligible to apply.

The change in application date will allow those officers selected for the program to meet application deadlines for law schools, say officials.

Interested officers who have not yet taken the Law School Admission Test should immediately register for the October test.

Additional information concerning the program can be obtained by calling the Judge Advocate General's Professional Recruiting Office at (800) 336-3315. In Virginia, call collect (703)756-1752. (ARNEWS)
