Army Missile Lab again wins award of excellence

The Army Missile Laboratory here is becoming a winning dynasty equal to the UCLA basketball champions of the 1960s and early '70s.

For the fifth year in a row and seventh out of the last eight years, the laboratory has won the Award of Excellence from the Department of the Army. The lab was named Army laboratory of the year in 1981.

"There's no doubt in my view that you really are the best laboratory," said Dr. William McCorkle, director of Army Missile Laboratory. He received the 1983 award plaque in a ceremony attended by many of his workers Friday in the lab's high bay area.

"Our greatest asset are standing right before me," he told the audience. "You people are the essence of our laboratory."

Dr. Richard Haley, assistant deputy for science and technology at the Army Materiel Development and Readiness Command, presented the award. He said it was earned "through outstanding achievement of sustained superior performance."

Haley told how DARCOM headquarters nominates its top laboratories to the Department of the Army. Labs are considered for such things as the technical basis, managing initiatives, fiscal management and personnel management. "We try to make the best choice possible," he said.

"It's a pleasure to be here and make this presentation," said Haley.

He mentioned that he had also presented the award here last year and that he would try to leave another message. "Work is one thing and it's very important," Haley said. "There's other dimensions to our lives that are important outside of work." He listed family, church and recreation.

Haley read a card he said his late wife, who was killed in an automobile accident this past June, had always carried with her. It was a promise to "do the best I can" and on the back instructed the reader to pass the message on. Haley said he was passing on the message for Army Missile Laboratory and then presented the plaque to McCorkle.

McCorkle emphasized the importance of the defense business and praised the lab's performance. "Keep it up," he said.

School board to consider school rezoning plan

The Huntsville Board of Education will consider school rezoning recommendation by Dr. Mary Jane Caylor, acting superintendent, her staff and a team of consultants at a work session tomorrow night.

The board will meet at 6 p.m. at 714 Bob Wallace Ave. to transport other business then move to Huntsville High School at 7:30 p.m. to begin work on the zoning plan. The shift of meeting site is to accommodate an expected large number of parents.

The rezoning plan developed by the board's consultants has been discussed in five public hearings the board held last month to gather opinions from parents and others.

The proposal has been opposed by MICOM's Commander, Maj. Gen. Jerry Max Bunyard, arsenal parents and parents from other sections of the city.

The Army has contended that the rezoning plan does not give equitable treatment to the children of military families living on Redstone Arsenal who now attend city schools closest to the arsenal. The rezoning plan recommended by the board's consultants would require arsenal youngsters to attend other elementary and middle schools, further away from the arsenal.

Caylor indicated in a public hearing Jan. 23 at Butler High School that some modifications may be made in the plan before she formally presents it to the Board of Education for approval.

Any changes she proposes will probably be made public at the meeting tomorrow night. The board hopes to vote on the rezoning later this month. Any plan approved by the board must also be approved by a federal judge.

Jet vest sought for space museum

The original jet vest if it could be located would be a valued addition to the collection of the Space and Rocket Center, according to Director Ed Buckbee.

The jet vest invented here more than 30 years ago has been missing for some time and its whereabouts is unknown.

Interest in the jet vest and its inventor Thomas M. Moore has been rekindled with the planned use this week of a personal flight device by the Army's first astronaut, Lt. Col. Robert L. Stewart.

Stewart will become "the world's smallest spacecraft" as he uses a back-pack "Manned Manuvering Unit" in experiments Friday outside the Challenger space shuttle.

"I would certainly say that what will be flown Feb. 3 is an extension of the work that Tom began three decades ago," said Buckbee of the Manned Manuvering Unit's relation to Moore's historic jet vest.

"I see a direct tie between it (the jet vest) and this mission. I think there is a definite tie between the two," said Buckbee, curator of the world's largest collection of museum items relating to space flight.

Buckbee said the museum has "a backpack of space age design" but lacks an early example. "We don't have anything like that," he said of the jet vest. "It would go quite well with our early rocket history."

Moore's jet vest—only one example was ever built—has been lost for some time. It was last seen, as far as can be determined, around 1966 when it was returned to "the laboratory" after being used here in patent proceedings.

Sick leave poster contest winners announced

Ten workers here will receive $150 each as winners of a sick leave poster contest conducted by the civilian personnel office.

The contest was held in October and November by personnel's management employee relations division. There were 284 entries.

"It was a contest to solicit ideas for posters to encourage sick leave conservation," said Jimmy Temple, chief of management employee relations and incentive awards branch. "The checks will be presented in the near future."

The 10 winners, in order of points awarded, include John M. Henriksen of Missile Logistics Center; Mary H. Hart of Roland Project; Sara E. Gallagher of Patriot Project; Shirley L. Hayes of MLC; Kay R. Ward of civilian personnel office; Walter L. Hannum of Patriot Project; James D. Wilson of plans and concepts office; Ronald L. Harmon of RASA; Thomas M. Billingsley of MLC; and Donald L. Mansfield of MLC.

Being alienated

Editor:

The Kuwait/Jordan Programs Branch of the Hawk Project Office would like to extend our heart felt appreciation for the generous response that we have received to the personal crisis our clerk-typist, Joni Bare, whose home burned Christmas.

Your sacrificial giving and concern have turned the dreary outlook of an unbearable situation into one of hope and optimism for the future. Your prayers, gifts, and contributions made the difference. Thank you.

Off-road vehicles

Editor:

I applaud Bill Schroder's comments in your article, "Off-road vehicles should stay on road" (Jan. 18 issue) and the Army's decision to prohibit off-road vehicle use on Redstone Arsenal. I have observed off-road vehicle damage to the utility right-of-way near Huntsville Spring Branch. This damage makes walking through that area very difficult. Further, since more vehicles than hikers can easily penetrate remote areas, off-road vehicle access encourages more frequent disturbances to wildlife habitat.

Editor:

As a white male (with 18 years' government service) I am more frustrated and appalled each day by policies of the government that discriminate against me in employment, training and promotion.

But what really destroys me is the supervisors (first line and up) that just close their eyes and go along with those policies. I guess money, position and advancement mean more to them than what is morally right or wrong. I don't know how they sleep at night.

I noticed on the news the other night that the new Civil Rights Commission has realized that these policies are destroying racial harmony and discriminating against a white male, who is not responsible and does not condone past racial discrimination against blacks, but is being alienated by quotas and preferences.

Petition candidates elected to credit union board

Both petition candidates and an incumbent have been elected to the Redstone Federal Credit Union board of directors.

Elected to the board for three-year terms were petition candidates Donald B. Cook and James M. Flanagan along with incumbent Richard J. Allen. Results of the mail ballot election were announced at the credit union's 32nd annual meeting Jan. 26 at the Sheraton Inn in Huntsville.

Board Chairman Charles Ray noted a $2.3 million increase in net income for the credit union over the year-end 1982 amount. He announced two new automated teller machine sites for 1984. The satellite stations will be located at the corner of North Memorial Parkway and Mastin Lake Road, and near the corner of Bailey Cove Road and Weatherly Road. The sites were purchased by the credit union.

President Roy Hollihan reported that assets reached a record-setting $175.7 million while net earnings climbed to $2,968,024 in 1983. He said 14,900 new members joined during the year, bringing the membership total to 76,999 by year-end.

After the annual meeting, the board elected its officers and executive committee for 1984. They include Charles Ray, chairman; Richard J. Allen, first vice chairman; Dr. Delia Black, second vice chairman, Dr. Pat Odom, secretary; and Jack Swearingen, treasurer.

Bids sought for Kwajalein work

The Army's Ballistic Missile Defense Systems Command has issued a competitive solicitation for a contract to provide range engineering, data acquisition and data reduction services in support of Kwajalein Missile Range in the Pacific Ocean.

The national test range managed by the BMD Systems Command for the Department of Defense supports developmental and operational testing of U.S. strategic offensive ballistic missiles, development and testing of ballistic missile defense technology, and various space tracking programs.

The winning contractor will be required to operate and maintain range instrumentation to accomplish these missions, as well as provide mission planning and control, data reduction, communication, reentry vehicle and missile debris recovery from the Kwajalein lagoon, systems engineering and integration, and range improvement and modernization.

The period of performance will be three years with a two-year extension option available to the Army.

The majority of the contractor's employees will be stationed full-time at Kwajalein, which is 2,100 miles southwest of Hawaii.

Solicitation packages were mailed on Jan. 12 to all firms which have expressed interest in this requirement. Responses are due by April 30. Announcement of the award is expected in late summer or fall, and performance of the work will begin on Jan. 1, 1985.

Black history month activities planned for February

Gospel singings, a fashion show and a variety show are planned for Black History Month here in February.

The first event was set for this afternoon at 3:30 in the Recreation Center. Col. James Hall, commander of School Brigade, was the scheduled speaker.

A social on Feb. 9 is the next scheduled event. This "coffee house" to include poetry readings will start at 5 p.m. at the Recreation Center, according to Sp4 Prince Cummings, a member of the black history month committee.

"We observe black history month to preserve the actions of blacks in the past, thereby allowing the black people of today to keep cognizant of the fact that there was a struggle," he said. "In other words to not let us forget the blacks of the past and what they went through and to keep in mind some of the contributions that were made for blacks today."

A committee of about 16 soldiers has been planning for the month in conjunction with the chaplains and equal employment opportunity officials. The theme is "A black American struggle for excellence in education."

Algetha, a nationally known gospel singer who has appeared regularly on the television show "Hour of Power," will perform at the chapels here on Feb. 15. Her first performance will be at the 6 a.m. weekly prayer breakfast at Post Chapel. An ecumenical service at Post Chapel at 4 p.m. will also feature her and she will perform at Bicentennial Chapel at 7 p.m.

"Staff soloist for the Robert H. Schuller Institute for successful church leadership, Algetha is considered one of the best Christian singing talents in America today," the chaplains said in an announcement. "The Redstone Arsenal chapels are proud to present her as part of their recognition of Black History Month."

On Feb. 18 at 7 p.m., area gospel groups are scheduled to perform at Post Chapel. They include the Blessed Peace Choir from Oakwood College, the Alabama A&M gospel choir, and the St. Bartley's Brotherhood Choir from St. Bartley Primitive Baptist Church in Huntsville.

A fashion show, also featuring a disco and dinner, is scheduled for 6-8:30 p.m. Feb. 25 at the NCO Club. A variety show is set for 7-9 p.m. Feb. 27 at the Recreation Center.

"Oftentimes when people are struggling for a cause, once that cause is satisfied they have a tendency to forget. They become complacent," Cummings said. "And the observation of black history month is a reminder that we still have an objective to pursue."

Missile test finds software problem

The third flight in the Army's Homing Overlay Experiment (HOE) has confirmed the accomplishments of the program's first two flights and exposed, in one of the experimental missile's on-board computers, a software problem which is being addressed.

As announced earlier, the flight was conducted Dec. 16 from Kwajalein Missile Range in the central Pacific. The HOE program is exploring technology for optically homing nonnuclear missiles that could be launched from the ground to destroy an enemy's strategic nuclear missiles before they reenter the atmosphere.

Together, the three HOE flight experiments have satisfied more than 90 percent of the program's objectives. As a result, only the final objective remains to be accomplished: converting the data from the missile's optical sensor into steering commands that bring it close enough to permit nonnuclear destruction of the target.

Preliminary preparations for the fourth HOE flight experiment are presently underway.

Officers advanced course change approved

WASHINGTON—A modification to current advanced courses for Army officers has recently been approved by the chief of staff to be developed by the Army Training and Doctrine Command. The courses will feature classes designed to meet officer career development requirements and the needs of the Army.

Training officials report that beginning in 1985, officers will attend a 20-week course, comprised of a core curriculum and modules based on Army and students' needs.

At the end of OAC, officials say, officer requirements can be met by additional modules totaling six weeks of intensive training based on their upcoming assignment; to include courses covering command, maintenance, recruiting, operations, security and special equipment.

TRADOC officials are currently developing the courses in coordination with branches schools.

Pentagon officials state that specialty branches are being encouraged to contact TRADOC for assistance relative to their courses. (Arnews)

Faulty weld bring jack stand recall

DALLAS—An "Auto-Mate" jack stand has been recalled by the manufacturers for possible defects, according to the Army and Air Force Exchange Service.

A malfunction during manufacturing is responsible for the defect in the jack stand, Model 172 (1-1/2 ton). Auto-Mate notified AAFES that a welding machine malfunctioned from Nov. 18 through Nov. 22, with the result that the weld at the leg junction may be defective on stand produced during that time.

Auto-Mate has recalled stocks and AAFES urges customers who bought the jack stand after Nov. 18 to bring the unit back to an exchange for refund or replacement.

Pay raise could be better, say federal workers

Federal workers who received a 3.5 percent pay raise say it just wasn't enough.

The increase was reflected on pay checks received last week but at least one worker said he didn't notice it.

"The indications are that the cost of living went up more than 3.5 percent during the year so the pay increase didn't keep up with that cost of living which in effect makes federal employees have less spendable income than they had in the past," said Jimmy Temple, a GM-13 branch chief in the civilian personnel office.

The 3.5 percent pay raise became official by default last year when Congress adjourned without taking final action on a budget reconciliation bill. That omnibus measure called for a 4 percent federal pay raise.

U.S. workers were due a raise last October to catch up with industry. According to data collected by the government, that pay increase would have had to be more than 21 percent to bring civil servants up to pay equality with the private sector.

But the Reagan administration rejected that figure as being too high and proposed instead a 3.5 percent raise beginning in January. Congress could have changed the amount and the date, but it didn't.

"Not enough," said Joe Dickey, a GS-13 energy coordinator in Facilities Engineering.

Milton Bone, a GS-3 mail clerk at MICOM headquarters, wasn't satisfied either. "I feel like this, it wasn't a 3.5 percent pay raise simply because everything they gave they put it toward something else. Like Medicare and everything else, you know insurance went up. So I don't think much of it," he said.

Lois Norton, a GS-6 voucher examiner at Finance and Accounting, was pleased to just get a raise. "I think it was great, just wish it was more," she said. "I'll take anything they offer, and more."

Judge to rule on discrimination suit

A federal judge will rule in about a month in a suit brought by a black missile engineer charging discrimination in hiring and promotion practices at MICOM.

U.S. District Judge U.W. Clemon heard testimony in the suit brought by McKinley Bailey last week in Huntsville.

Bailey charged he was denied a promotion "solely on the basis of his race."

His attorney, Donald V. Watkins of Montgomery, told the court Bailey was promoted to GS-14 after he filed the suit individually against the Secretary of the Army early last year.

Bailey is also seeking retroactive pay for the period he was "discriminatorily denied" the position.

His suit charged that the selection process used at Army elements at MICOM had an adverse impact on black civilian workers.

1.3% Medicare tax not deductible

The 1.3 percent Medicare tax on federal paychecks is considered a Social Security tax and is not deductible from income tax.

"That's not deductible," said a taxpayer service representative with the Internal Revenue Service in Atlanta. "If someone needs more information they can call this toll free number, 1-800-424-1040."

The local number is 539-2751. A Redstone employee had called the MICOM public affairs office to ask whether Medicare could be deducted.

North Carolina native is Marine of the Quarter

BY SHEILA WALKER

Lance Corporal Harry H. Smith has been selected as Marine of the Quarter.

He was presented several gift certificates by CSM Harvey Kahl, command sergeant major at MICOM, during a Meritorious Mast at the Marine Corps Detachment on Jan. 27.

Smith, a High Power Continuous Wave Radar Repair Student, was selected because of his outstanding demonstration of leadership qualities and knowledge of Marine essential subjects.

He has received several athletic awards and participated in many of the community activities sponsored on the arsenal by the military. He also has received many letters of recognition for his performance.

In addition, Smith has been a platoon leader at the detachment for the past seven months. As the platoon leader, he is in charge of about 25 men and responsible for the general appearance of their uniforms and living area. "I also try to take care of them personally, like helping them with their problems for example," explained Smith.

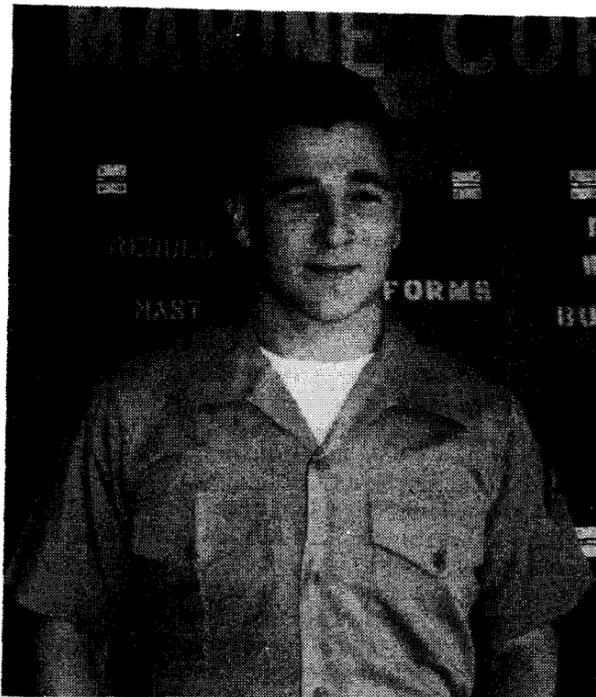

This Newport, N.C. native joined the Marines 16 months ago because he was looking for a change and found that the Marines here are just one big family. Smith will be stationed in Cherry Point, N.C. after he graduates on Feb. 7.

"I feel honored to be the Marine of the Quarter. I feel that it has helped my morale. It has also helped me to know that I could achieve higher things. It is a stepping stone to better success in the military," Smith stated.

In a brief statement after the mast, Kahl said, "We have the Soldier of the Month and the Soldier of the Quarter to recognize our outstanding soldiers. I want to recognize all of the units on post. I also want to recognize the Marine of the Quarter. Because he is a Marine doesn't mean he can't be recognized. They work and play here and go through the same things the soldiers goes through. They are winning and should be recognized. I want to recognize anybody whose unit recognize as outstanding. I enjoy being a part of that. Be all that you can be. We are all on one team."

In addition to the Meritorious Mast he received at his detachment, Smith will also receive several gift certificates from AAFES merchants, a gift certificate from McDonald's, Wendy's and the Enlisted Member Club for a meal. The NCO Wives' Club and Domino's Pizza each contributed a $10 gift certificate.

Army attorney taking step toward extended career

BY SKIP VAUGHN

Capt. Eugene Stoker plans to take advantage of the opportunities open to Army attorneys.

He was one of 74 officers selected to attend this year's advanced course for the Judge Advocate General's Corps. The graduate-level course is a step toward an extended career as an Army attorney.

"It's good to be going," said Stoker, an attorney assigned here on a contract law specialty program. The nine month course begins in August in Charlottesville, Va. for selected officers who will have completed their current tour.

Stoker works with civilians in the adversary proceedings division of the general counsel's office. He and Capt. Charles Mellies, who works in a procurement branch, are both judge advocate officers assigned here in contract specialist slots.

After the course Stoker looks forward to an assignment with the Army in a contract law area. "The professional opportunities available in the procurement law specialty are outstanding," he said.

As examples he listed the possibilities of teaching procurement law at the judge advocate general's school, working in the contract appeals division or working in the commercial litigation branch of the civil law division.

"I look at the professional opportunities and from my background I for one have not been frightened by moving around a lot," Stoker says. "I've always enjoyed seeing different places. Germany was certainly enjoyable. We've enjoyed our time in the Huntsville community."

Stoker, 32, is used to moving from one city to another. His father Robert, now retired in Victoria, Texas, was a construction engineer for DuPont. "We could challenge anybody in military service for the number of moves we made when we were growing up," said Stoker, the youngest son who was born in Brevard, N.C. and attended high school in Columbia, S.C.

His older brother Darrell is a major in the transportation corps at Fort Lee, Va. His oldest brother Robert was a soldier killed in an airplane crash in 1977 in San Antonio, Texas.

Stoker received a bachelor's degree in political science and speech from the University of Pittsburgh in 1973. He was graduated from the University of South Carolina school of law in 1976 and passed the South Carolina bar that year. "I applied for direct commission my senior year of law school and was accepted pending notification of passing the South Carolina bar exam," he said.

He entered the Army in January 1977 and was assigned to the staff judge advocate office at Baumholder, Germany. Three years later Stoker returned to Fort Jackson, S.C. as a trial counsel for two training brigades. Later while assigned as a procurement law officer, he applied for the contract law specialty program under the Army Materiel Development and Readiness Command.

"June '81 was when I received notice I was selected and as a result would be sent to one of the DARCOM installations and that's when I came here," said Stoker, who arrived here November 1981.

He and his wife, the former Connie Damasceno of Meadville, Pa., have a 5-year-old son James and a 4-year-old daughter Natalie. His hobbies include music and sports.

For Stoker, there is more to his chosen career than opportunities and travel. "The Army needs its lawyers too," he said.

Three families get Great American Family Awards

BY GINGER STEPHENS

Three Redstone families know the secrets of how to be a Great American Family and were honored for leading exemplary lives and inspiring others to do better as a family.

Parental commitment, teamwork, and dedication to a goal of sharing family happiness to help others are secrets to winning the Great American Family Award for the Downings, Heckers, and Rochas.

Capt. David Downing, Lt. Col. William Hecker, Jr., and SFC Aurelio Rocha and their families were given awards in a ceremony at the Bicentennial Chapel Friday. Maj. Gen. Jerry Max Bunyard presented each family with certificates of appreciation signed by First Lady Nancy Reagan for their individual growth, teamwork, and services to others as a family.

The Hecker family was selected to represent Redstone at the Army Material Development and Readiness Command level competition for the Great American Family Award. Selection for the award will be made in the spring and the winners will go to the White House in Washington, D.C. for the awards ceremony in the summer.

Parental commitment is one thing that David and Cher Downing believe keeps their family of 11 together. But parenting comes easy for the Downings.

With nine children between the ages of two and 12 years old, life in the Downing home is "never a dull moment." "Everybody has a talent and we think kids is ours," said Downing. "Some people have antiques and we have kids. We just love kids," he added.

Six of the seven adopted Downing children are a family that came to live with them two years ago. "We went from a family of five to a family of 11 in one day," said Cher.

The Downings decided to adopt again after first adopting a son in Germany then having two natural children. The social worker jokingly suggested they adopt a family of five and was surprised at the Downing's positive reaction. They were the first family in Alabama to accept such a large family for adoption.

"When we went to pick them up the social worker asked if we knew about the sixth one. We were just getting close to saying 'Eight is Enough'," said Downing grinning proudly.

Eight was not enough. The Downings adopted the entire family of six and started their lives all over again.

Each child has a chore, according to their ability to help with the everyday operation of running the household. The children rally to help each other with homework, to take care of the baby, or care for the one who is sick.

They also have activities they share inside and outside the home. At home the Downings pray daily with the children emphasizing worship and Bible study.

Activities outside the home are a family affair also. The boys are cub scouts and Capt. Downing is a cub scout leader and active member on the Education Committee of the Apple Computer User Group.

The Downings have provided the children with a home computer and developed computer programs designed to meet the particular needs of each child. Two of the six recently adopted children were previously diagnosed as mentally retarded but through prayer, patience, the security of their family and the tutoring given by the Downings the two are doing average school work.

The girls in the family, including Cher, are actively involved in scouts also. Cher is a Brownie and Girl Scout troop leader. She is also a room mother for two first grade classes and together the Downings are active in the Morris Parent Teacher Association.

When the bus route for neighborhood children was eliminated, Cher volunteered to transport eight additional neighborhood children to and from school.

Other than at home, Capt. Downing and Cher touch 120 children's lives a week.

Children are not the only people they touch. Together they lead a discussion reinforcement group for adoptive parents. They help parents of older adopted children to develop parenting skills, to support each other and to deal with problems they could relate to. Pre-adoptive counseling for parents adopting hard to place children is another activity they are involved in and feel strongly about.

Of all the activities the family is involved in the Valley Fellowship Non-Demoninational church is one of the most important. The Downings have been contacted by other churches in other cities to conduct their "Children's Church," a Sunday school type program they developed. The program teaches children about prayer, the Bible and a commitment to God.

The children and all the activity created makes a happy Downing family, according to Cher. "I'm totally satisfied and content. I wouldn't change anything but the strep throat," she said laughingly.

"When all nine had the flu it was like a morgue around here," said Capt. Downing. Although they have their share of common childhood illnesses the Downing family boasts a dental record of no cavities in two years.

Like most families who vacation they go to all the fun places like Disney World and Sea World. "We took two weeks and camped out in a pop-up camper," said Capt. Downing. "We had a great time."

Other than group activities the Downings try to spend special time with each child. "The secret is individual attention and love," said Downing. "We try our best to keep a line of communication open. God helps," he added.

Once a week they go out to eat as a family and the children alternate to go out with Capt. Downing to a Friday night hockey game.

With all the time dedicated to the children, the Downings still find time for each other. They have to work together to find time for each other and believe their marriage is better than most because of it.

"We date about once a month ourselves," said Cher. "We get a babysitter and just go out."

The babysitter was hesitant at first when she found she was sitting for nine but has come to love the children and they have her, according to Cher.

"Paying to babysit nine, we've probably sent her to Florida or on a shopping spree," said Capt. Downing with a grin.

Food and laundry is another expense and chore at the Downings that is double of most families. They estimate a $400 food bill per month and six loads of laundry a day.

"But we're able to handle it, we put everybody on a duty roster," said Capt. Downing, laughing.

His Army training slightly infiltrates the home and with 11 organization is important.

The military life is great, according to Capt. Downing. "My job is great. We're putting out good soldiers for the Army."

Cher agrees. She believes a supportive Army wife is important and getting involved and excited about her husband's work is important to their marriage.

She is a member of four different military wives organizations, all pertaining to Downings responsibilities as an officer.

"I want to support him. As long as he's in the Army, it's my job too," said Cher. "He's making major next week and we're all really proud. The kids get cake, I get weight, and he gets leaves, but we're all excited," she said.

The Great American Family Award came as a surprise to the Downings. Capt. Downing and Cher believe the kids are the family of the year.

"The children are our lives," said Cher. "I want them to get the glory because they are the heroes. We're lucky to have them."

The Hecker family believes in teamwork. Getting involved and working together to pull the community together is easy for an Army family, according to the Heckers.

"In an Army family, you move in and you're apart of it right away. So, it doesn't take long to become apart of what's going on," said Nancy Hecker.

The Heckers have continually given community service to each community they have lived in through 18½ years of military service. Most of their service has been given to the youth in the community.

The entire family is heavily involved in the scouting program. Scouting has benefitted both sons, Bill and John, in addition to hundreds of other young boys the Heckers have led in scouting.

Scouting is well supported by the Army, according to Lt. Col. Hecker. "The Army community, from the top, supports scouting. It raises good citizens," he said.

As a team Lt. Col. Hecker and Nancy, with the help of other parents, directed a day camp for scouts in Heidelberg, Germany. It was a success for over 200 community members who were involved.

Backpacking is another way the Heckers spend time together. "I love the outdoors," said Hecker. "We all do."

THE ROCHAS: SFC Aurelio

THE DOWNINGS: Front row is Charlotte (9), Denise (10), Duffie (8), Dian (6); back row, Devin (9), Peter (7), Mamie (12), Allan (4), Cher, Debbie (2), and David Downing.

But not all their time is spent outdoors. Hecker, an engineering project manager, has an interest in Ham radios and computers. He belongs to the Alabama Society of Professional Engineers and is chairman of the society's corporate fund raising committee that focuses on improving engineering excellence in the local community.

Currently Lt. Col. Hecker is helping Nancy in carrying out her responsibilities as 1st vice-president of the Officer's Wives Club by making the computer equipment available to her.

Other than the OWC and scouting, Nancy has donated time to communities through athletics, youth programs, and education.

With a degree in physical education from the University of Kansas, Nancy has always incorporated her love of outdoors and sports with her dedication to the community. Nancy started a project in Albuquerque, N.M. to build a much needed neighborhood playground. With the help of community parents and the Hecker's leadership, $19,000 worth of cheese was sold and a playground was constructed.

It all takes teamwork, according to the Heckers. "We're good team builders but it's the team that makes it successful," said Nancy. "We generate the enthusiasm and build the team, but one person can't win it."

Nancy admits it's a lot of hard work but they have so much fun and make life long friends while working on their community projects.

After Nancy's community services, there is still spare time for the family, according to Hecker. "We always find time as a family to get out backpacking or skiing," said Lt. Col. Hecker.

He supports Nancy's volunteer activities that make her such a well rounded individual. "I've been able to grow a lot as a person because he cheers me on," she said. "I'm an awesome tennis player, and enjoy golf, bowling and gourmet cooking."

The opportunities the Army gives the Heckers is what makes the Army a fun place to live. "We're just representative of all military families because it's the nature of the Army family to get involved," said Nancy.

And Redstone is the ideal community place for an Army family, according to them. "I think this is a beautiful community," said Nancy. "Starting at the highest level there are good role models here and we're going to hate to leave."

Hecker has been selected for the War College so the Heckers will be moving to Washington, D.C. for a year but plan to work their way back because "this is home" for the St. Louis family.

The Great American Family Award was doubled when they were also selected to represent Redstone at higher level competition. The Heckers will compete at the Army Material Development and Readiness Command level in the spring for recognition as the Great American Family at the White House this summer.

The award surprised the Heckers. They were very pleased and proud to accept it but look at themselves as team players.

Juanita Roach. The kids were in school.

THE HECKERS: Bill, Nancy, John, and Bill.

"It wasn't just the Heckers," said Nancy. "It was everyone."

Happiness and helping others is the key to a great American family for the Rochas. SFC Aurelio Rocha, and his wife Juanita, and children Victor, Elizabeth, and Carlos are heavily involved in community activities and volunteer work.

The Rochas strive for happiness within the family and volunteer their time to helping others to help promote happiness.

The entire family volunteers to help with Catholic chapel services. Sgt. Rocha is an usher, the children are altar servers, and Juanita is a Eucharistic minister and Catholic Sunday school teacher.

Juanita is a member of the Catholic Women of the Chapel and a representative for the NCO and Spanish Community to the Catholic Parish Council. She has also helped with clerical work in the Catholic office before the workload became so great that additional paid services were needed.

Together, Sgt. Rocha and Juanita are members of the Marriage Encounter Circle. The organization promotes Christian retreats for couples and the Rochas often babysit so many of the couples can attend.

"Once we had as many as nine children for a weekend and loved it," said Sgt. Rocha. "I love children and I think they like me. They're interesting. They can make a problem a game."

Juanita helps organize Catholic masses in Spanish for the Spanish speaking congregation. The children are bilingual enabling them to serve at both English and Spanish speaking masses.

Outside the chapel, the Rochas have their individual volunteer interests. Sgt. Rocha is an electronics instructor at the Missile and Munitions Center and School here and enjoys every aspect of his career. "I've enjoyed the military. My career has been good because I've learned something I've always wanted to do," he said.

After work he devotes much of his time to helping his students, coaching children's soccer, and working a part-time job as projectionist at the post theater. He is also an Income Tax Assistance volunteer helping people in the Redstone community with income tax questions.

Juanita has a life outside the home and church that she enjoys. She plans to return to her career in nursing after their youngest starts to school but until then spends many hours helping people who are stranded with transportation and language problems.

"We've been there. Without a car and needing groceries. Other people helped us when we were in need so it made us want to help others when we could," she said.

As treasurer and member of the NCO Wives Club she picks up additional responsibilities and opportunities to help people in the community.

Juanita also makes time for herself during the day to jog, exercise, and pursue her hobbies in ceramics, photography, and bowling.

"I normally jog five miles in the mornings to get me going. Ceramics relaxes my mind and bowling improves my coordination," she said.

The children are safety patrol volunteers at school and often volunteer their parents to help with PTA activities.

"They like for us to be involved," said Juanita. "We don't want to be bystanders. Elizabeth once told us that she wants to grow up and help people like we do. We want to be a good example for our children."

The Rochas feel they have reached a point in their lives that they can contribute to the community. "Instead of complaining, we want to do something about it. Our children are at the age that they want to imitate and if they have a good example they will follow it and help people too," said Juanita.

Sgt. Rocha encourages Juanita and is proud of her activities and volunteer work. He feels it makes her happy with life, herself, and him. "If it wasn't for him I couldn't do my volunteer work. He's so good about letting me be myself. I can mature and be my own person," said Juanita.

The time away from home makes Juanita appreciate her family more yet reminds her that her family always comes first.

The Rochas make a special effort to always eat dinner together. Their active schedules are important but family time together is more important. They enjoy picnics, swimming, walking, bowling, and going to the movies as a family.

The Army life for a family takes teamwork, according to the Rochas. Juanita and the children like to travel and Sgt. Rocha helps make each move as comfortable as possible.

"Each time we move he tell us to keep an open mind. He has a lot to do with how happy and satisfied we are with a place," said Juanita. "But home is where the heart is. As long as we're together we're happy wherever we are."

The Great American Family Award was humbly accepted by the Rochas. Slight embarrassment was experienced when the family was rewarded for something they do for their own satisfaction, according to Sgt. Rocha.

"We do things to help people and not to be recognized for it," said Juanita.

"We knew we were trying to help people and solve some complaints in the community we had, but we didn't expect to get an award for something we believed in," said Sgt. Rocha. "We just want to help people."

'Uncle Sam' joins reenlistment office

"Uncle Sam's portrait puts military personnel in a more patriotic frame of mind," says Sp5 David Poarch, Company A's reenlistment NCO. "What better place to have Uncle Sam say 'I want you', than on the wall of the reenlistment office."

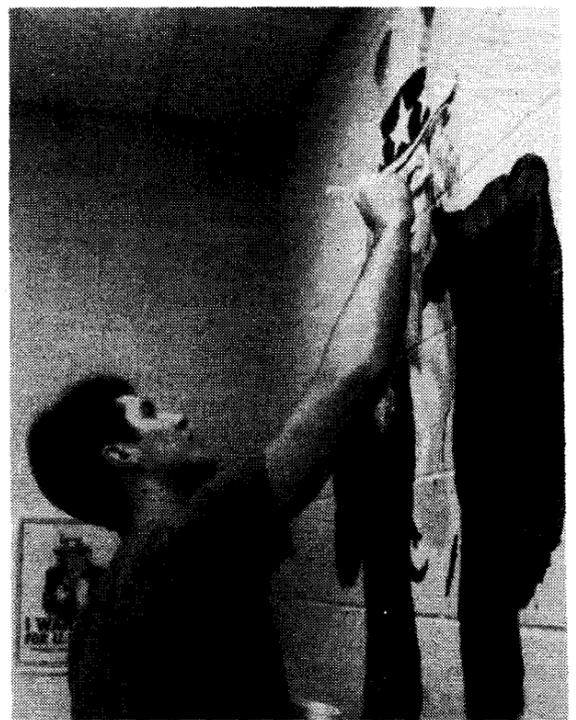

PFC Franklin Whaples was chosen to complete the portrait because of the talent he demonstrated in the giant Christmas card contest this winter. Whaples says he likes doing the painting for his own satisfaction, because it's fun and he wanted to see if he could do it.

"I think that when people come in to reenlist they may get a chuckle at first because of the painting," says Whaples, "but it may help lighten up their reenlistment."

The oil-base painting is 6 feet wide and 7 feet 8 inches high on the west wall of the office. Bright colors of red white and blue stand out, on a blue/gray background, and give a patriotic atmosphere.

Besides making the office more attractive, Poarch says the portrait helps people realize the importance of reenlisting.

"It's never too early to start protecting your career," says Poarch. "If individuals (in Company A) who are within eight months of their ETS date and are interested or undecided about reenlisting, they should either call me at 876-8468 or 876-6518 or come in and discuss possibilities of reenlisting."

DETAILS on Uncle Sam's face are brushed in by PFC Franklin Whaples.

Survival is the name of the game and to survive, you must get all the training necessary to survive in whatever weather you're in."

"I thought it was good because I had frostbite once in my feet," says Pvt. Willie Baker, "I was in the hospital for a week with frostbite and couldn't walk. Maybe if I had known then what I know now it would not have happened."

7th Student Company gets winter weather training

BY MAGGIE CUMMINS

Seventh Student Company had special winter training at the post theater Saturday with films and an Arctic Protective Clothing demonstration.

A platoon sergeant with actual experience with frost bite and a student with cold weather training in Alaska demonstrated the importance of cold weather gear and the gear's protection against severe cold.

SSgt. David Barry (7th student company platoon sergeant), explained the proper wear of the winter gear while Sgt. James Arnold (TDY from the 82nd Airborne Division, Fort Bragg, NC) put the gear on.

Barry said the troops should be sure they have everything they are issued and know what to do if they are in severe cold weather. "They should also know what to do before they get frostbite and what to do before it gets too bad," he said.

Barry takes cold weather training seriously because he was a victim of frostbite while in Germany. "I know what it can do that's why troops must get something out of this training and take it seriously," he said.

"Because of the type of weather we have had here lately, we need to be better prepared for cold weather and how to train in it," said Capt. Billy Dowdy, commander of the 7th Student Company. "We pay a lot of attention to heat injuries and not as much attention as we need to possible cold weather casualties."

To assist students in proper dress for cold weather, Arnold carefully picked up each item of the Arctic Protective gear as Barry explained its use.

Arnold said he trained troops while in Alaska too. "Training troops here about cold weather and dressing for this type of climate is important," said Arnold. "A lot of people are from the northern states where the winters are drier. You can get frostbite a lot easier here because of the moisture in the air. A lot of the troops are going to Korea and Germany where they need to utilize this type of gear, so they need to know how it goes on. Believe it or not you also get a lot of heat casualties in the winter because people will dress too warm."

The students seemed to take the training seriously as they raised hands and answered questions during the verbal testing part of the training.

Pvt. Christian Key said, "This training is good because a lot of the guys will need it when they go out to their fields. I hear the temperatures get pretty frigid."

Soldiers to get medal for Grenada operation

WASHINGTON—Soldiers who participated in the Grenada operation between Oct. 23 and Nov. 21, 1983, will receive the Armed Forces Expeditionary Medal.

The Department of Defense recently approved the medal for all U.S. Army forces who qualify in these operational areas: the island nation of Grenada including Grenada, Carriacou, Green, Hog, Calivigny and other outlying islands and the territorial seas of Grenada; waters adjacent to Grenada in which Atlantic fleet ships operated in direct support of operations in Grenada; the airspace above Grenada and adjacent seas areas where operations were conducted; and the Grantly Adams International Airport in Barbados.

Soldiers who participated in a combat parachute jump are authorized to affix the bronze arrowhead to the AFEM.

The degree of participation warranting award of the AFEM is as outlined in para 4-29 of Army regulation 672-5-1; except that the qualifying criteria for non-unit direct support personnel is reduced to six consecutive days or 12 nonconsecutive days. (Arnews)

Grenada award dates change

WASHINGTON—The eligibility dates have been changes for Grenada operation wartime awards and decorations.

A new eligibility period of Oct. 23 through Nov. 21, 1983, replaces the original Oct. 24 to Nov. 2, 1983, time frame.

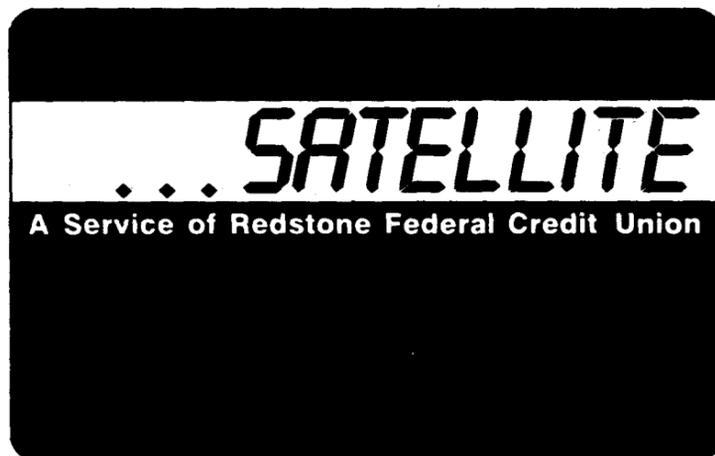

The change coincides with the Joint Chief of Staff approval for the Armed Forces Expeditionary Medal. (Arnews)

Retiring official had fun despite all the regulations

BY SKIP VAUGHN

George Woodward recalls the early days of the missile business here when things were done without regulations.

"There weren't any rules so you got to make your own as you went," says Woodward, deputy project manager at Chaparral/FAAR who retired effective Jan. 31. Except for three months as a soldier in basic training, he spent all of his more than 32 years service at Redstone.

The Tennessee native started as an engineering draftsman in 1951, was drafted three years later, then was surprised to be sent back to Redstone as a soldier. After two years in the Army, he decided to stay on as a civilian. "In the '50s the missile business was a new business," he says. "It was interesting and I don't know where else I would've gone and been able to be involved or know all the things that were going on."

Woodward was in what he recalls was the first Army missile project, Shillelagh, and has been in a missile project ever since.

"Back in the early '50s no one here knew what a regulation meant and we got things done," he says. "Now we're being strangled by regulation. The projects were set up in the late '50s to try to get the job done in spite of the regulations and now the projects are being strangled with regulations also."

"Things that we used to do in two or three days now take three or four weeks. Things that used to take a month, now take a year. And this is one of the biggest reasons for the increase in the cost of our weapon systems. Time costs money and when you stretch it out, you're increasing the money. If it's from one month to 12 months, you multiply the cost by 12. But in spite of all this, it's been a fun 32 years."

The 1950s were before the space agency arrived at Redstone. What is now NASA was the Army's Guided Missile Development Division and the entire command was involved in tactical as well as space technology, Woodward recalls.

He is impressed with technology's advances since then. "A computer the size of a large room is now reduced to thumbnail practically. We have gone from open cockpit airplanes to landing on the moon and reusable shuttles and that's a whale of a step," he says. "The things that can be done with weapon systems today, Buck Rogers and Flash Gordon couldn't think them up hardly."

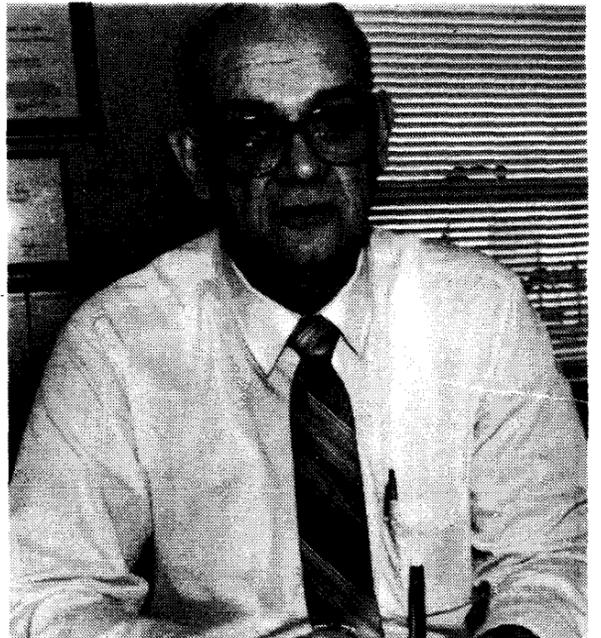

Woodward, 55, grew up in Johnson City, Tenn., about 100 miles northwest of Knoxville. He was graduated from Science Hill High in Johnson City, got a bachelor's degree in industrial arts from East Tennessee State University in 1951, and received a master's in public administration from the University of Oklahoma in 1976.

In 1951 he started as an engineering draftsman in what is now the Procurement and Production Directorate. "It was in a tool and dye design section. At that time they were planning to build missiles on Redstone Arsenal," he recalls. "But that never came about to the degree that they were planning at that time."

Woodward joined Chaparral/FAAR as deputy project manager in May 1975. He and his wife, the former Mary Anne Chapman of Johnson City, have two sons and a daughter. Steven is married and lives in Atlanta, Charles is a senior in electrical engineering at the University of Alabama in Huntsville, and Ellen is a senior at Huntsville High. He plans a "second career" in a company in Huntsville.

"The job in this project has been relatively easy because we've got a whole project full of good people and working with them in getting things done is what makes it fun," he says.

Missile Systems upsets F&A in basketball action

Missile Systems topped F&A from the unbeaten ranks in an 86-64 stunner last week to leave the 1983-84 CWF basketball championship up for grabs with three games remaining.

The loss dropped F&A into a tie for first place with P&P #2 which rolled past Corps of Engineers 82-52.

Both have identical 7-1 records and both front runners lost to Missile Systems.

Strong defense and balance scoring told the story for Missile Systems as Larry Cable took honors with 26 points while teammates Glenn Gurley had 16, Autro Whitman and Leonard Luqman 13 each.

Keith Frost had 20 for F&A.

P&P #2 was sparked by Willie Epps with 32 while Bobby Ford added 14 and Calvin Boone 12. Jerry Mullinix had 20 and Steve Glover 12 for COE.

In other games, Security defeated Missile Labs 89-44; F&A rolled past Missile Labs 95-41; Green Machine nipped Comptroller 59-55; and Structures turned back T&E 59-46.

James Nesmith led Security with 21, closely followed by Joe Eason with 20, Abdullah Muhammed and Mason Hammons with 18 each. Don Ford had 14 and Dan Barker 12 for Missile Labs.

James Battle led F&A past Missile Labs with 22 points with support from Earl Fitchard with 16, Don Battle 13 and Keith Frost 12. Chester Damaracki had 11 and Rick Headrick 10 for Missile Labs.

Buphus Nall took honors for Green Machine with 32 points and Charles Upshaw added 12. Larry Gopher had 17 for Comptroller.

For Structures, top pointgetters were George Snyder with 21, Audrey Askew 14 and Fred Campbell 13. Steve Low had 13 and Ricky Wilbanks 12 for T&E.

Troop basketball enters third week

BY PRENTISS THOMAS

The unit level basketball program is into the third week of play, and both conferences, which are about evenly matched have some great teams.

In the Eastern Conference, A Company has taken the lead with HHC close behind in the standings. A Company leader, Sp4 William Kelly is among the best in the league. HHC's hopes are riding on the great shooting of SSgt. M.C. Gamble, whose nickname is "Papa Smurf."

In the Western Conference, it's a toss up with MED-DAC, B Company and the 6th Student Company.

The 515th may still be able to take the standings, but that will have to wait until they are back from a field exercise at Fort Hood, Texas.

A big game will be on March 2 when the Arkansas Gems, a women's team, takes on the Redstone Rockets Men's Team at the Post Gym. Admission is free.

Redstone chaplains attend annual training workshop

Encourage participation was part of the advice offered to chaplains at an annual training workshop.

Chaplains of Redstone Arsenal attended the DARCOM Chaplain Training Workshop along with more than 75 other ministers, priests and rabbis Jan. 16-20 at the Springfield (Va.) Inn. Among the speakers was Chaplain (Col.) Edwin Rowan, post chaplain at Fort Monmouth, N.J.

"Parish development and vitalization is a planned process which enables a congregation to become faithful and effective in (carrying out) its ministry and mission within its particular environment," Rowan said.

He said the church should encourage people to participate, increase their awareness to take charge of their lives, and help people develop skills and resources to shape their lives. Rowan added that master religious programs "are produced through the use of participative management" where parishioners are involved in the decision-making process of their church.

The Rev. Laurence Brett, of the diocese of Bridgeport, Conn., said the bible should be challenged more often. "Too often (we) see the bible as pre-packaged doctrines and see uncritically... How do we know it's God's word?" Brett said. "Only if we know its true meaning will we be able to proclaim (it is) God's word."

Other speakers included Chaplain (Maj. Gen.) Patrick Hessian, chief of chaplains, U.S. Army, and Maj. Gen. Claude Kicklighter, DARCOM chief of staff. Conference attendees also had the opportunity to meet Gen. Donald Keith, DARCOM commander.

GETTING AROUND CAN BE EXPENSIVE.

If you're headed back to civilian life, reserve yourself an extra income one weekend a month.

Unlike the Army, most civilian jobs don't provide transportation. You already know how much cars and gasoline cost.

But wait'll you see what it costs to ride subways, buses or commuter trains these days.

There's a way to cope. Just spend one weekend a month with your local Army Reserve unit, and you'll earn a lot more than bus fare.

Did you know that an E-5 with four years' experience now makes over $115 for a Reserve weekend?

Add in two weeks annual training pay, and the total can easily top $1,922 per year.

You can also continue to save by buying tires and other auto accessories through the PX. Reservists get PX privileges.

Plus retirement points toward a pension which begins five years before Social Security.

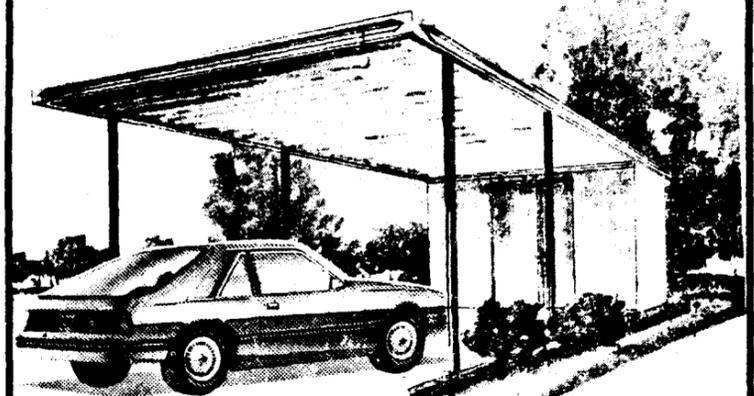

Wouldn't it be nice to have all that waiting when you get home?

It can be arranged. See your reenlistment NCO or unit commander. Or talk to your in-service recruiter, listed below. Act fast. The cost of getting around on the outside increases every day.

ARMY RESERVE. BE ALL YOU CAN BE.
