'4.8' pay raise draws mixed reactions here

BY SKIP VAUGHN

President Reagan's 4.8 percent pay raise to federal workers earning less than $50,000 a year drew mixed reactions from civil servants here.

The president announced Aug. 31 his recommendation to Congress to take effect Oct. 1. A study panel had recommended to Reagan a 15.1 percent raise.

This pay raise covers only civilian workers and the raise for soldiers had yet to be decided.

The president's action "does not directly affect blue collar workers but Congress in another action has limited pay raises for federal employees to a maximum of 4.8," said John Scholzen, a public information specialist for Office of Personnel Management in Washington, D.C.

This means that if the Missile Command's 605 wage grade workers are scheduled for a pay raise in June 1982 that raise would "very likely" be limited to 4.8 percent, he said.

Most workers interviewed here are against 4.8, but some accept it as a way to combat rising inflation.

"We're against the 4.8. It should be much higher," said Bob Fletcher, president of Local 1858

American Federation of Government Employees.

"I think it's making the federal employees bear $5.5 billion of the president's budget cuts," Fletcher said.

A GS-12 worker in Procurement and Production, who asked not to be quoted by name, was strongly against the raise. "It represents a loss of actual income," he said. "It was good politically. It's always good politics to pick on civil service people."

Bob White, a GS-12 P&P contract specialist said "If all the rest of the labor organizations would take the same amount of raise or the same amount of cost increase, it would be fine. But they won't."

"I don't think it's enough," said Barbara Cheatham, a GS-5 secretary in the pay-examination branch, Finance and Accounting. "If it doesn't keep up with the cost of living then it's not enough."

John Hollenbeck, a GS-12 civilian personnel employee-relations specialist, calls the system of having a panel make a recommendation and then the president setting a figure "a sham."

"If they are not going to use that data they gathered, let's just save the time and trouble," Hollenbeck said.

Manning system focuses on units

WASHINGTON — Gen. E.C. Meyer, Army Chief of Staff, recently told Army leaders to begin phasing in a new manning system focused on units rather than individuals.

The new manning system will stabilize soldiers in units with their leaders and move whole units rather than individuals to meet Army needs worldwide. The Army expects this will improve training and small unit leadership.

Meyer approved the transition plan that will begin rotating company level units in 1983 and some selected battalion level units in 1984. Company replacement from the continental United States to overseas is already underway with Project Cohort where soldiers go through initial entry training together. They next spend about 18 months in CONUS, then serve together overseas for 18 months.

First units

Tank, infantry, cannon field artillery and certain air defense artillery and engineer units are to be the first units into the system. Combat support and combat service support units will be phased in next.

Stabilizing soldiers is the first step in the process. The goal is to have first term soldiers stay together during the full term of their enlistment. Career soldiers will also spend from three to six years together in the same units.

Rotating stabilized units in CONUS with overseas units is the second step in the system. This rotation system goes one step beyond Project Cohort. Companies in CONUS will change places with overseas units. The rotating units must be interchangeable.

Begin matching

The Army plans to begin matching stateside battalions with overseas battalions having the same equipment, organization and military occupational specialties. Grouping these battalions into regiments is planned for fiscal year 1982.

Units will be rotated or replaced within the same regiment. Soldiers will be affiliated with a regiment and can expect recurring assignments to battalions within the same regiment throughout their careers.

The Army is also looking at a form of "homebasing." Units completing an overseas tour would come back to the same stateside installation "homebase" from which they departed.

Two workers indicted

Two Army employees at Redstone Arsenal and two other Huntsville area residents were indicted Friday by a federal grand jury in Birmingham on conspiracy charges.

John William Chambers and Roddy Hoyt Moody, the government employees, and Betty Ruth Laird and Billy Norman Brown were all charged under one count of conspiracy to defraud the government by obtaining payment of false and fraudulent claims.

The U.S. attorneys office said counts two and three charge Laird, Brown and Moody with submitting a false claim. Counts four through 22 charge Laird, Brown and Chambers with submitting a false claim, according to the indictment.

Laird and Brown were identified as employees of Laird Enterprises. The indictment covers the period from November 1978 to March 1980.

Moody and Chambers work in the Army Missile Laboratory technical information office, according to federal prosecutors.

The indictment resulted from a lengthy investigation by the Huntsville FBI office, officials said.

The conspiracy count carries a possible penalty of 10 years or $10,000, or both. Each of the other counts carry a possible five years or $10,000, or both.

Arraignment in Birmingham before a U.S. magistrate was scheduled for Sept. 17. "Trial would be tentatively scheduled for sometime the first two weeks of November," a federal attorney said.

Letters

He emerged; she sauntered

Editor:

Reference letter to the editor, Aug. 26, 1981, from Maj. Michael J. Murphy, concerning parking rules at Building 5250.

I was appalled by the descriptions used by Maj. Murphy to describe the owners of vehicles in question. The first description was of the owner of the red-decal vehicle: he "emerged" from the building, "talked" with the MPs, and moved his car. Second description: a female "sauntered out" and "sweetly" pointed out an official pass, and "was allowed" to move her car.

I believe that a woman, upon learning that she was about to receive a parking violation ticket, would be in such a hurry that "sauntering" out of the building would be out of the question. Also, if Maj. Murphy was close enough to hear the "sweet" pointing out the official pass, he should have taken that opportunity to voice his opinion to the NCO, the woman, and the MPs. If Maj. Murphy was not close enough to converse with them, he must have witnessed this incident from a nearby window. Surely, he is not waiting there for a repeat performance.

Maj. Murphy's letter was so filled with connotations about the owners of the vehicles that his justified concern about the illegal parking situation at building 5250 was completely lost in the shuffle.

No windows

Editor:

Did you ever work in a submarine without sea pay?

If you are unfortunate enough to work in C wing, 2nd and 3rd floors of building 5250 you know what the situation is. This section of building 5250 you know what the situation is. This section of building 5250 was the home of the Missile Intelligence Agency prior to June of 1980. MIA folks are mushrooms, thus they work best in the dark without windows.

The values of MICOM include statements such as "Create a people oriented environment", "Make people important", and "Enhance quality of life". The last "Big Move" in MICOM was made in June of 1980. Personnel were told prior to and after this move that these adverse working conditions were temporary in nature. A Military Construction Army (MCA) action is required to change these temporary working conditions. Is there a MCA to change building 5250? What is the cost of one small window per office?

Please withhold my name

Editor's note: According to Facilities Engineering there are no plans to install windows in the building.

Who's responsible

Question: When an entire office is abolished and personnel are placed by force development actions rather than by RIF, who is responsible for assigning office personnel to the new positions?

Answer: When management abolishes an entire office and RIF procedures are not used, management and the civilian personnel office are responsible for assigning personnel to the new positions.

Savings allotment to IRA

Question: Under the recently passed Federal Tax Law, federal employees are now eligible to participate in Individual Retirement Accounts (IRA), effective January 1982.

a. Can Standard Form No. 1198 be used for an allotment under the IRA program?

b. Will all of the local savings organizations participate in this program?

c. What is the earliest date that deductions can be made thru payroll to participate in the program?

Answer: You can pay into an Individual Retirement Account by taking out a savings allotment on SF 1198. You may make up to two savings allotments from your paycheck to IRA, Christmas Club or other savings account of your choice. Most local savings organizations will take the savings allotments. A savings allotment can be started at anytime.

New commander at DARCOM has Field Artillery background

The new commander of U.S. Army Materiel Development and Readiness Command is a West Point graduate who served as an enlisted soldier in World War II.

Lt. Gen. Donald R. Keith, 54, assumed leadership of DARCOM in a change of command ceremony August 31, succeeding Gen. John R. Guthrie who retired after 39 years of active Army service.

Keith has been nominated for promotion to four-star rank. He previously was assigned to the Pentagon as the Army Deputy Chief of Staff for Research, Development and Acquisition.

Some of his recent assignments have been commanding general, U. S. Army Field Artillery Center and commandant, U. S. Army Field Artillery School; commander, 36th Artillery Group in Europe; and commander, 5th Battalion, 73rd Artillery.

He was commissioned in the Field Artillery on graduation from West Point in 1949. He has a master's degree in science teaching from Columbia University.

Keith and his wife, Erika, have a son, Michael, also a West Point graduate, who is an Army captain serving at Fort Riley, Kan.

Guthrie, who was honored in retirement ceremonies Sept. 1 at Fort Meyer, commanded DARCOM during the Army's largest modernization program since World War II. The modernization included development of such systems as the M1 Abrams Tank, Black Hawk helicopter, Patriot air defense system, and the Advanced Attack Helicopter. He also put strong emphasis on the Army's efforts in electronic warfare, tactical intelligence, surveillance and target acquisition, and on "people programs" for equal opportunity, training and recognition.

How important is your job to America's defense?

SFC Robert R. Peiffer, Co. B — "As an ammunition storage specialist my job is very important. A soldier can fight in battle even without food and water for a while, but he has to have ammo."

SFC Walter E. Crawford, Co. B — "I'm a foreman for maintenance of the HAWK missile system. Of course my job is important. It deals with the deterrence of air attacks."

Sp4 Denis J. Burpoe, 515th Ord. Co. — "My position as a mechanic is a very necessary one. In the field, vehicles have to be running properly to transport troops and supplies."

Pvt. 1 John D. Tulk, 7th S.C. — "I'm learning to be an electrical-mechanical repairer for Pershing missiles, which have nuclear warheads. What I'll be doing is obviously a very important function."

Pvt. 2 Rudy E. Reader, Co. A — "I'm a driver and here I just perform a taxi-like function. But in battle I would have the crucial task of moving equipment and troops."

Sp4 Todd E. Russell, 515th Ord. Co. — "You have to establish communications out in the field and have the necessary equipment. As a tactical and field wire operations specialist, what I do is important."

New readiness director named

A 42-year-old Benton, Ill., native already scheduled for promotion to colonel, has been named the Army Missile Command's new Missile Systems Readiness Director (MSRD).

Lt. Col. George Crowder comes to Redstone from Germany where he was Operations and Training Staff Officer of the Operations Directorate, Headquarters U. S. European Command.

"We are off to a good start," Crowder said of the new command directorate that became operational July 5, "but much remains to be done. I look forward to improving directorate capabilities and Army missile readiness."

Crowder said the MSRD, staffed by approximately 225 people, has a challenging mission as MICOM's "retail" logistics side of the house.

"We manage the command's missile readiness programs, are the Army's agent for readiness reporting and provide responsive logistics assistance to field customers."

The MSRD provides on-site technical assistance to the customer, analyzes missile system readiness trends, and identifies lessons learned to be applied to new missile systems.

"We communicate and coordinate within MICOM and with other Army commands to prevent, and solve, readiness problems," he said.

By reducing the number of Redstone organizations dealing with tactical field units, the MSRD has concentrated retail operations and now offers one face, and better support, to the soldier.

Crowder is a graduate of Washington University in St. Louis, Mo., with a bachelor's degree in electrical engineering and holds a master's in industrial engineering from Arizona State University. He is a 1973 graduate of the Army Command and General Staff College.

In a previous Redstone assignment, he served in 1971-72 as Chief of the Missile Division, Officer Training Directorate, Army Missile and Munitions Center and School.

Among overseas assignments, he was advisor to the First Korean Nike Battalion, and later was Materiel Officer with the 86th Maintenance Battalion in Vietnam.

He is married to the former Jennie Cook of Green River, Utah. They have a daughter, Cassie, and a son, Carey.

CFC and United Way are separate

A common misconception is that the Combined Federal Campaign and the United Way campaign are one in the same.

They are separate fund-raising campaigns. The connection is that United Way is one of the recipient groups of CFC and receives a portion of CFC's collections based on a formula.

"CFC is an independent campaign which includes other groups and agencies besides United Way," said Barbara Lapidus, associate director of United Way of Madison County.

United Way is an "umbrella organization" of local human service agencies. "And the United Way is the fund raising entity which not only raises the funds for the member agencies and allocates the funds, but also does year-round evaluation and monitoring of the spending of the funds through volunteers and the process of citizen review," Lapidus said.

Its 22 agencies, some of which have more than one branch, receive funds from United Way's annual campaign.

United Way is one of several categories included under the annual CFC drive for federal workers. Others include international service agencies, national health agencies, national service agencies and local agencies not affiliated with a federated group (such as United Way).

"The differences (between United Way and CFC) derive from organizational structure, process of carrying out the intended operation and differences in the way the money is distributed," said Willard Holmes, chairman of CFC's Federal Coordinating Group.

A volunteer board of directors governs United Way and appoints an evaluation and admissions committee consisting of volunteers. Subcommittees screen agencies that apply for membership and report back to the committee which reports to the board.

United Way members may include local human service groups ranging from disaster relief to clothing, food, shelter, counselling and recreation services.

"Part of our money does come from federal employees through the CFC," Lapidus said. "We are a recipient group."

The year-round United Way staff "acts in a supportive capacity (to CFC) whenever we're asked," she said.

Coaches confident as company-level football arrives

Company-level flag football action gets under way Monday with three games scheduled for the field off Patton Road near "Tin City."

Players and coaches will wrap up a three-day clinic game officials tomorrow. Thirteen teams have signed up to compete and all of them seem confident and determined.

No team seems more determined than the defending champions, Headquarters and Headquarters Company. They want to be the first company to retire the Commanding General's All Sports Trophy. A good season will give them that prize.

Roger Yuraska, a member of the HHC defense and the company's first sergeant, said that new players will add size to the HHC line and speed to their corps of receivers. "But we have a lot of returning players and we'll field much the same team as last year," he added.

On the other hand, HHC will be lining up against many new faces. Company A, last year's Eastern Conference champions and runners-up in the tournament, are "virtually new" according to their coach, Leon Jones.

He said, "We're young and enthusiastic and we've been scrimmaging hard. We'll be playing football the way it's supposed to be played."

Company B was undefeated in last year's regular season play and earned the Western Conference title. Coach James Brittle said, "We'll be in the running again this year. We have a lot of depth at quarterback and good flexibility. I'd say the season is promising."

The 4th Student Company and the 515th Ordnance Company, both runners-up in last year's conference title chases, have their eyes on a crown this year.

"We plan on taking the post title," said

James Breaker, the 4th S.C. coach. He is confident the 4th has the size, speed and talent to go all the way.

Speaking of talent, the 515th's coach, Leroy Blanding, observed, "The talent is pretty evenly distributed this year. I don't think one or two teams will be able to dominate the league like they have before."

He said the 515th will pin their hopes on a solid defense, speedy running backs and a new, single wing offense.

This year's Eastern Conference includes HHC, Co. A, the 515th, MEDDAC, the 6th Student Company, the 291st MP Company and the 5th Student Company.

The Western Conference holds Co. B, the Marines, the 4th S. C., the 7th Student Company, the 95th Service Company and the 8th Student Company.

Week's predictions have Bama winner

BY SKIP VAUGHN

Louisiana State's Tigers travel to South Bend this weekend to take on Notre Dame's Fighting Irish in what should be a tight game.

Elsewhere, Tennessee takes on Southern Cal in another classic matchup.

Not-so-classic matchups this Saturday include Army at Missouri and Georgia Tech at Alabama. Mizzou's Tigers and Bama's Tide should come up easy winners.

A tough game to predict is UCLA at Arizona, who upset those Bruins last year 23-17. This picker believes lightning can strike twice . . .

Here are some predictions for selected games in Division I NCAA football this weekend:

- Army at Missouri — Missouri by 14
- Michigan at Wisconsin — Mich. by 10
- Georgia Tech at Alabama — Bama by 21
- LSU at Notre Dame — N. D. by 7
- Maryland at Vanderbilt — Md. by 14
- Mississippi at S. Carolina — Ole Miss by 7
- Tennessee at Southern Cal — S. C. by 3
- Rice at Texas — Texas by 10
- UCLA at Arizona — Ariz. by 3
- California at Georgia — Ga. by 10

Redstone takes 2nd

Redstone Arsenal's mens softball team returned from the TRADOC tournament Friday with the second place trophy.

In a week plagued with rain delays, the men downed all comers except the tournament's champions, Fort Eustis.

The Rockets shut out Carlisle Barracks (7-0), overpowered West Point (13-5), and dumped Fort McClellan (8-2) before Eustis edged them 7-5.

In the semi-finals, Redstone eliminated Fort Rucker, 6-5. Eustis won the final game 5-4.

Redstone's women didn't fare so well, losing their opening game to Fort Gordon, 5-1, and being eliminated by Aberdeen Proving Ground, 8-2.

Raise

Linda S. Thomas, a civilian personnel employee-relations clerk, "would like more (than 4.8) but I'll be happy with the amount I get."

"I think it's pretty good," said William Allison, a GS-7 technician for Army Missile Lab. "The way the outside industry's going up on wages, I think we should have one too. I think we should have a little raise because outside contractors and so forth are going up and therefore the cost of living is going up too."

Others described the economy's health as more important than a pay raise.

"I'd just soon not have a pay raise as long as my kids have a better life," said Ron Sabelhaus, a GS-9 engineering technician at Facilities Engineering. "I don't care if I never get another pay raise as long as my kids can live without 15 percent inflation."

The pay raise is "sufficient" for L. W. Simmons, a GS-12 electrical engineer at FE. "I think all will have to make a sacrifice to stabilize the economy."

Irvin Wright, a GS-12 designing engineer at FE said "I feel that the 4.8 is adequate due to the last fiscal cuts that were made and in light of this we ought to go into next year with a wait-and-see attitude.

"Also, I feel that civil service workers can accept this type of raise in light of the high inflation of this country," Wright added.

J. R. Williams, a GS-12 mechanical engineer at FE, believes civil servants have to "set the example for the rest of the country if we're going to support our president."

"I don't think we should be the forerunner of pay raises if the rest of the country has to suffer," Williams said.

Civil servants should not be the only ones to sacrifice, said Rick Hedrick, a GS-12 procurement analyst at P&P. "I hope everyone else will have to make the same sacrifices," he said.

"As long as it (4.8) will bring inflation down, I'm all for it. But I still think it's too low."

'Broke, starving in New York'

BY SKIP VAUGHN

In 1953, Juan Gerala had a choice: He could either try for a movie career in Hollywood or go to a university on scholarship.

Today the native Argentinian is the special assistant for international affairs in the Missile Command's legal office. Gerala has come a long way since the time he was a gifted dancer with a grade school education and a major decision to make.

His story is worth telling for Hispanic Heritage Week, Sept. 13-19. To Gerala, the annual observance means "recognition of the contribution made by Hispanic-surnamed personnel to the total American heritage."

He was born in July 1923 in what was then the suburbs of Buenos Aires. Gerala quit grammar school at age seven or eight after only a year and a half and "was self-educated from then on."

He came to America in late 1944 as a member of the Argentina merchant marine with ambitions to join the U. S. Army Air Force. "That's the reason I came here but they refused me because I could not speak one word of English," he recalled.

"They wouldn't take me so I joined the American merchant marine," Gerala said. "I was broke; I was starving in New York. The spectre of starvation motivated me to join."

The winters were cold — way below zero — and he only had one summer suit. "So utilizing American ingenuity, I learned how to use newspaper under my shirt (to keep warm)," he said. "I learned that in New York and it helps."

Gerala stayed in the U. S. merchant marine from the end of World War II to 1948 while taking correspondence courses to become a maritime engineer. He worked in the engine room on several freighters taking food to war-torn Europe.

Gerala dances aboard the SS Del Mar around 1951

"When I went to Europe, I was so happy the U. S. Army Air Force had not taken me because I realized the vexation of war," he said.

From 1948-50, he was a dish washer aboard passenger liners for the Delta Shipping Company out of New Orleans. One day the company president asked to talk to him, they talked and Gerala became public relations director and social director. He was a good dancer and spoke Portuguese and Spanish, important languages because of the many Spanish-speaking passengers.

Gerala came in contact with influential people aboard ship and impressed them with his dancing to Brazilian music and his lecturing on South American topics. He was offered a Hollywood contract and he was offered a scholarship to Tulane University.

He had a chance to become the next Ricardo Montalban (from Mexico) or Fernando

'You had to fight for it . . .

There was a lot of discrimination.

—Gerala

Lamas (from Argentina), both stars in the early 1950s. "My heart was never in it," Gerala said. "Unless you have a strong conviction that you can make it, you won't make it."

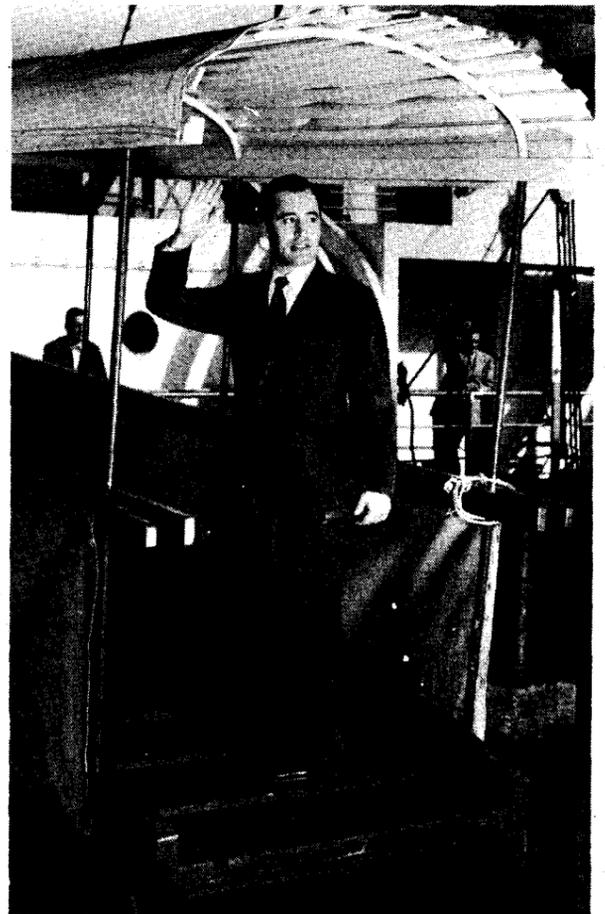

Gerala became a 30-year-old freshman at Tulane and was graduated in 1957 with a bachelor of arts degree in economics and inter-American affairs. He decided to go to the university's law school and was awarded a doctor of law degree in 1960.

During his last year at Tulane, the general counsel of the Army spoke to him and about 29 other students. Gerala soon found himself the only audience left and "I was too embarrassed to leave."

Later he received a phone call that he had been selected for the Army legal office in Birmingham, Ala. "I went there strictly by mistake," Gerala recalled.

"I came to see what it was like for two weeks and I've been with the government ever since," he said. He started as a GS-7 attorney adviser in the contract branch of the Army's Birmingham procurement district and he moved to MICOM in January 1964.

Gerala, an international affairs lawyer here for about 16 years, remembers how "difficult" his early days in America were. "You had to fight for it," he said. "There was a lot of discrimination."

Gerala poses in New Orleans aboard the luxury liner SS Del Mar in this picture used as an advertisement in the Latin American edition of Reader's Digest, May 1952. "That's when I was a male model," he says.

Course standards toughened for soldiers

BY JOHN WAGNER

Weight and physical training performance are linked to passing NCO, warrant officer and officer courses of eight weeks or more, under recent Training and Doctrine Command guidance.

A May TRADOC message provided the initial guidelines. Last month another message detailed the specific changes to be made. For failure to meet the weight and fitness standards by the end of the course the student can be, "Waived and graduated, . . . declared a non-graduate, issued a certificate of attendance and sent to his next assignment, . . . (or) processed for separation . . . if (he or she) failed to demonstrate any progress toward attaining the standards . . ."

Previously, failing to meet the standards resulted in an annotation on the individual's academic evaluation report.

"This represents a toughening of Army policies and is another step in 'soldierization' trends," said 1st Sgt. Laverne Reed of the 5th Student Company where all senior MMCS students are assigned.

"Before, there was not much enforcement except for sometimes barring NCOs from reenlistment."

The guidelines also gave requirements for dealing with students who don't meet the standards at the beginning of their course. These include a diagnostic weigh-in and physical readiness test within the first two weeks, medical assistance and remedial physical training, weigh-ins every two weeks, and a final physical training test or weigh-in before graduation.

Soldiers who are 40 or more are exempted from physical readiness testing unless they have had six months to prepare themselves.

Reflecting on the changes, 1st Lt. William S. Kelley, a 5th S.C. training, advising and counseling officer concluded, "After all, if a soldier is in battle and is overweight and out of shape he's dead. What good is he then?"

YOU'D BE SURPRISED WHAT YOU CAN GET IN YOUR NEXT ENLISTMENT JUST BY ASKING.

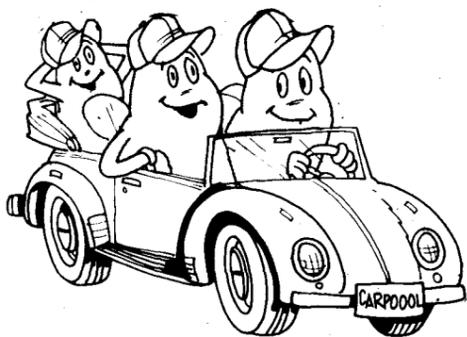

If you've always wanted an assignment in Europe, but somehow the Army always had other plans for you, now you can make your own plans. You can reenlist for Europe. Or Korea. The Canal Zone. Hawaii. Alaska. Or, if you're serving overseas, a new duty station in the continental United States. And all you have to do is ask. One soldier who did is SP4 Ralph Cook, 3/68 Armor, Mannheim, Germany.

"Getting to Europe is something I always wanted. They work you harder here, but I do get to see a lot. I like the architecture. The customs. The people. I've been to Munich twice now, and the Oktoberfest is just madness. Really fun?"

In your next enlistment, you could end up with a lot more than a new overseas assignment. Chances are pretty good you'll make more rank, earn more pay and move up in responsibility. So talk to your Reenlistment NCO. And find out exactly how far you can go in your next enlistment.
