Special operations command activated

WASHINGTON — A new command, called 1st Special Operations Command (provisional), was activated Oct. 1 at Fort Bragg, N.C.

The new command will bring all active Army special operations elements under a single headquarters for more coordinated training, contingency planning, logistic support, and command-and-control.

The new command is made up of the former John F. Kennedy Center for Military Assistance, which included the 5th and 7th Special Forces Groups, the 4th Psychological Operations Group, and the 96th Civil Affairs Battalion, all stationed at Fort Bragg.

Other units belonging to the new command are the 10th Special Forces Group (Fort Devens, Mass.) and the U.S. Army Ranger Battalions from Hunter Army Airfield, near Savannah, Ga., and Fort Lewis, Wash.

The new headquarters, commanded by Brig. Gen. Joseph C. Lutz, will be responsible for "the preparation, employment and sustaining of special operations forces in the conduct of foreign internal defense, unconventional warfare, psychological operations, Ranger operations, and related operations in support of U.S. national objectives and military strategy in peace and war," according to an announcement. PX pulls Tylenol

DALLAS — Extra-strength Tylenol capsules have been removed from retail stores run by the Army and Air Force Exchange Service.

The decision was made after learning that cyanide-contaminated Tylenol capsules had killed seven persons in the Chicago area. An AAFES official said, "We will pull all Extra-strength Tylenol capsules out of the stores until we find out what happened."

Investigators in Chicago have found that three production lots of the capsules were involved in the deaths. The last numbers, which appear on each bottle of the capsules, are: MC2880, MD1910, MB2738.

AAFES officials said, however, that they removed all extra-strength capsules from sale, regardless of lot number. Customers who wish to return extra-strength Tylenol capsules to their local exchanges will receive a full refund.

The exchange service also sells Tylenol Elixer, Extra-strength Tylenol tablets and Children's Tylenol tablets. These products were apparently not involved and will continue to be sold in exchanges.

MICOM adds 300 civilians

The Army Missile Command is adding more than 300 new civilian workers.

Maj. Gen. Robert L. Moore told the Huntsville Rotary Club yesterday that the workers had been hired in the past few weeks and are reporting to work now at the start of the new fiscal year.

Although Congress has yet to complete work on the FY 83 Defense budget, Moore said it appeared MICOM's annual budget would reach a record level again. Current projections, he said, indicate spending near $6 billion dollars.

That includes almost a billion dollars in weapons sales to friendly foreign nations with the approval of the U.S. government.

The pay raise for soldiers and federal workers that took effect Oct. 1, the MICOM commander said, would raise the total Army payroll in Huntsville to near $350 million.

MICOM sharply curtailed hiring several months ago to allow retirements and resignations to drop its civilian employment level to an authorized ceiling by September 30, the end of the fiscal year.

Despite increased workload indicated by a rising budget and starts on several new weapons programs, Moore said he did not foresee corresponding increases in total employment.

More work to be done by an essentially stable workforce, Moore said, required increased productivity. He outlined several actions MICOM has underway to boost productivity including increased use of overtime and efforts to encourage reduced sick leave.

Bringing new workers on board now, he said, is another productivity technique. He said the command would adjust its hiring rate later in the year if necessary to get within authorized limits by the end of the fiscal year.

MICOM's number one priority for the year, Moore said, continues to be insuring that it gets a full dollar's value for the American soldier for each dollar it spends.

Name rocket; win a prize

2.75, the Army's only aerial rocket, needs a new name.

So MICOM's 2.75 Rocket Management Office is conducting a contest seeking an appropriate name for the new and improved 2.75 system.

According to Army regulations assigning names to new equipment, anti-tank and assault weapons should be named after vicious reptiles and insects.

Names should be forwarded to: DRSMI-SR and marked "Name Contest."

Winner of the contest will receive at $25 savings bond, according to Gerald Smith, Chief of the 2.75 Rocket Management Office in MICOM's Missile Logistics Center.

MICOM is developing a new generation of warheads, fuzes, rocket motors and launchers to adapt the 2.75 to the Army's Cobra and Apache helicopters.

Coupled with the new helicopters and fire control equipment, 2.75 performance and effectiveness will be greatly increased.

Firefighting deleted

Contracting-out review delayed

The review of arsenal support services for possible contracting under the Army's Commercial Activities Program will be delayed approximately three months by a requirement to delete firefighting from the review.

Use of fiscal 1983 appropriated funds for contracting our firefighting is prohibited by the new Defense Authorization Act signed Sept. 8.

"It's probably going to slip our operational date by about three months, from 1 July to 1 October," said Bob Cloyd, manager of the Commercial Activities Program here.

The operational date is the target date for converting support services now performed by several hundred government employees to either a smaller in-house organization or a commercial contractor, depending on the outcome of a cost comparison study presently going on.

Cloyd said the companies that submitted support service proposals have been notified to revise them and resubmit by Dec. 2.

"They have to revise their proposals to pull the firefighters out," he said. This in turn will require

Grieving

Editor:

When a grievance proceeds to step three (3), the Command furnishes the Grievant three names, one of which is selected by the Grievant to investigate the grievance.

Approximately ninety-eight percent (98%) of all Investigator/Reports/Recommendations in favor of the Grievant are denied by the Command. It would appear that this is a waste of appropriated funds in that the investigator is being paid to perform his duties and then is later rescinded (shot-down) by the Command.

Furlough fiasco

Editor:

Now that the furlough fiasco is over, perhaps a few comments are in order to put the episode into perspective, especially from the point of view of one of those 35 who were affected.

A definite "Well Done" to MG Moore who became personally involved and made us feel a part of the system, and that he really cared. It was easier to accept than receipt of a cold, formal letter.

Another "Well Done" to the management of MIA who also took a personal interest in those MIA employees affected.

However, there were many "gray areas" with still unanswered questions. For instance, the furlough was scheduled to last 31 days, but the grievance and appeal procedures handed to us apparently didn't apply since the Merit Systems Protection Board regulations specifically state that they have no jurisdiction on furloughs over 30 days.

Why did some affected employees receive notification up to two days in advance and others get hit cold with the news at Gen Moore's meeting?

Why weren't Administrative Officers allowed to see the list in advance to correct obvious errors? The computer list is only as good as the data input, and in at least three cases, it was wrong.

Why weren't all Redstone employees given the chance of volunteering for a furlough? I have talked to some who would have jumped at the opportunity to take an unscheduled 31 day vacation without pay if there was no adverse connotation attached to it.

In my own case, the notice cost me an extensive amount of money by forestalling a planned investment (now unavailable) due to the uncertainty caused by the incorrect listing of my name. Do I have recourse?

In summary, the exercise is over and perhaps future "needed" furloughs will be conducted with more forethought as to proper procedures and of the possible effect of incorrect information on those involved.

Inefficiencies

Editor:

We are always complaining about the inefficiency of the Post and what we can do about it. There is a continuing lack of involvement by key personnel. I am a victim of this problem.

I received a DF stating I had duty on a certain day, I acknowledged this with the duty clerk that day. Three days later the roster was changed, placing me on duty one day earlier. Five days later I had received no notification of this and living off Post, I had not been by the Company to check the board. I have duty on a certain day, right! On the day of my supposed duty my NCOIC receives a call from Top, he wanted to know where I was last night? I had duty! "He has duty tonight," says the NCOIC. "Wrong a change was put out," Top said.

This was a change we hadn't received six days later, let alone five. (1st inefficiency) I admit my fault for not checking the Bulletin Board, but the inefficiency doesn't stop here. On the duty roster and changes this is underlined; personnel scheduled for duty will telephonically contact the duty roster clerk at 6-2873 upon receipt of this notification. I never contacted him because I never received the notification. This is also printed; Personnel will telephonically contact the Admin NCO at 6-6265/5137, NLT 1100 hrs on the day of duty. Duty member will report to place of duty NLT 1445 hrs on date of duty for briefing. I had not called before 1100 hrs or reported by 1445 hrs. Why wasn't I contacted to find out why? I was in my office till 1600!

I will take the punishment for my mistake but who is going to catch the rest of the key personnel?

New DDT pollution control method tried

BY ED PETERS

Redstone Arsenal plans to replace a costly DDT filtering apparatus with a "passive" system of check dams and diversion ditches designed to control and contain surface discharge from an old DDT factory site.

Arsenal environmental officials said they are conducting a monitoring program to prove that the new passive system will perform as intended and hold DDT discharge from Army property within the .6 parts per billion limit allowed by the Alabama Water Improvement Commission regulatory agency.

Since beginning the monitoring program July 21, officials said, the arsenal has maintained essentially a zero-discharge condition, indicating that the passive control and containment measures are working. In the one instance where heavy rain resulted in an overflow condition, the discharge from Army property tested .7 ppb.

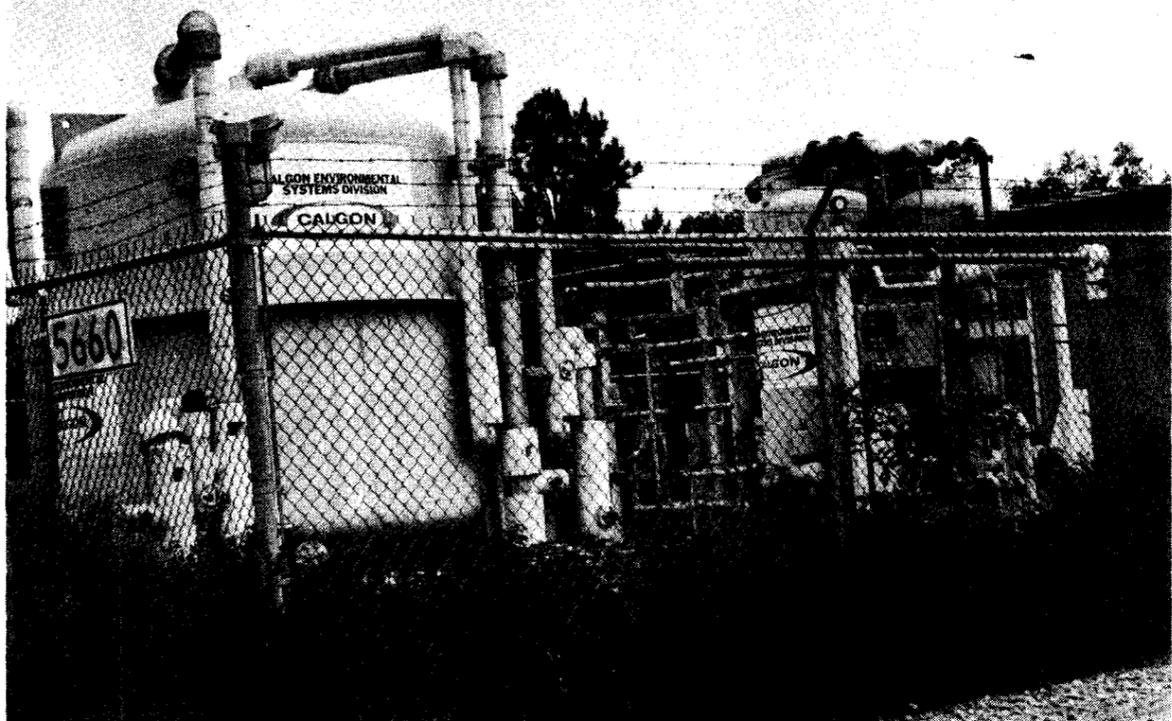

Water samples are analyzed as necessary by the Facilities Engineering water quality laboratory.

Under an agreement with the AWIC, the arsenal has and will continue to report its findings to the state, while the state has reserved the right to require future treatment should water conditions indicate that it is necessary.

The state concurred in the Army's decision to substitute the passive system and shut down the mechanical filter on the basis of its high cost, about $150,000 per year, and questionable effectiveness — estimated DDT removal in a year is less than one pound while Huntsville Spring Branch just downstream contains an estimated 800 tons of DDT.

The filtering apparatus was installed three years ago. Since then extensive work has been done to remove or seal up the sources of contamination around the old factory site at an expense of approximately $1.5 million.

Most recently, $86,000 was spent on drainage

Filtering equipment costs $150,000 a year

modifications to "dry up" the old factory area and prevent contamination from washing out of it. Additional retention dams were also installed to form rain water capture and settling ponds.

DDT was made on the arsenal for 23 years by the Olin Corp. and its predecessor organizations in a factory south of Mills Road leased from the Army.

High levels of DDT have been found in area fish and wildlife and in the bodies of people living in the Triana community on the arsenal's southwest boundary.

The U.S. Justice Department is suing Olin to pay the cost of cleaning up DDT in Huntsville Spring Branch, estimated at about $90 million in a 1980 Army Corps of Engineers study. The case is scheduled for trial in Huntsville in November provided no negotiated settlement is reached.

New weapons must be supportable

A weapon that won't work in battle is worse than no weapon at all in the judgement of one of the Army's top logisticians.

Lt. Gen. H. F. Hardin Jr. told an industry audience here last week that both industry and government are still not paying enough attention to how new weapons will perform once in the hands of soldiers and how they will be maintained and repaired.

Hardin, deputy commanding general for materiel readiness, U.S. Army Materiel Development and Readiness Command, told a group attending the second session of MICOM's Advanced Planning Briefing for Industry:

"You can design and develop and field the world's most sophisticated weapon but if you put it in the hands of soldiers and it is not supportable, all your work has been nullified."

Industry, Hardin said, must understand and apply the concept of integrated logistics support in every phase of moving new weapons to the combat forces.

"The place that (integrated logistics support) must begin is in concept development. The alternative is failure," he said.

PX cigarette prices increase Oct. 26

DALLAS — Major tobacco companies have announced cost price increases for cigarettes, necessitating a price increase by the Army and Air Force Exchange Service effective Oct. 26.

The increase will apply only to cartons of tax-paid cigarettes in CONUS, Alaska and Hawaii. Tax-free cigarette prices at overseas locations will remain the same.

Tax paid king/regular size cigarettes will increase from $5.50 to $5.90 a carton and the price of 100 & 120 mm cartons will be raised from $5.60 to $6.10. Individual packs in all lengths will remain at 65 cents. (ARNEWS)

Crimson Tide picked over Penn State

BY SKIP VAUGHN

This is the week of the long-awaited rematch between Alabama and Penn State.

Last year, Bama embarrassed State 31-16 on the Nittany Lions' home field. This year State has improved its passing game and the score should be closer. The result, however, should be the same.

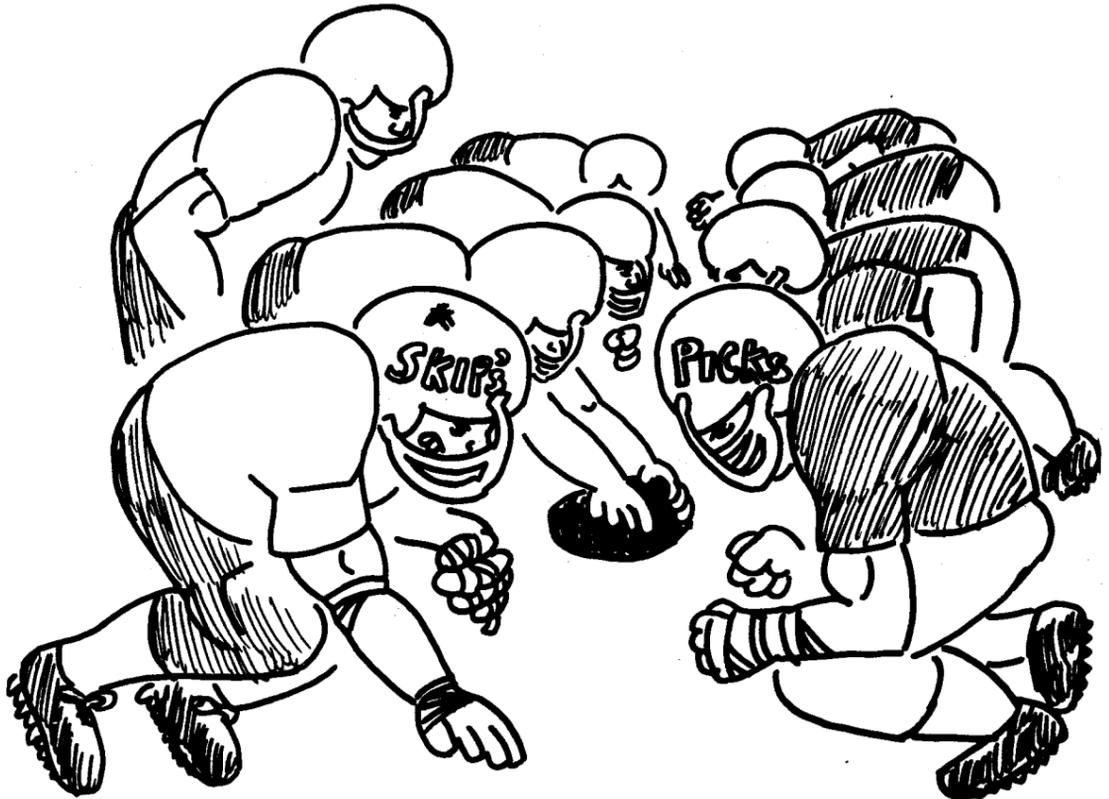

Tough Miami of Florida travels to South Bend to take on the much-improved Notre Dame Fightin' Irish. The revenge minded Irish should prevail.

A rash of upsets last week helped this picker to a so-so 20-11-1 record, bringing his overall marks to 95-31-1 for 74 percent. Here's this week's forecast of selected upper-level college football games:

- Army at Rutgers — Rutgers by 10.
- Boston College at West Virginia — W. Va. by 7.
- Navy at Air Force — Navy by 17.
- Penn State at Bama — Bama by 3.
- Temple at Louisville — Louisville by 7.
- Purdue at Illinois — Illinois by 10.
- Iowa at Indiana — Iowa by 14.
- Missouri at Kansas State — Mizzou by 7.
- Michigan State at Michigan — Mich. by 7.
- Miami at Notre Dame — Notre Dame by 3.
- Wisconsin at Ohio State — OSU by 14.
- Oklahoma at Texas — Texas by 13.
- Kentucky at Auburn — Auburn by 21.
- Clemson at Virginia — Clemson by 28.
- Virginia Tech at Duke — Duke by 14.
- Florida at Vanderbilt — Florida by 21.
- Mississippi at Georgia — Georgia by 14.
- Tennessee at LSU — Louisiana State by 21.

- So. Miss at Miss State — Miss State by 7.
- Georgia Tech at Tulane — Tulane by 17.
- North Carolina at Wake Forest — N.C. by 35.
- Arizona at UCLA — UCLA by 30.
- Stanford at Arizona State — ASU by 7.
- Brigham Young at N. Mexico — BYU by 14.

- Texas Tech at Arkansas — Ark. by 28.
- SMU at Baylor — Southern Meth. by 7.
- Texas A&M at Houston — Houston by 3.
- Rice at Texas Christian — TCU by 7.
- California at Washington — Wash. by 17.
- Oregon State at Wash. State — WSU by 10.

Photographer likes people best

The range safety officer for the school's EOD division is an award-winning amateur photographer who hopes to be a fulltime professional after retiring from the Army.

"I like people; I'm interested in people and I try to take good pictures of them," says Starkey. "If I take an embarrassing picture, I'll give it to that person and let him decide whether to keep it or throw it in the trash can. But I would not intentionally use my camera to embarrass anybody."

In a recent post competition at the crafts shop, he won first in color print, third in black and white and third in slides. A dozen of his prints were sent to this month's All-Army competition at Carlisle Barracks, Pa.

Starkey won best of show for color prints in the amateur division at the Northeast Alabama State Fair. He placed first in nature for color prints, first in animals for color prints, and second in black and white for sports action.

"And I won a fourth but I don't know what it was for because they didn't have the ribbons up when I saw the prints," he adds.

Photography is more than just a hobby to Starkey. He has had his own black and white darkroom at home for the past six years or so. "It started when I was at Fort Lewis, And when we went shopping for a house here, one of the requirements was that it had to have a place where I could set up my darkroom," he says.

Starkey has most of his color work processed locally by a custom photography laboratory "due to the complexity and expense of color negative printing."

He doesn't shoot pictures everyday but averages around "30 rolls of film a month." He'll buy a 100 foot roll of film and load it into individual cassettes with a so-called bulkloader. "There's enough film for 25 to 30 rolls of 36 exposure black and white film," Starkey says.

His cameras include seven 35mm cameras ranging from a Minox, the size of a cigarette pack, to a fully automatic Olympus OM2. He also has three "two and a quarter by two and a quarter" cameras and a sophisticated camera that was loaned to him.

"I got started when I was in high school. The editor of the yearbook asked me to take pictures," Starkey recalls. After graduation from high school in Laramie, Wyoming in 1965, he went to the University of Wyoming for two years but didn't take pictures.

He joined the Army in 1967 and found photography again when he went to Korea three years later. "And I've been photographing steadily ever since. At first I was interested in taking memories of where I was with me and now I'm interested in making memorable photographs," Starkey says.

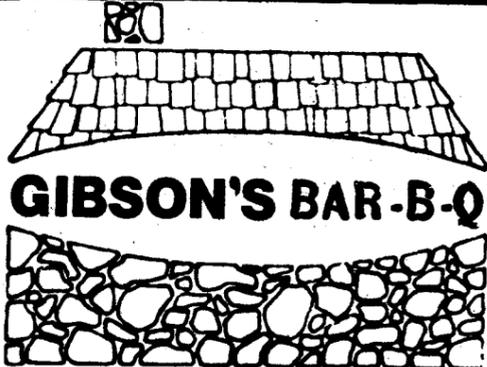

The 35-year-old soldier, originally from Eskota, Texas, is married to 1st Lt. Loretta Starkey. She won an honorable mention in the post photo competition and "takes pictures for memories," he says.

Last year, he won photographer of the year honors from the Huntsville Photographic Society of which he is a member. Seven of his pictures, including a softball photo that won the society's black and white print for 1980, were on display at the crafts shop.

"I think (photography) is an extremely effective method of visual communication," Starkey says. "I want to show the best of people at the moment of accomplishment."

Starkey points to one of his pictures on display at the crafts shop.

Missile R&D efforts coming to maturity, official says

BY BOB HUBBARD

The United States and its allies may have to cope with bolder Soviet military ventures and face possible conflicts in many parts of the world, a top Army official has told a Huntsville audience.

The threat is real, large and growing and is fueled by a massive Soviet buildup that goes far beyond what is needed for defensive purposes, Jay R. Sculley, assistant secretary of the Army for research, development and acquisition, said here last week.

Sculley said the Soviets in recent years have been building at an alarming rate and the result has been the loss of our strategic edge and a serious imbalance in conventional forces, he said, citing the Soviet lead in tanks, aircraft and missiles.

Responding to the challenge, U.S. forces must be flexible, a mix of light and heavy units, capable of being deployed rapidly, and equipped and prepared to respond to challenges ranging from international blackmail and terrorism to regional and proxy wars.

Sculley's remarks were made at a banquet of the 1982 Advanced Planning Briefing for Industry, hosted by the Missile Command last week in conjunction with the American Defense Preparedness Association.

"The Army's missile research and development efforts of the past decade are now coming to maturity," Sculley said, naming such systems as Stinger, Multiple Launch Rocket System and Patriot.

"In the near future, improvements such as the TOW 2, Stinger Post, and modifications to Hawk will provide a dramatic increase in combat effectiveness."

Looking ahead, military resources of men and equipment for the next decade are predictable, Sculley said, barring a technological breakthrough. New hardware now being fielded will be too expensive to replace with newer systems, so modifications to existing equipment will be a practical way to modernize the force at reasonable cost.

Sculley said future developments will be smaller, lighter, more modular and reliable, and less costly.

"Ultimately, the aim is to use technology to make things more simple," he said.

CFC helps many agencies; kept one alive

BY SKIP VAUGHN

Increased contributions to the Combined Federal Campaign helped keep at least one agency alive and upped funding to other service agencies.

"These are local agencies that are assisting people in and around Madison County," said Mike Hughes, executive director of United Way of Madison County.

He credits last year's record CFC contribution — totaling about $576,000 — with helping two agencies receive United Way funds for the first time last year. "The money raised in the CFC that stayed locally through United Way agencies helped to admit two new services — the Child Health Improvement Association and the HELPLine," Hughes said.

Child Health Improvement Assn. is a "well-child" clinic that provides postnatal care for children not under care by a pediatrician. HELPLine is a 24-hour a day, everyday call in service for crisis intervention, telephone counseling, information about the community and referral information.

"They have really kept us alive and I mean that," said HELPLine executive director Shirley Mohler of the United Way funds. "Our services seem to have increased this year. We have had an increase in calls over the last year and I think that's probably due to the economy."

Cost goes up anytime part of an operation goes up even though it is performed by volunteers, Mohler said.

"And the $8,000 we received by United Way has really helped this year," she said. "The relationship with United Way has been excellent."

Other local agencies received increases in funds last year. These include the Red Cross, Salvation Army, Catholic Family Services and Christmas Charities Year Round.

Red Cross helps to meet a family's emergency needs such as after a house fire, said United Way director Hughes. "To give them needed items at a point in time when they needed it most," he added.

Salvation Army, Catholic Family Services and Christmas Charities Year Round "received increases primarily to deal with people in emergency situations such as the loss of employment," Hughes said.

Christmas Charities Year Round clothed 1,580 school-age children last year and, from January through August, has already clothed 977 school age children. Its main purpose is to clothe underprivileged school children. The agency also clothes some adults and pre-schoolers, helps any family burned out by fire, and helps get toys for needy children at Christmas.

How was the agency helped by the increase in funding?

"It helped us be able to help more people," said Gerri Hardin, executive director of Christmas Charities Year Round.

'Care' included in campaign

Care, an international service agency, was mistakenly left off this year's Combined Federal Campaign brochure.

Contributors can designate to number 302, Care, on their pledge card, according to George Thurlow, chairman of the CFC Coordinating Committee.

"That was inadvertently left out of the brochure," he said. "It's not in there; it should have been."

Last year's brochure states that Care, international service agency 302, helps "millions of desperately poor families around the world to survive and work toward self-support through feeding, agricultural, school, water, health and medical programs."

Campaign has apparent fast start

The Combined Federal Campaign moved into its second week after an apparent fast start. First week totals showed pledges of $133,795.

"The first week looked good but this is no time to get complacent," George Thurlow said. Thurlow, chairman of the CFC Coordinating Committee, noted first week totals included reports from more federal agencies than reported in last year's first week.

"The next few weeks will tell whether we are collecting more or just reporting what we have faster," Thurlow said.

"There are still a great many people out there who have not been heard from. We are urging everyone to pledge this year. The amount, of course, is up to them, but we hope every federal employee in the area will participate in the campaign.

"People should be careful when they fill their pledge cards out. Make sure you complete the card and fill in all the blocks. We have seen many cards that have not been completed according to instructions.

"How well we do in MICOM is one of the real keys to the success of the campaign because MICOM is the largest individual agency in the whole campaign."

MICOM's first week total was $86,286, Thurlow said. "It remains to be seen whether that's a result of more efficient reporting or more generous contributions. I sure hope it's an indication that MICOM people are backing CFC," he said.

Problem found in shipping

WASHINGTON — Soldiers preparing to move to Alaska are urged to take special precautions with their household goods, it was recently advised by officials at the Military Traffic Management Command.

The precaution stems from a study revealing an unusually high incidence of loss and damage to household goods being shipped to Alaska. MTMC officials have taken steps to correct the problem; but in the meantime, soldiers should make sure that carriers are providing all of the services they are supposed to provide. This normally includes such things as a complete inventory of belongings and an accurate description of the condition of each item.

When it is received in Alaska, the property should be checked immediately for accountability and condition. Report any problems to the local shipping office, and make necessary claims as soon as possible. These procedures, by the way, should be followed on all moves, but are especially important when the service may be less than satisfactory.

MTMC officials hope to use claim information to establish performance profiles for carriers who move soldiers to Alaska. This would be the most reliable way of identifying those carriers who aren't providing satisfactory service. (ARNEWS)

Family 'Volksmarch' planned here

BY SKIP VAUGHN

A people's walk made popular in Germany, known as a Volksmarch, will be held at Redstone for civilians and military personnel Oct. 30.

The three and a half mile family event will begin and end at the NCO Club parking lot. "This is held in conjunction with the Oktoberfest at the NCO Club," said SSgt. Bill Stankiewicz, assistant operations sergeant for Special Troops.

A $2 registration fee includes an antique bronze medal for persons who complete the Volksmarch. Registration the day of the event is $3.

"It's a nice scenic route we've got picked out up through Weeden Mountain. It's not too steep for anybody," said Stankiewicz. The course is half in wooded areas and half in open fields.

Preregistration is set for 5-7 p.m. Oct. 26 through Oct. 29 at the Post Gym. Registration the day of the walk is scheduled for 8-9:30 a.m. with the Volksmarch starting about 10.

Redstone Arsenal annual Volksmarch T-shirts will be on sale at the registration points and at a stand on the day of the event.

"Authentic German beer is being provided by the German Air Force Liaison here at Redstone," said Stankiewicz. The beer and bratwurst, a German sausage, will be sold at the NCO Club. Soft drinks will also be available.

"There's limited numbers of medals and limited numbers of T-shirts so early registration is necessary to ensure they'll get one," Stankiewicz said.

Medals are to be awarded as people finish the walk which should take "about 2 hours."

The first annual event, sponsored by S-3 Special Troops, is open to all military ID card holders (including reservists and national guard), civilian and contractor workers at Redstone, and their families. People should have either an ID card or a Redstone security badge "and their families," Stankiewicz added. "It's a family day."

We expect about 2-3,000 people," the sergeant said.

A military stakes competition for about 25 selected six-member teams will be held over 10 miles at the same time as the Volksmarch. This is a separate event and will be held on a different course ending at the NCO Club.

Volksmarching started hundreds of years ago in Germany. Today, there are Volksmarching clubs that sponsor and go to each other's walks. The walks in Europe range from four to 20 miles, Stankiewicz said.

He and his family earned about 50 medals for participating in Volksmarches in Germany. It is a "rain or shine" activity.

"I think the main thing is to take the family out and get some exercise and meet other people at the same time," he said.

they also revise portions of their proposals dealing with government furnished equipment for firefighting. "Instead of government furnished equipment and facilities to maintain for himself, he'll be maintaining it for us.

"At the same time," Cloyd continued, "we're revising the in-house proposal to delete the firefighters from direct labor. This will require revision of the in-house bid almost completely because direct labor affects all other costs. Then the in-house bid must be reaudited."

Thirty nine firefighter positions at three fire stations were involved in the support services review.

Congressional backers of the provisions excluding firefighters, and security guards, from contracting said the jobs should not be subject to personnel turnover as might occur with contractors.

"None of the funds appropriated . . . may be expended . . . to enter into any contract for the performance of firefighting functions or security guard functions at military installations . . .," the Authorization Act states.

It also provides that no new Commercial Activities reviews may be initiated for six months beginning Oct. 1, but allows the extension or renewal of firefighting and security services already under contract.

In a Commercial Activities action completed earlier this year, arsenal security services remained in-house after a cost comparison showed the in-house team could do the work at less cost than a contractor.

The prohibition on contracting firefighter jobs did not catch the arsenal Commercial Activities group by surprise. "We figured it was coming and had done a little preliminary planning," said Cloyd.

"We're handling it all as an amendment or change to existing documents. It's just a scaling down. It doesn't scrap two years of effort."

There may be one advantage, he added, "It more nearly puts us on a fiscal year basis. That might put some funding and budgeting plusses to it."

Golf trick shot artist comes to Redstone

Trick shots and an educational clinic will be the menu for a free show by a professional golfer Oct. 10 at Redstone's golf course.

Paul Hahn Jr. of Florida has been touring the world with his entertaining exhibition for golfers and non-golfers alike. His show here at 4 p.m. Oct. 10 is presented by the Recreation Center and the golf course.

Hahn's one-hour show includes a semi-serious golf clinic followed by a demonstration of trick golf shots. He drives long shots while kneeling then while sitting on a sports seat. His comical clubs include a driver with a rubber garden hose attached as the shaft.

In his "Pendulum" shot, Hahn has a ball suspended on a string and swinging back and forth. He hits it at the right second and drives it over 250 yards down the fairway.

Hahn is a licensed pilot who has flown across the Atlantic and Pacific in a tour of 65 cities and 24 countries.

Dodd road closes

Two internal Redstone Arsenal gates for access to the range area have been closed until further notice, according to military police.

The north and south Dodd Road gates were closed at the request of test area officials. They will not open until a series of tests is complete, said Tom Campbell, chief of the test support office for Test and Evaluation Directorate.

"We're conducting tests over the roads and on an irregular hour basis, and sometimes we may have live missiles across the road which makes it a safety requirement as well as security," Campbell said.

These tests concern the operation of the TOW 2 missile system and are expected to be finished Nov. 8, according to Phil Carmack, supervisor of flight test operations for Test Area 1.

The closing also applies on weekends. Opening of the gates for special passage through the range area should be coordinated with the civilian guard division 876-4195/4196/4197.

Soccer revolution spreads to Redstone

BY HARRY SARLES

The soccer revolution that is sweeping the country has hit Redstone Arsenal in full force this fall. More than 300 boys and girls are now participating in this fast moving sport.

Run

Perhaps the most popular sport worldwide, soccer has taken a back seat in the United States to football, baseball and basketball until recently.

Youth soccer started at Redstone two years ago with six teams. Today that number has grown to 22 teams of 15 players each ranging from 5 to 14 years old. Soccer on the arsenal is truly a family activity with coaches, team parents and officials all participating on a volunteer basis.

In addition to being organized through the DYA, arsenal teams are also members of the American Youth Soccer Organization's Region 160 in Huntsville. As a result they play other arsenal teams and city teams as well.

"Everyone plays," is the motto of AYSO. Lt. Col. Tom Simcox, DYA soccer director, explains the organization's philosophy. "AYSO believes in balanced teams, positive coaching and all players playing at least half of each game."

Arsenal teams can be found in action almost any night of the week and on Saturday mornings. Games are played on the arsenal DYA fields, the old Huntsville Airport, Brahan Spring Park and the Huntsville Boy's Club.

Soccer players can begin learning the game at the age of 5. Presently the arsenal has five teams for 5 and 6 years olds. These teams play in a nine-team K-League. "The K-League is noncompetitive," explains Capt. Dave Brown, age group coordinator. "Games are won and lost but no standings are kept and no champion will be recognized at the end of the year. The K-League is for players to learn the basics of soccer and to have fun."

K-League games are played on Thursday afternoons at the old airport and on Fridays at the arsenal.

Moving up from K-League, teams are organized into two year age groups. There are six 7 and 8 year old teams, six 9 and 10 year old teams, three 11 and 12 year old teams, and three 13 and 14 year old teams.

The season ends for arsenal soccer players the last week in October. Tournament play featuring age group champions and all star teams will begin after that at the city, district and state level. Teams are scheduled to play in tournaments leading to the state championships at Dothan.

The American Youth Soccer Organization was founded in 1964 in Torrance, Calif. with nine teams. Since then it has grown to a nationwide organization involving more than 250,000 players in 28 states.

Redstone participation in the national organization began two years ago with the organization of DYA soccer teams. If growth continues Redstone should be able to form its own region in the near future while continuing to maintain its close relationship with the city's international league and boy's club, said Simcox.

CWO2 Ron Golden, deputy soccer director and 7-8 age group coordinator sums up the AYSO program. "We try to provide honest competition in which winning kids are more important than winning games."

CIVILIAN LIFE MADE $1,660 EASIER.

If you've made up your mind to go back to civilian life, there's a way to make the financial transition easier.

Join your local Army Reserve part-time. It can really pay off for you. For instance, a former E-4 with 3 years experience now makes over $1,660 a year. Not bad for a weekend a month and two weeks annual training.

And don't forget the PX privileges, low-cost life insurance, retirement points and all the other Army Reserve benefits.

Look into it. Contact your unit reenlistment NCO. Or call 800-421-4422 toll free. In California, 800-252-0011. In Alaska or Hawaii, call 800-423-2244. Overseas, write Box 4000, N. Hollywood, CA 91607.
