Civilian welfare activities panel open to suggestions

Improving the recreation area is among the goals for the Civilian Welfare Fund Council, according to its new chairman.

Other goals include continuing basketball, softball, tennis and other CWF sports activities "as they become formulated," said Carl Chambers. The general engineer in Hellfire/GLD project office was elected chairman by the council members in August.

"We're open for suggestions," Chambers said. "Everybody that's got an idea, let us know."

The 28-member council (including alternates) operates the civilian recreation area located on post near the river. "We're involved with the Rustic Lodge, the civilian welfare athletic program, and the MICOM picnic," Chambers said. "And under the athletic program, we have basketball, softball and we support tennis."

A budget approved at a council meeting Sept. 3 included $6,000 for basketball, $6,000 for softball, $600 for tennis, and $8,000 for next year's MICOM picnic.

Lela Johnson, caretaker at the recreation area, can be reached for Rustic Lodge reservations or for scheduling picnics by calling 876-6862. Her office hours are 9 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Wednesday through Sunday (closed Monday and Tuesday).

"We have in that area, boat launching capabilities for boats 20 feet or less," Chambers said. He added that council members can give out discount tickets for the Alabama Space & Rocket Center, Disneyworld, Opryland, Six Flags, and the USS Alabama in Mobile.

Council plans include putting up fences for the ballfields at the recreation area, installing playground equipment there, buying additional chairs and tables for the Rustic Lodge, and adding tennis courts to the area. The council also plans to install all-weather doors at the lodge and electrical outlets at the pavilion or "camping" areas, Chambers said.

The next CWF sports season, basketball, starts Nov. 24 and continues through May 1987 including tournaments. An organizational meeting is set for 1 p.m. Oct. 2 at the old post gym, building 5663, where the games are played.

Besides Chambers, council officers include vice chairman Peggy Hodo of RD&E center and recorder Pat Blackman of Comptroller. Mae Hargrove is the fund custodian.

Civilian Welfare Fund Council members are:

Jean Adams, representing Missile Logistics Center, 876-1982/1943, with alternate James E. Owens 876-1745; Larry Bigby, representing Defense Property Disposal Office, 876-3640; Denise Boone, representing Procurement Directorate and Small Business Office, 876-6195, with alternate Ellen Bomer 876-3432; Pat Blackman (recorder), representing Comptroller, 876-9706, with alternate Dewayne Kelley 876-4404; Sammy Campbell, representing Missile Systems Readiness Directorate, 876-4020, with alternate Harry Harris 876-2727; Penny Cancel, representing Strategic Defense Command, 895-3586, with alternate Paige Stagner 895-3110; Carl Chambers (chairman), representing Tow, Pershing, Hawk, Roland, Hellfire/GLD, 876-6176, with alternate Dan Tatum 876-1271; Mae Hargrove (fund custodian), 876-3701; Peggy Hodo (vice chairman), representing RD&E center, 876-5520, with alternate Calvin Parker Jr. 876-2299/1919; Clifford Moore, representing OMMCS, 876-1398/6878, with alternate Zane Horner 876-7485/3540; Nell Oliver, representing TMDE Support Group, 876-3610, with alternate Tommy Lemmons 876-7446; Brenda Kyle, representing Chaparral/FAAR, MLRS, Stinger, 876-3103; Charles Stebbins, representing RASA, 876-7021, with alternate Bobbie Sue Keel 876-8501/7021; Glen O. McNeal Jr., representing SAMD, 895-4033; Judy Nickell, representing Civilian Personnel, 876-7222, with alternate Van Durr 876-9878/7584; Kay Wrenn, representing Information Management, 876-5171, with alternate Kenneth Tate 876-1027.

CHAIRMAN — Carl Chambers, a general engineer in Hellfire/GLD, is chairman of the Civilian Welfare Fund Council.

Prayers offered for American servicemen still missing

The sister of an American serviceman still missing in action in Southeast Asia urged that everyone be concerned with bringing those MIAs home during a service held here Friday.

Barbara White was the guest speaker at a "POW/MIA Recognition Day" service at the Post Chapel. Her brother, Air Force Capt. Samuel L. James from Chattanooga, has been missing in action in Southeast Asia since April 18, 1973. She told the audience she believes there are still living Americans "waiting to come home, and one of them may be my brother."

"These men need our concern and our involvement and our prayers," White said. "They desperately need it, and I assure you they are worthy of it."

About 50 people attended the service on a day set aside by Congress and the president to recognize the special debt owed to former prisoners of war and to remind Americans of the 2,434 persons still missing or unaccounted for in Southeast Asia. Brig. Gen. John Drosdeck, deputy commanding general for the Missile Command, told the attendees that "this particular day serves to remind us that there never has been an accounting of our brothers still missing in action." He said they must be assumed to be held captive. "We will determine their status," Drosdeck said.

A choir consisting of some soldiers from the School Brigade sang two hymns during the half-hour service. A pew was designated as the POW/MIA remembrance pew. It had a white-flower arrangement in the center and, on each end, a candle with white ribbon; a white on black POW/MIA flag hung above the pew. "These candles will be lit at every service that is conducted here at this chapel," said Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Don Allison.

"We gather today to recognize those prisoners of war and those missing in action," Allison said, during his invocation. "Hear our prayers for their release and information concerning their protection."

Korean War

Editor:

Your Sept. 3 issue carried several articles on the Vietnam War POWs: their diet, their secret communication codes, and their exercises, usually individual. In addition, there was an interview with Army Special Forces Master Sgt. Jon R. Cavaiani and a list of POW sightings in southeast Asia.

Your paper, like 99.999 percent of the media, overlooked the Korean War POWs and MIAs. There was ONE single statement in the lead in which stated that "The Tomb of the Unknown Soldier represents more than ...8,100 Korean War Servicemen whose remains have never been repatriated."

Since the Cease Fire of the Korean War on July 27, 1953, our government has done virtually nothing about the 8,177 MIAs or the 389 POWs that are STILL missing! If one writes his Congressman/woman asking about the status of these missing people, the usual response is to the effect that the North Korean Government refuses to discuss the matter. However, the ONLY way to get our representatives in Washington to do anything about these people is to keep writing and asking about the status of the missing from the Korean War.

We Korean War veterans have finally organized in an effort to do something about these missing people and trying to stir up Congress is one of our principal reasons for uniting.

I called about the articles and would like to see similar articles about the Korean War POWs. I served in Korea from July 4, 1952 to Nov. 15, 1953, in an Engineer Unit. When the repatriations occurred, I had the privilege of de-briefing some of the returning POWs, especially those that had been in Engineer units before being captured. None of those I interviewed, mentioned secret codes, or other POW activity such as was contained in your articles. Perhaps others disclosed this type of activity. I can remember only one description of a meal by a returned POW. They were given cracked grain (perhaps, corn, wheat, or barley), one handful to a man then they were given one-half hour to find wood for a fire, water to boil the grain, building the fire and try to cook the grain. About time the fire had gotten hot, the guards made the Americans put it out. Some of the POWs were so hungry that they ate the raw grain. As a result, they came down with severe stomach cramps and diarrhea.

I hope that your news service can furnish more details on the Korean POWs and MIAs.

News program

Editor:

Several weeks ago the television news program "1986" had a report on the FOG-M missile. The report accused the Army of wasting money on DIVAD while ignoring FOG-M. Indirectly, MICOM's Missile Laboratory was praised for hiding funds to develop FOG-M. I was concerned that the report had several gross inaccuracies and poor assumptions. Does the Redstone Rocket intend to support the television report, rebut it, or just ignore it like it has done so far?

Name withheld by request

Editor's Note: The program was shown nationally by NBC on Sept. 2. There were two basic premises: (1) That in the mid-70s the Army had a choice to develop the DIVAD (an air defense gun) or the FOG-M and chose the DIVAD, and (2) That the Army was not interested in FOG-M. Neither premise was correct. Development of FOG-M and DIVAD occurred at different times for different objectives. The Army has funded work accomplished to date on FOG-M (about $60 million total) and interest in the program has grown as MICOM has demonstrated the technology. FOG-M is now a leading candidate for the Non Line of Sight weapon for the Forward Area Air Defense System.

Adopt-a-School

Editor:

I would like to commend two of your Redstone Arsenal mothers, Mrs. Genie Lincoln and Mrs. Colette

Petty, for their much needed help in kicking off the new school year here at Butler. Their participation in the Adopt-a-School Program just demonstrates the type of support that Redstone Arsenal gives the local school community.

These two mothers have worked many long hours helping our guidance department in registering new students and in scheduling classes for these students. Again, through this public medium, I want to recognize these Redstone Arsenal mothers.

Annual hunting/fishing day this weekend

The second annual event to promote hunting and fishing will be held Saturday in the Outdoor Recreation area.

National Hunting & Fishing Day will feature a full day of demonstrations, displays, and children's activities. There will be a special archery show and a tribal dance by the Echota Cherokee Tribe.

"The purpose is to let the hunters and the fishermen have their day," said Shelby Williams, director of Outdoor Recreation. Activities are scheduled for 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. in the area of the outdoor recreation center, building 5129. The location is off Patton Road just north of the Martin Road overpass.

"It's open to the public," Williams said, adding that cars should enter through either Gate 10 on Patton or Gate 1 on Martin.

Displays will include various vehicles, boats, and work by taxidermists and woodcarvers. A live snake show is planned. Demonstrations are to include skeet, bird dogs rod and reel casting, black powder, and archery.

"There'll be a lot of different games and activities that the children can play," Williams said. These include a BB-gun shoot, horse riding, a gun safety class, golf cart rides, and horseshoes. A turkey shoot—cost is $2—will be available for everybody. And food and refreshments can be purchased at a "minimal" charge.

This is the second such event held by Outdoor Recreation. About 300 attended last year, and Williams would like to see more this time. Bill Moreland, assistant director, is chairman for the event. There is no admission charge—just small fees for some of the games, the turkey shoot, and the food.

"The whole idea of this is to promote wildlife conservation," Williams said. For more information, call 876-4868.

Reagan optimistic about Strategic Defense Initiative

BY EVELYN HARRIS
American Forces Information Service

"Our country's security today relies as much on the genius and creativity of scientists as it does on the courage and dedication of those in the military services," President Ronald Reagan told the audience at a recent White House briefing on the Strategic Defense Initiative.

"It also relies on those with the vision to recognize innovation when they see it and to shepherd change over the obstacles and through the maze."

Reagan said that he has to live with those who are skeptical of his economic policies, but added that when "skepticism stands in the way of the national security of our country, it can be perilous."

He quoted science fiction writer Arthur C. Clarke on the three stages of reaction to any new idea. First they say it's crazy. Then they say it's possible but not worth doing. Finally, they say, "I always said it was a good idea."

"Clearly, intelligent and well meaning individuals can be trapped by a mind-set...that prevents them from seeing beyond what has already been done. This mindset is perhaps our greatest obstacle in regard to SDI," said Reagan.

He characterized the prediction of those Americans who believe the Soviets will not negotiate with the United States until the Strategic Defense Initiative program is terminated as about as accurate as the prediction of his former boss, movie mogul Harry Warner, on the future of sound films: "Who the hell wants to hear an actor talk?"

Calling Soviet threats not to negotiate with the United States until it terminates its Strategic Defense Initiative program "nothing new," he noted that the Soviets have made the same threats before—when the United States took steps to modernize its strategic forces and to deploy Pershing IIs and cruise missiles, and when the United States said it would no longer base strategic decisions on the SALT treaties.

The United States and the Soviet Union are negotiating with each other. In fact, Reagan said, the Soviet Union's recent proposals have been more forthcoming than in the past. A summit—with arms reduction talks on the agenda—is slated for November.

But, said Reagan, "SDI is no bargaining chip, it is the path to a safer and more secure future. And the research is not, and never has been, negotiable."

The Strategic Defense Initiative is an alternative to total reliance on the threat of nuclear retaliation that was based on protecting innocent people rather than avenging them, he said.

He said that the Strategic Defense Initiative, by making offensive nuclear missiles less reliable, makes agreements to reduce their number more attainable—particularly now that the Soviet economy is a "basket case" due to its massive arms buildup.

The president said he was optimistic about the possibility of making the Strategic Defense Initiative program work, and congratulated Air Force Lt. Gen. James Abrahamson, head of the Strategic Defense Initiative Organization, for the progress that has already been made. He quoted the late astronaut Jack Swigert, who died of cancer, but whose "can-do spirit is still alive in America."

Swigert said, "I was privileged to be one of the few who viewed our earth from the moon, and the vision taught me that technology and commitment can overcome any challenge."

The president said that he did not want to deploy any Strategic Defense Initiative systems prematurely, because that could delay the main research effort. But, he said "When the time has come and the research is complete, yes we're going to deploy."

Soldier convicted for traffic death

A Redstone Arsenal soldier last week was convicted of manslaughter in the alcohol-related traffic death of a local nurse.

Sp4 Edward J. Klingel, 23, of HHC, had been charged with murder but was found guilty of the lesser charge last Wednesday by a jury of six men and six women. Christine J. Pruitt, 32, of Huntsville, was killed late on the night of April 26 when Klingel's car struck her vehicle head-on near the intersection of Whitesburg and Westbury drives.

According to news accounts, Klingel admitted on the witness stand that he consumed approximately three beers "and possibly could have had three shots of tequila" before the fatal crash. He said he did not remember the accident.

The soldier could face up to 10 years in prison and a $10,000 fine. He is to be sentenced Nov. 7 by Madison County Circuit Judge Lynwood Smith.

Group commander doesn't mind all the traveling

BY SKIP VAUGHN

As can be expected, Col. Stanley Thomas has done a lot of traveling since assuming command of Redstone Readiness Group.

After all, that group of mostly soldiers assists with the training of Army Reserve and Army National Guard units in a three-state area (Alabama, Mississippi, and Tennessee). Thomas became commander in late August. "I've been gone a lot more than I've been here, I do know that," he says.

"I expect to be on the road a lot both in meeting and working with the reserves and in support of my own people," says Thomas. "But at the same time I hope to put some time in here because I want to be able—for myself and the organization—to support the local community."

He commands one of the larger readiness groups in the country. Based at Huntsville's Research Park, it includes about 140 people who support a reserve and national guard audience of more than 60,000. Its mission, like any readiness group, is to "assist with the training to improve the war-fighting posture of our reserve and national guard forces," says Thomas.

Plans include a new assessment process in which the group's "assistors" would get with a unit's commander to jointly assess how well that unit performs war-time tasks. "This will allow the unit commander to better identify his strong and weak points and put his training time and resources where it will be most effective," Thomas says.

"The readiness group, our assistors, have and will continue on a contractual basis with the supported units to go out and give requested instruction," he adds. "What we have is a group of experienced officers, noncommissioned officers and civilians that are uniquely qualified in specific functional areas."

Thomas, 49, was raised on a dairy farm in Richmond, Ind. He joined the Indiana National Guard while he was a junior in high school, subsequently working his way up to the rank of first lieutenant. After finishing high school in 1955, he spent nine years as a civilian. "Then I decided I really liked the military way of life and I applied for and was accepted in active duty in 1964," he recalls. He entered active duty at Fort Jackson, S.C., as a first lieutenant serving as executive officer of a basic training company. Besides his own ties with the reserve component, his younger brother David is a sergeant first class in the Army Reserve 21st Support Command which is based in Indianapolis.

He served two tours in Vietnam. Serving as a company commander there was "both a demanding and yet very rewarding assignment," says Thomas, who was wounded in action. He was post commander at Fort Sheridan, Ill., before coming to Redstone.

THOMAS

"It was probably one of the most demanding assignments I've ever had," Thomas says, referring to command of Fort Sheridan. "When the local civilians there asked me what I did in that job, I'd tell them I was the mayor, city manager and the judge all rolled into one."

After two years and 10 months, he came to Redstone Readiness Group, a subordinate element of the 2nd Army based at Fort Gillem, Ga. He and his wife Janie have a son Brian, 15, and daughter Darcy, 12. In his spare time, he enjoys reading military history and science fiction, fishing, and fixing "things that are broken."

Thomas doesn't mind all the traveling that goes with being a soldier. In fact, he says he enjoys it. "I'd be in the wrong occupation if I didn't."

Future Space Shuttle pilot encourages youth education

BY SKIP VAUGHN

An Hispanic-American astronaut stressed the importance of educating youth during his speech here last Wednesday for National Hispanic-American Heritage Week.

Despite increased awareness of culture and a bilingual approach in schools, said Air Force Maj. Sidney Gutierrez, "we have still failed to achieve education for our youth." Studies have shown that about 50 percent of Hispanic youths will drop out of high school, he added.

"I want to emphasize to you the impact you can have on the youth and particularly Hispanic youth," Gutierrez said. He suggested three things: interesting youth in getting an education, encouraging them, and assisting them.

The native of Albuquerque, N.M., who grew up on a small farm, told the luncheon audience that he studied hard and achieved his goal of becoming an astronaut. Gutierrez—who is married and has two children—had some advice for those with youngsters at home. "Don't tell them it will be impossible for them to attain a particular goal," he said.

"If we make an investment in our youth," Gutierrez said, "then we'll have a heritage to pass on to our future generations."

Gutierrez, 35, addressed about 300 people at the annual Hispanic week luncheon held at the NCO Club. He showed slides and discussed the training that astronauts undergo. A 1973 Air Force Academy graduate, Gutierrez was selected as an astronaut candidate by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration in May 1984. In June 1985, he completed a one-year training and evaluation program, qualifying him for assignment as a pilot on future space shuttle crews.

"What all this training is designed to do is make you proficient when that final day comes and it's time to blast off and go into orbit," he said near the end of his slide presentation. Space program benefits he listed included learning about weather and geography, and performing experiments that cannot be done on earth.

"It's important for us Americans to continue to pursue this so that we ensure we're the leaders of tomorrow's technology and that we have a future for our children," said Gutierrez, based at the Johnson Space Center in Houston.

One of two Hispanic-American astronauts, he is participating in a review of the shuttle main engine. He expects to be assigned as a pilot on a future space shuttle mission "soon after we begin flying again," he said later in a brief interview. Gutierrez hopes to eventually fly as the commander on a shuttle mission. He predicts that the flights will probably resume in 1989 or '90.

Patriot Project Office sponsored this year's luncheon. After the event, Gutierrez signed autographs and posed for pictures with members of the observance planning committee and seven local youngsters who had attended Space Camp.

Commissary uses new scanner checkout system

Redstone's commissary last week began using scanners to ring up items at the checkout lane.

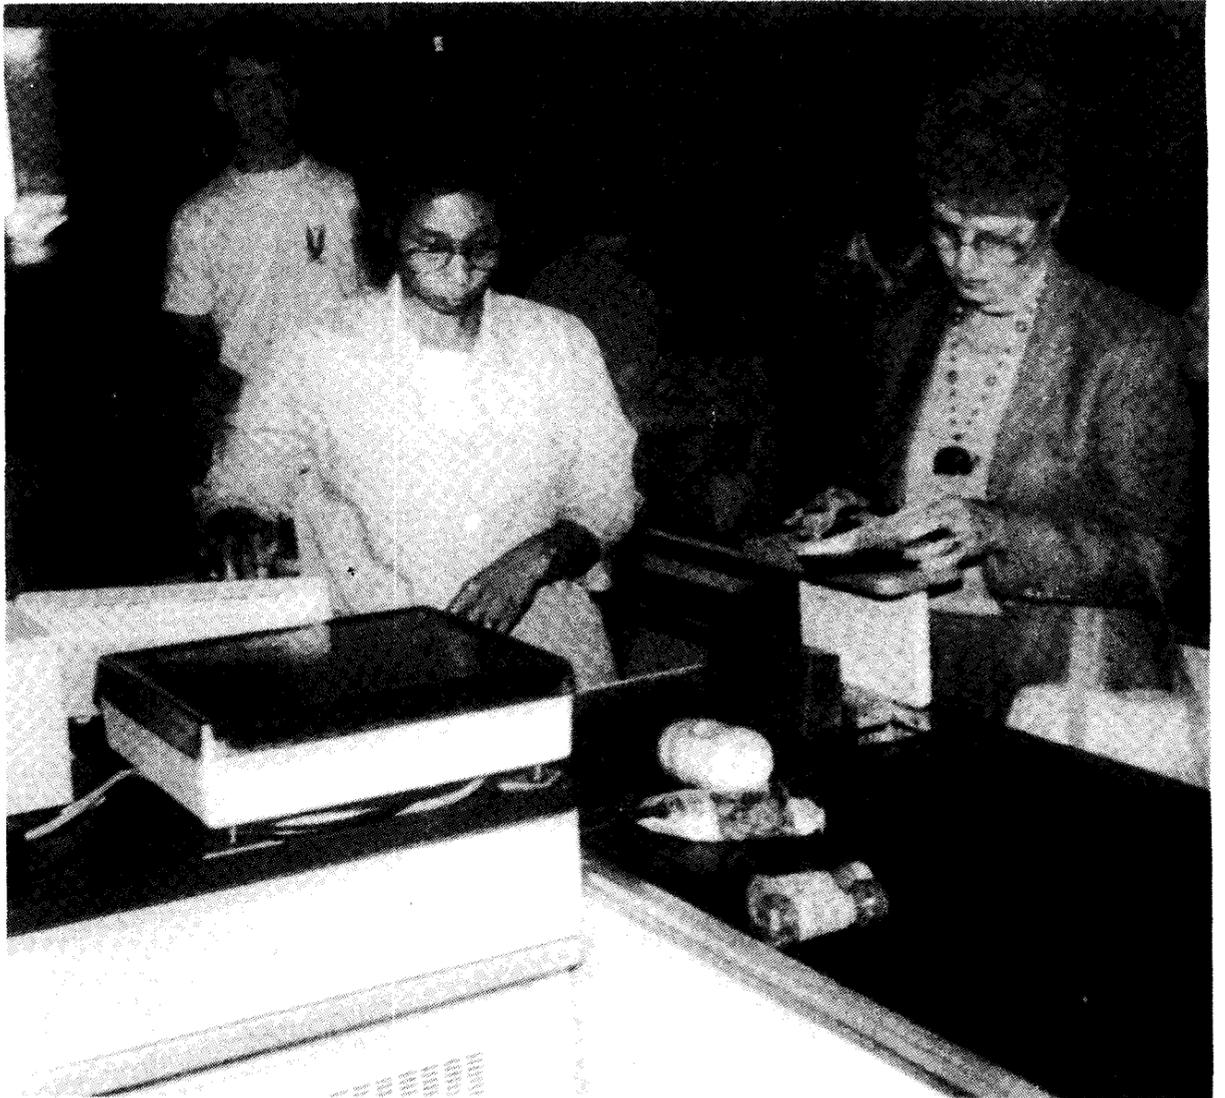

Used in many stores nationwide, this is a system in which an item is moved across a bar of light that will indicate the price based on the bar code, a set of numbers on the merchandise. The bar code tells a cash register which item it is, the manufacturer and the price. The register then prints out the item and the price charged on the receipt.

"The accuracy is going to be (helped) 100-fold," said Lana Lucas, the commissary's supervisor of sales store checkers. "There's not going to be any discrepancies anymore. The computer will have everything in it; we'll have a readout, a description. It'll eliminate human error, and it's progress."

Commissary Officer Bill Penney points out that the new system will enable the store "to accurately keep track of our inventory and be able to reorder more accurately based on actual sales." He also said customers have to expect an adjustment period because of the newness of the scanning system. "Customers have to be patient and they are, most of them are," Penney said.

With the scanners, the number of checkout lanes will eventually be increased to 15 from the current 13. There are scanners for 15 checkout lanes and the commissary is working on adding enough people to run them, according to Lucas.

Meanwhile at the other end of the store, the deli is planning to celebrate "Octoberfest," Oct. 1-18. "For this occasion," said Deli Manager Elizabeth Bates, "we will carry our famous fresh bratwurst and a new Bavarian bratwurst. We will have our knackwurst, bratwurst, smoked bratwurst, fresh bratwurst and Bavarian bratwurst on special... We are very excited to inform you that we will start making sandwiches." For special orders, call the commissary deli at 876-6619.

Classic Oklahoma-Miami matchup gets rave reviews

BY SKIP VAUGHN

The two top-ranked teams in the nation do battle this weekend at Miami's Orange Bowl.

It's probably too early to talk about deciding the national championship but the Oklahoma-Miami game is THE game so far this season. Last year Miami beat the Sooners 27-14 at Norman, Okla.

This year both teams have generally been flawless. The Sooners slaughtered UCLA 38-3 and massacred Minnesota 63-0; the Hurricanes hammered South Carolina 34-14, outfought Florida 23-15 and tumbled Texas Tech 61-11.

The game has it all. Oklahoma's stout defense versus Miami's aerial attack. Miami quarterback Vinny Testaverde against Sooner signal-caller Jamelle Holieway. Oklahoma's free-spirited linebacker Brian "the Boz" Bosworth versus the Hurricanes' offensive line. Take your pick, but the team with top billing here is...Oklahoma.

Last week's picks delivered a 28-10-2 record, bringing the overall marks to 67-29-4 for 70 percent. Here are Skip's Picks for this weekend in major college football:

- Oklahoma at Miami (Fla.)— Okla. by 3.
- Colorado State at Air Force— Air Force by 10.
- Arizona at Colorado— Arizona by 14.
- Washington State at Arizona State— ASU by 30.

Democracies can't easily execute 'grand strategy'

BY HAL HASKINS

American Forces Information Service

Secretary of Defense Caspar W. Weinberger told attendees at the National Strategy Forum recently that democratic societies cannot create and execute grand strategy in the same way totalitarian nations do. Totalitarian regimes are capable of designing and carrying out long-term ideological strategies because "they do not have to deal with the rough and tumble of public opinion."

Failure to take this into account has given rise to a common view that America does not even have a strategy, Weinberger said.

"We must, of course, be clear as to what we mean by strategy. As the employment of means to achieve specific ends, strategy is a concept that attempts to bring together a nation's goals and values with its capabilities, resources and political will.

"As a democracy, our ends and goals are clear. But our employment of means is obviously limited by the give and take of free politics."

Weinberger defined that nation's goals as "deterrence of war, containment of Soviet aggression and their totalitarian system, defense of freedom where it exists and the promotion of conditions in the world so that liberty can prosper."

But we have not always executed our strategy in a consistent fashion, he acknowledged and, "we have not always developed the means to fulfill our ends. But again, we are a democratic nation: public opinion shifts; administrations come and go. Our basic goal, however, remains constant. Its execution shifts with international circumstances, with the dynamics of public opinion, and with the level of funding provided."

We must, therefore, fulfill our commitments in ways best suited to particular circumstances, Weinberger said.

"Our conventional forces serve this purpose by being flexible and mobile. Whether in forward deployments in Europe or Asia, our conventional Forces stand behind our strategic commitment and formal alliances. Further, our maritime strategy, which has been given detailed articulation in this administration, seeks to use its flexibility and mobility to sustain our worldwide commitments."

"The problem is not a lack of strategy," he continued. "It is the danger and complexity of the world we live in, and the unwillingness of democratic nations to recognize the threat."

The national strategy of our government has always attempted to take into account significant changes in global dynamics, he pointed out. "In recent times, we have had to consider the growing influence of the Third World, the advent of parity between the United States and Soviet Union, and the limited military usefulness of nuclear weapons.

"The first task of American strategy, as it looks to the future of conflict, is to ensure that deterrence of nuclear war remains credible. We recognize that technology can rapidly outpace our ability to control it, that almost overnight technology can change credible deterrence into incredible posturing."

These are the reasons President Reagan has called upon the scientific community to see if it is possible to defend our selves against the Soviet missile threat, Weinberger said.

Calling strategic defense research no mere add-on to American strategy, he noted that democratic nations will be uneasy with a policy that "deters only by threatening destructive retaliation."

"Strategies are not constructed in isolation," he said. They are conceived to meet particular threats from specific adversaries. In this sense, our strategy must always be comparative. Its goal must be to counter and to confound the strategic objectives of the enemy, since we have no aggressive or territorial or other ambitions. If strategic defense proves feasible, and I believe it will, it will counter the Soviets' most potent weapon and confound the Kremlin's hope to neutralize our deterrent force."

In conclusion, Weinberger said, "If we all do our part, if we maintain our resolve to stay strong, if we value our freedom and our peace, and if we are willing to make sacrifices for those noble goals — then the future of conflict is that there will be no conflict."

Less PCS travel time authorized

Service members driving privately owned vehicles to their new duty stations now have less travel time to get there.

A joint travel regulation change that took effect Aug. 1 limited the time allowed to military people making permanent change of station moves. It increases required travel distances from 300 to 350 miles per day.

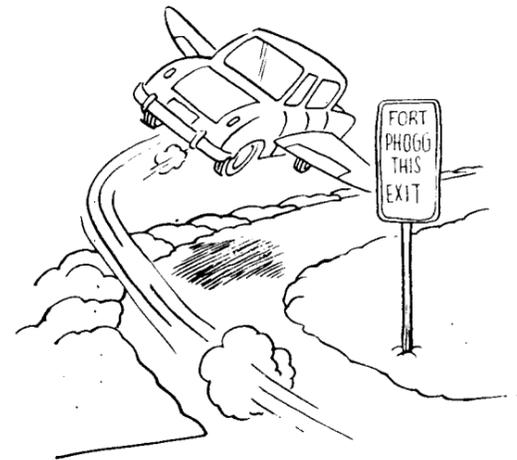

The new regulations lower to eight and one-half days (from 10) the travel time for a cross-country PCS move of 3,000 miles.

According to Jim Hart of the DoD Per Diem, Travel and Transportation Allowance Committee, the change revises a 26-year-old rule for computing PCS travel time in privately owned vehicles.

"That computation was determined in (President Harry) Truman's day, before the days of U.S. interstate highways," Hart said.

The change is expected to save the Defense Department $46 million a year.

A similar change in the joint travel regulations for federal civilians is being negotiated with the federal workers' unions and is expected to follow soon, Hart said.

GETTING OUT? YOUR ARMY BENEFITS CAN BE MORE THAN MEMORIES.

It's probably hard to say what you'll miss most about the Army if you've decided to return to civilian life. For some, it's the camaraderie. Others miss the travel and excitement. Still more miss those money-saving Army benefits.

Joining the Army Reserve can help you retain some of those great benefits. Like your PX and commissary privileges. Space-available air travel. And low-cost life insurance.

You'll earn a good extra income, too. Over $2,000 a year, in some cases.

For more information, call Staff Sgt. Larry Duncan, 539-7431. You'll find out that the Army Reserve really is a veterans benefit.

Spouses of military members should know their rights

BY TOM JOYCE

American Forces Information Service

The identification card is one of the most important documents service men and women and their family members use. Without it, family members can't get medical treatment, shop in the commissary or exchange, or use morale, welfare and recreation services.

Unfortunately, some military members believe they can take away their spouse's identification cards.

A military member does not have the right to do that, according to Army Col. Fred K. Green, director of legislation and legal policy for the assistant secretary of defense for force management and personnel. He said, "Generally, all benefits that flow to the spouse or dependent of military members have their origins in statutes or in regulations. They are derived from the status of the military member. The sponsor does not determine eligibility for the identification card and has no right to control it."

While the determination of who gets an identification card is derived from the status of the military member and the legal relationship of the spouse, the actual identification card is issued to the holder through the military department. "Withholding an identification card is a command decision alone," said Green.

The misunderstanding concerning "ownership" of an identification card often results, said Green, because a sponsor normally accompanies his spouse to apply for the card. "The sponsor makes application, supplies the marriage certificate and signs the paperwork," said Green. But it is possible for a spouse to obtain an identification card without the sponsor's signature, he continued, "so long as the spouse can show they are still legally married."

Spouse rights can also come into question overseas. There is a misconception that military sponsors can force family members to return to the United States by invoking regulations that allow military family members to return home without their sponsors.

Green said involuntary return of a spouse is rare and that in most cases where family member misconduct has become a burden to the command, the sponsor will be returned to the states with his family. There are provisions under which a spouse can have command sponsorship revoked, but those instances are rare. "About all the military sponsor can do is obtain travel orders and tickets," said Green. "But it is the spouses decision alone to use them."

Spouses can voluntarily elect to return from overseas areas if they are having severe financial or marital difficulties. However, when a service member resorts to withholding identification cards, it's an indication of serious marital discord that needs to be settled outside the military personnel system. In that case, Green recommended obtaining counsel from the local legal assistance officer.

"Spouses of military personnel have certain rights regarding their entitlements," said Green. "But when the control of those entitlements comes into question, we feel it is best to work to resolve the underlying marital difficulties before the situation reaches a point where it will have adverse effects on a military member's career."

Military radiogram: the next best thing to being there

BY HAL HASKINS

American Forces Information Service

The priority call on the evening of July 14, 1986, from the USS Portland (LSD-37) was heard...but faintly. And repeated attempts to make direct contact were so poor.

A call for relay help was made, and an operator aboard the USS Coronado (AGF 11) immediately stepped in to help.

The result: a Portland crew member was relieved to learn that his mother, who had suffered a stroke, was showing improvement.

This successful linkup between ship and home is an example of MARS at work, the operator a part of the MARS network. MARS stands for Military Affiliate Radio System—and thousands of service members stationed in the United States and overseas use it to talk and send messages to the folks back home.

Hundreds of military-sponsored short wave radio stations around the world and thousands of stateside "affiliates" made up the MARS system. The amateur radio operators volunteer their time and equipment.

While each military service operates its own MARS, members of any service and their families are free to use it wherever it's available.

The primary mission of MARS is to provide DoD-sponsored communications to military or civilian disaster officials during periods of emergency. But it also transmits personal welfare messages by radiotelephone or radiogram for service people everywhere, including DoD civilians stationed overseas.

In a typical MARS radiotelephone hookup, the message is originated by a MARS Military station and picked up by one of the affiliate stations nearest the place being called. The call is then patched by telephone to the home of the person being called.

"There is no charge for the radio portion of the linkup, but if the affiliate has to place a long-distance call to make the final connection, the person receiving the call will have to pay for it at "collect" rates. The charge is only for the last stage of the link.

Radiograms are brief personal messages (approximately 25 words) relayed through the MARS network and forwarded by telephone or mail to the intended recipient.

MARS outlets are located at most major military installations in the United States and overseas and aboard many Navy ships. The system works best when the call or message is originated by the MARS military station rather than by the affiliate or "back home" end of the network.

The people who operate MARS, both military and civilian, have an outstanding record of "getting through" in times of personal emergencies and natural disasters, but their efforts are always subject to weather, electronic and radio traffic conditions.

To find out more about MARS, contact your base, installation or shipboard communications officer or MARS representative. If there's no outlet where you're assigned, it may be possible to patch into one by telephone.

Firearms: Lock'em Up

Five-year-old Johnny and his 7-year-old brother are playing detective. Johnny squeezes the trigger on his .38 caliber pistol. The result? Johnny shoots his finger off. He was "playing" with his parents' handgun, the one they normally lock up. This time, they forgot.

More than half of the 45 million households in the United States keep firearms, many of them handguns, for protection against intruders. Unfortunately, unless you're careful, children can get to the weapons — with tragic results.

During 1984, 30 children age four and under and 250 children from 5 to 14 years old were killed in firearms accidents.

Here are some tips for firearms safety in the home, recommended by Lt. Col. Ed Chandler, deputy director for safety policy, Office of the Secretary of Defense:

- Treat every firearm as though it were loaded.
- Always keep your firearms locked up.
- Unload your firearm before locking it up.
- Keep ammunition separate from your weapon.
- Don't allow anyone to use a firearm without proper training.
- For extra safety, buy a trigger lock.

Exercise planned for more than 1,000 retired soldiers

WASHINGTON — More than 1,000 retired soldiers have been asked to consider participating in the Army's third annual retiree re-call exercise.

Exercise Certain Sage '87, scheduled throughout October and November, aims to evaluate the Army's capability for recalling retired officers and enlisted personnel, for evaluating their physical condition and for measuring proficiency in their military occupational specialties, said Michael E. Campiglia from the Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Personnel at the Pentagon.

This information helps the Army determine what its weaknesses might be if it faced mobilization. Since more than 200,000 retired soldiers could be recalled during mobilization, the exercise will help the Army plan ahead and perhaps eliminate some possible problems.

The exercise involves 18 installations and activities within the continental United States. About 350 regular and reserve volunteers will attend three-day and 12-day exercises. Fort Jackson, S.C., will be the only installation to sponsor the 12-day program, Campiglia said.

Participants will be processed into the Army, receive an orientation and a complete physical then receive an assignment to a duty position representative of the one they would work at during a mobilization, Campiglia said. They then will work at the duty station for the remainder of their three or 12 days before being released from active duty and returned to their retired status, Campiglia said.

The 12-day recall, which will resemble the three-day programs, is expected to more accurately reveal how sharp the soldiers' job skills remain. This will indicate how much training might be needed in the event of mobilization, Campiglia said.

Retirees will receive full active-duty pay and allowances during their participation in the exercise in lieu of their retirement pay.

The Army plans to extend Exercise Certain Sage to Europe next summer. Officials hope that at least 20 retirees living in U.S. Army Europe will volunteer to participate. (Arnews)

Pentagon corridor dedicated for Constitution bicentennial

WASHINGTON— The Pentagon's first official observance of the Bicentennial of the United States Constitution was marked by the dedication of the Soldiers-Signers of the Constitution Corridor Sept. 17. The corridor honors the 23 Revolutionary War veterans who signed the Constitution.

Deputy Secretary of Defense William H. Taft IV was the guest speaker at ceremonies hosted by Secretary of the Army John O. Marsh Jr., chairman of the Defense Department's Bicentennial Executive Committee. Guests included President Pro Tem Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., and other members of the President's Commission for the Bicentennial of the U.S. Constitution.

"The soldier-signers knew the central government under the Articles of Confederation did not provide the leadership required for the nation," said Taft.

Under the Articles of Confederation little authority was given to the central government. National policies were difficult or impossible to implement as state governments, following their parochial interests, would not cooperate with the central government.

The authors of the Constitution sought to create a document where a balance of power would exist between the states and the federal government as well as among the legislative, judicial and executive branches of the federal government.

"Living through both war and peace the soldier-signers were aware such balances must be met and so supported the new Constitution," said Taft.

The corridor includes flags of the 13 original states and paintings of important events from the signing of the Declaration of Independence in 1776 to the signing of the Constitution in 1787. Portraits of the soldier-signers are also on display including one of George Washington, delegate from Virginia and President of the Constitutional Convention, which was held in Philadelphia in 1787.

The corridor recognizes all signers for their contribution in "forming a government founded on the principle that the Army, subordinated to Congress, should remain a servant of the Republic, the concept that is still the underpinning of the American soldier."

To see this corridor as well as other historic corridors, tours of the Pentagon are conducted Monday through Friday during regular duty hours. (Arnews)

Urinalysis test for drugs to become more sensitive

WASHINGTON — Soldiers using illegal drugs face a higher risk of being caught when the Army lowers the threshold level used to confirm a positive urinalysis.

Beginning Oct. 1, the drug urinalysis testing levels at which a specimen is reported as positive for marijuana or cocaine is expected to lead to more positive identifications, said Lt. Col. Douglas L. Allen, chief of the Alcohol and Drug Policy Branch at the Pentagon. As a result of the more sensitive testing, specimens could test positive even though they might show less drug content in the system than under the current standards.

"Some soldiers who in the past have used one of these illegal drugs but had nanogram (one billionth of a gram) levels below the threshold for reporting as positive now will be detected," Allen said. "There is now no safe limit for doing drugs. Casual or sporadic drug users who have escaped detection in the past will now be identified."

The change comes with the success of gas chromatography/mass spectrometry (GC/MS) tests introduced last year for confirming presence of drugs in urine samples, Allen said. The state-of-the-art tests provide the most specific and sensitive analytical techniques available. The new tests make it possible for the Defense Department's Forensic Drug Testing Laboratories to positively identify substances at extremely low concentrations — in theory, down to one nanogram, he explained.

When gas chromatography/mass spectrometry tests were first introduced, the threshold for a positive urinalysis for marijuana dropped from 75 to 20 nanograms. Testing for cocaine was introduced at this time and the threshold was set at 300 nanograms.

Under these new, more sensitive testing standards, those levels will drop even further to 15 and 150 nanograms, respectively, Allen said.

Based on current figures, drug and alcohol officials predict that positive urinalyses for marijuana could increase from about 40,000 to 46,000 positive cases per year and from 4,000 to 6,000 cases for cocaine. Although the detection rate might be higher immediately after the new testing is begun, Allen said he expects the downward trend for drug use among soldiers to continue. Positive urinalysis results for marijuana use in 1985, for example, were about 5 percent lower than the 1983 figures.

The initial screening, which precedes GC/MS testing, uses radio-immuno-assay to identify drug use. The threshold for this test will continue to be set to avoid the possibility of false positive results due to passive inhalation, Allen said. (Arnews)

Army Drill Sergeant of the Year awards presented

WASHINGTON — SFCs Dae K. Kim and Arnold R. Groehler were presented Army Drill Sergeant of the Year awards by Army Chief of Staff Gen. John A. Wickham Jr. at a Pentagon ceremony Sept. 15.

Kim, Company A, 1st Battalion, 3rd Brigade, Fort Dix, N.J., was presented the Stephen Ailes Award which recognizes the best drill sergeant on active duty. The Ralph E. Haines Jr. Award, which recognizes the top reservist drill sergeant, was presented to Groehler, Battery D, 3rd Battalion, 3rd Brigade, 84th U.S. Army Reserve Division (Training), Milwaukee.

While recognizing the most outstanding of the Army's 9,000 drill sergeants, Wickham took this occasion to say that exemplary work done by all drill sergeants has reduced by 10,000 the unnecessary loss of recruits during initial training over the past year.

Also offering congratulations to Kim and Groehler at this year's presentation was Secretary of the Army John O. Marsh Jr. (Arnews)

Financial network being developed for soldiers

FORT BENJAMIN HARRISON, IND. — To meet soldiers' increasing demands for financial services such as more check-cashing facilities, the Army is monitoring the development of the Armed Forces Financial Network (AFFN).

"AFFN is a shared, nationwide automated teller machine (ATM) network designed specifically to meet the financial needs of the U.S. Armed Forces," said Cindy Young, a banking staff officer at the U.S. Army Finance and Accounting Center at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind.

Through the Armed Forces Financial Network of automated teller machines, the Association of Military Banks of America (AMBA) and the Defense Credit Union Council (DCUC), association member institutions are linking their ATMs via a computer switch. As a result, military bank customers and DCUC members will be able to use any ATM in the network to withdraw cash, verify account balances, and transfer funds between accounts, Young said. All a soldier has to do is locate an ATM bearing the AFFN logo and insert the AFFN ATM card. The system then works like all other ATM networks, she said.

"The network is ideal for soldiers on TDY since it eliminates the problems of getting a non-local check cashed. Also, it will not be necessary for soldiers to change banks and open new checking accounts each time they PCS," Young said. "The eventual goal is to have this network become operational overseas," she added.

Approximately 85 percent of the soldiers stationed in the continental U.S. will have access to this network once all the banks and credit unions which have signed contracts or letters of intent to join the network become "live." The Army has one bank and six credit unions already operating on the system. Machines at banks and credit unions on the following installations are in operation: Arlington Hall Station, Va.; the Pentagon; Forts Belvoir, Va.; Gillem, Ga.; Leavenworth, Kan.; Rucker, Ala., and Stewart, Ga.

The following Army installations have banks and/or credit unions which have signed contracts or letters of intent to join the AFFN network: Rock Island Arsenal, Ill.; Schofield Barracks, Hawaii; Sunflower Army Ammunition Plant, St. Louis, Mo.; West Point, N.Y.; White Sands Missile Range, N.M.; Yuma Proving Grounds, Az.; and Forts Benning, Ga.; Bliss, Texas; Bragg, N.C.; Campbell, Ky.; Carson, Colo.; Drum, N.Y.; Eustis, Va.; Gordon, Ga.; Harrison, Ind.; Hood, Texas; Huachuca, Az.; Irwin, Calif.; Jackson, S.C.; Knox, Ky.; Leonard Wood, Mo.; Lewis, Wash.; McPherson, Ga.; Meade, Md.; Monmouth, N.J.; Monroe, Va.; Myer, Va.; Ord, Calif.; Richardson, Alaska; Riley, Kan.; Sam Houston, Texas; Shafter, Hawaii; and Sill, Okla. 1987 marks Constitution bicentennial of

BY DONNA BOLINGER
American Forces Press Service

In April 1789, the senior military leader of the American Revolution—George Washington—became the first president of the newly formed United States.

The rise of a war hero to power is common throughout world history. Consider Alexander the Great of Macedonia, Hannibal of Carthage and Julius Caesar, who became a dictator after his troops marched on Rome.

Today, military coup d'etats are not unknown. More than a third of the members of the United Nations are ruled by governments that came to power through military force.

This was not the case with the newly independent United States, and never has been in its history. One of George Washington's first acts after the war was to help draft a constitution that provided for government control of the military not vice versa.

Only after he helped create what is now the longest-surviving constitution in world history did Washington accept his appointment to the presidency.

As Americans prepare to observe the 200th anniversary of the U.S. Constitution, philosophers and political scientists alike still marvel at the insight demonstrated by its drafters.

Washington and 22 other signers of the Constitution were veterans of the Revolutionary War. Their experience made them particularly conscious of the need for a strong central government that would prevail against its enemies, yet safeguard the liberties and the form of government for which they fought.

Their solution is embodied in the Constitution. The president of the United States is commander in chief of the nation's military forces. But it is Congress that has the power to raise and support those forces and to declare war.

The Constitution recognized the military, not as a government in itself, but as a tool of the government—more specifically a tool of the people.

Army imposes flight restrictions on certain helicopters

WASHINGTON — The Army recently implemented temporary operational flying restrictions for its OH-6A and OH-58A helicopters in response to engine failures in six of the helicopters.

Between October 1978 and June 1986 the helical cluster gears in one of the Army's 360 OH-6As and five of its 1,340 OH-58As have broken during flight, causing engine failure and forcing pilots to make emergency landings, said a spokesman for the U.S. Army Aviation Systems Command in St. Louis, Mo. The most recent incident involved a Tennessee National Guard OH-6A. No fatalities have resulted from the incidents, but there has been one injury, the spokesman said.

The temporary restrictions that have been imposed will afford maximum aircrew safety in the event of additional failures before the gears can be replaced, the spokesman said. Restrictions include a requirement that pilots of OH-6As and OH-58As maintain a minimum flight altitude of 400 feet above ground level except during take off, landing, required instructional periods, and tactical unit training. The pilot needs about 400 feet to make a controlled descent, he explained. Also, passengers are prohibited from riding in back seats and fire guards are now required to stand forward of the engine compartment during starts. Replacement of cluster gears in all of the OH-6A and OH-58A helicopters should be completed by September 1987, the spokesman added.

"We feel that fatigue is causing the T63-A-700 engine's helical cluster gear to fail, so we're replacing each gear with a new but identical gear with the idea that each gear must be replaced after a certain number of flight hours," the spokesman said. "We are testing old and new gears to establish a standard number of operating hours for the gear."

The Aviation Systems Command is also studying the possibility of later replacing the helical cluster gear with a different type of gear or replacing the T63-A-700 engine with another type of engine.

The OH-6As and OH-58As, which have flown approximately 2.5 million hours since 1978, are the only Army helicopters that use the T63-A-700 engine. They are typically used for target acquisition, reconnaissance, and courier missions. These missions will not be affected by the flight restrictions, said the spokesman. (Arnews)

Command and general staff college classes presented by the 3392nd U.S. Army Reserve Forces School will begin the week of Oct. 6 in the Anniston-Gadsden area, Huntsville, Decatur and the Shoals area. Active Army, Reserve and National Guard officers are eligible for the program which parallels the resident Command and General Staff Officer Course at Fort Leavenworth, Kan. Prospective students must be a captain or above, have completed an officer advanced course, and have completed a minimum of seven years of commissioned service (eight years for active officers) at the time of enrollment. Waivers of time of commissioned service may be granted by the commandant, USACGSC. Civilians, GS-11 or above, whose duties require knowledge of subject matter contained in the curriculum are also eligible. Enrollment in the nonresident program does not preclude selection for attendance at the resident course. To enroll or get more information call Lt. Col. Steve Demora 876-9001 or the 3392nd USARF School 536-5631.
