Family child care program opens to civilians

BY RUTH MECHAM

Children of Redstone civilian workers are now eligible for in-quarters care under the Family Child Care Program.

The program here, in which young military family members are cared for in the quarters of certified providers, has opened to children of Department of Defense civilians.

"With more women in the workforce there is a very strong need for good child care services," said Shirley Sterbenk, chief of Child Development Services. "The in-quarters child care program has provided care for military dependents for quite a while. As other branches on the arsenal have opened their services to include civilians it was decided that since our program has grown we could also open the in-quarters child care program to civilians, keeping in mind the military would still have priority consideration."

Thirty-two homes are providing care on post under the program. "We are capable of taking care of a total of 192 children at any given time," Sterbenk said.

To become certified, which is a requirement, those interested must complete an application and a physical. They are also required to attend an eight-hour orientation class which includes such things as health and safety tips, business practices, first aid and cardiopulmonary resuscitation. They must maintain their certification training with ongoing refresher courses during the year. "The in-quarters program is just as important as the Child Development Center and they do provide the same developmental care as the child development center," Sterbenk said.

Unannounced inspections are done on a routine basis by health, fire and safety officials to make certain conditions for the children are the best they can be. "All in-quarters child care givers are required to have posted fire escapes, they are required to have monthly fire drills— all in an effort of protecting the children. The standards for having a program like this are quite extensive," Sterbenk said.

"Our providers are not baby-sitters, they are self employed in the Child Development field. Those days of baby-sitters are gone. There is a contract which has to be signed prior to the providers starting their service which states all the requirements for both the child care provider and the parents. We teach good business practices and the best part about the contracts is each side knows what they have agreed upon and it eliminates problems," she said.

The providers maintain a developmental program of activities— games, arts and crafts, music —which are geared to stimulate the growth of the child. "When the child development center has field trips or outings, the in-quarters care giver is notified and those children are invited also. We have had several of the care givers get together and plan field trips or outings also," Sterbenk said.

Advantages she believes the in-quarters child care program has over the child development center are: 24-hour-a-day service, seven days a week; limit of six children in one home; and more of a home environment.

The in-quarters care providers are eligible to participate in a food program. "The United States Department of Agriculture offers a food program to both the services in which children are fed nutritious meals and snacks at no added cost to the parents," Sterbenk said.

"I love the program, I have been a care provider for about 11 months on the arsenal," said Queen Ester Jackson, an in-quarters care provider. "I have worked in child development centers for five years. One center, in the private sector, I worked in I was in charge of 17 children and I never had the opportunity to really get to know the kids. I feel like I can get to know the kids in my own home and spend more quality time with them. The kids seem to enjoy the home environment and they all seem like my own kids. My home is their second home, my own family has taken to the kids and gotten involved in the program."

Civilian workers interested in the program can contact Yvonne McDonald, director of the Family Child Care Program, at 876-2752.

WATS line may be next best thing to being there

BY SKIP VAUGHN

The WATS telephone system is becoming the Army's way to reach out and touch someone.

WATS, the Wide Area Telecommunications System, costs less and reaches more places than its predecessor, according to officials here. The Federal Telecommunications System has been discontinued Army-wide.

Workers at Redstone can dial 4 and a seven-digit number to reach points in Alabama. They can dial 7 plus the area code and number for calls to the rest of the continental U.S. plus Hawaii, Puerto Rico and most of the Virgin Islands.

"We don't have a band installed that will reach Alaska," added Sharon Miller, a communications specialist at Army Information Systems Command-Redstone. She initiated the action to have the WATS lines installed. The intrastate lines were installed July 16 and the continental U.S. lines opened Sept. 1.

"We have 20 of the intrastate and 37 of the interstate," Miller said. The Strategic Defense Command at Research Park also has WATS lines.

A contract has not yet been awarded for the telephone service. Under an interim arrangement, American Telephone & Telegraph Co. provides the interstate lines while South Central Bell provides the lines for Alabama calls.

Cost saving

The Army expects to save as much as half of the amount that was paid for the Federal Telecommunications System. "The WATS line is going to cost us like 20 to 22 cents a minute as opposed to 44 cents per minute that we paid for FTS," Miller said.

Cost is the major benefit but WATS also "will get you more places than FTS would," according to Bill Dortch, the communications manager at Redstone. "WATS will get you there."

With this system, individuals can dial the number themselves without operator assistance. Before, with FTS, the operator could become involved depending on the call.

Another system, direct distance dial, remains in effect here. "We would prefer that all customers use our Autovon first," Miller said.

"The next choice would be our WATS system, and the direct dial would be the third choice."

It won't be long before a computer will be selecting the calling method. A newly-renovated telephone central office is to open at Redstone in March 1988. The automated facility, located at the site of the present telephone office on Martin Road, will provide about 40 programmable customer-activated features (such as call hold, re-dial, call waiting, and so on). A computer will automatically select the most economical way to place a given call— Autovon, WATS or direct dial.

"We have not had any complaints on the WATS line so far," Miller said.

New management

Editor:

We recently had a change in management in Documentation Reference and Reproduction Section, Army Information Systems Command- Redstone. I don't know whether the past manager found a greener pasture, or whether he was shafted. In my opinion, he was shafted. If so, he knows how it feels to be on the receiving end as well as on the giving end.

I thought after the change things would surely get better, but it didn't take me long to change my mind.

Our new management walked up and down the aisle a few days and said my bosses aren't paid enough, they need to be upgraded.

I like the word boss better than supervisor because a boss here is someone that has never worked at what you are trying to do. A supervisor would be someone that had worked at the job you are doing and would have some knowledge of the many problems you encounter numerous times a day.

Hey, I need something to justify this high grade that I have so I will propose to upgrade this GS-10 even though it was only a GS-6 a few years ago and this GS-9 that started out as a GS-7 only because it was needed to justify the GS-6 being upgraded to a GS-8, but it is now a GS-9 even though most of the GS-9 duties are what I would call a PASS Control Clerk. Now I need something to justify this GS-9 (or maybe I will make it a GS-10), so I will propose a GS-7. I need something to justify this GS-9 or 10 because it is three grades higher than the workers she has been boss over. Maybe she hasn't had a high enough grade under her to justify her grade, so I will create another PASS Control Clerk position and give it a GS-7 grade...

Now I have two different groups of workers doing similar work. I don't know much about what they do, but I have this proposed GS-11 that has said it would be a great idea to merge them into one group and put them all under him, that will help justify his GS-11 position even though they are only GS-6's. Now by the way, this GS-11 says,

'you know what? this merging business wouldn't have been a good idea a few years back when I was a GS-7 boss over them.'

I would have opposed it as vigorously as I could have. But since I am getting a GS-11 out of this, I think it is a great idea. I know neither group wants it done this way, but they always oppose management when progress is being made. You know what they are doing used to be done by GS-8's and GS-10's, but they had different job descriptions back then and besides, we need all the points we can get; we need to make an impression at the "Top." By making these changes we will build up their morale and that old guy that spoke up against this proposal why he doesn't like to work for his boss because his boss is three grades, or five grades, whichever the case may be higher than him. You know what that guy has, an abrasive personality because he speaks up when he feels that workers are discriminated against. You wouldn't dig to the bottom of a dung pit and find morale as low as it is here.

Exceedingly proud

Editor:

I wish to publicly express my appreciation for the efforts of 68 people who make up Repair Parts Branch B in Division D of the Procurement Directorate. These people have worked hard and unselfishly all year long, putting in many hours of overtime to accomplish a tremendous task. During the month of September, however, they worked "above and beyond" including Saturdays and Sundays and many nights until almost midnight. These people were constantly confronted with obstacles which would appear to preclude the tasks from being accomplished, e.g. uncooperative contractors, funding problems, etc. They never quit and somehow overcame those obstacles. My thanks go to Teams A, B, C, D, and E for a job tremendously well done and please know that I am exceedingly proud to be a part of this organization.

Union support

Editor:

I want to thank all the Army federal workers at Redstone and the Huntsville area for their support in working with me and my staff for the past six months.

I especially want to thank all AFGE members for their support and help in working to improve our representation, and to improve our Union Management relations. Also, thank you all for the good work you are doing for the Army.

We are growing in numbers. We are providing representation in all areas, and our lobbying efforts have been successful in Congress. We have 100 percent cooperation from our AFGE District and National offices.

We are working with Personnel and Management at all levels to improve working conditions.

For example, we had a problem at SDC— one we were unable to resolve with lower management. General Stewart stepped in and solved the problem to the satisfaction of all parties. This is what I mean by good labor relations. In another situation, General Reese resolved a grievance which resulted in retroactive back pay to January 1985 at the GS-9 rate. AAFES management resolved a grievance before going to arbitration. The appellant was awarded his corrective action of his seven calendar day suspension being rescinded. All personnel records reflecting this suspension were destroyed in the grievant's presence and his representative's presence. The grievant will receive all monies and benefits lost while on suspension. The grievant was given an oral reprimand with a notation on his counseling card.

Another case involved a RASA employee who had received a written reprimand which was to remain in the employee's file for two years. The effective date of the reprimand was September 1986. Thus, the date the reprimand would have been removed was September 1988. Col. James A. Hall, deputy post commander, agreed to withdraw the Letter of Reprimand effective September 1987. Another case involved Equipment Specialist employees in TMDE who traveled more than 50 percent of the time. The Joint Travel Regulation (JTR) states that if employees travel more than 50 percent of their time, they do not have to utilize government quarters or government mess. However, AMC had issued a policy stating their interpretation of 50 percent did not mean long term travel but frequent travel. Management retracted themselves by issuing a TWX which read in part, "The Legal Opinion provided clearly states that if a conflict exists between the policy and the JTR, the JTR must be given priority." Another recent win at the command level concerned a Letter of Instruction regarding leave usage of a Commissary employee. The LOI was rescinded.

With your continuing support and help, we will see many improvements. I am proud to be a member of AFGE Local 1858, and Your President.

Dennis Garrison
President, AFGE Local 1858

Very helpful

Editor:

We would like to thank the many men and women who participated in the Exceptional Day at the Fair. As teachers of the exceptional, it is important to us to allow the children to experience as many different type things as possible. Without help, though, it can cause a hardship for us. Having someone to work one-on-one with each child helps us and allows the children to relate to and form a friendship with someone else. The people that worked with us this year at the fair were very helpful, concerned and caring. We hope the day was as rewarding to these who helped as it was to the children.

Soldier helped

Editor:

This letter means a lot to my family. There is a special man I want to say thank you to. The problem is I do not know his name. I only know he is a soldier, is white, has black wavy hair and stands about 5-4.

On Thursday afternoon, Aug. 27, my family and I were in an auto accident. My husband was pulled out, my children too. As for me, I was halfway through the windshield. It wasn't until after two weeks in the hospital that my husband told me a man in the Army was yelled at by a paramedic. That man did everything he could do for me. First, he removed the glass from my face, then he put a cloth on my badly bleeding face. He tried to hold my hand that too was full of blood, but I had glass in it and withdrew it. I thought he was a paramedic for he was in uniform, but his hat fell off. I think he thought I was crazy. I asked him to move his butt over to block out the sun. I laughed, he tried to laugh.

Our '85 Blazer was on its side so I was on the ground.

I'm writing this letter because I am grateful for him being there. And no one has acknowledged what he has done. The paramedic treated him poorly. I want this young man to know what he did was good. And I may not know his name, only his face, but I remember what he did to help.

Please do what you can to find this young man. My name is Sandra Kerby. My husband and I own American Window Cleaning and Janitorial; we have worked in Alabama for four years. This slogan was written on our Blazer, so that may help you find the person who I am speaking of. Tell him thank you! And that I remember. And I will always remember. Also tell him I am sorry I had gotten blood on his uniform. Thank you.

Correction

One of the people listed in last week's Rocket as being sentenced for driving under the influence, Sgt. Dale A. Estep, was incorrectly identified as a member of MEDDAC. He was identified as such in the list provided by the Investigations Branch of the Provost Marshal Office.

Estep has never been associated with the Medical Department Activity, according to MSgt. Garry Trammell, senior medical NCO for MEDDAC. Don Wilson, an investigator in the Investigations Branch, confirmed that Estep belonged to the Marine Corps Administrative Detachment at the time of his arrest.

Demonstrations, displays highlight Fire Prevention

BY RUTH MECHAM

This is "Fire Prevention Week" and the Redstone Fire Department has many activities planned to help all ages realize the importance of fire prevention.

"Play it Safe, Plan Your Escape" is this year's slogan and the fire department will have demonstrations, displays, and activities planned with this theme in mind.

All three stations on the arsenal will have an Open House each day from 9-5. "We encourage parents to bring their children to the open house. We feel the open house really shows children the true hazards of fires," said Steve Sain, a fire inspector.

During the past fiscal year, 20 fires have been reported with total damage exceeding $147,000. "Most of the fires this year were fires we had no control over," said Jim Hughes, a fire inspector. "We had 10 vehicle fires, four family housing fires, one piece of farm equipment, four fires in work areas, and one tractor that was struck by lightning."

The two inspectors agree that even though the dollar figure in damages is higher than past years the fire prevention program is working. "We have a good program and the areas we stress have been areas where we have seen improvement and more awareness by the community," Sain said.

The fire department will be at the Post Exchange this week along with "Pluggie" to provide demonstrations and displays. Pluggie, a remote control robot that resembles a fire hydrant, will entertain the children with its fire prevention tips. "Pluggie talks, walks, winks, looks all around and his cap moves up and down," Hughes said.

"Children really like Pluggie and respond to the information it tells them, we feel passing the information on to children with a device like Pluggie is a good tool and the children seem to remember it more," he said.

Fires involving children, in homes, are the most common and usually involve matches or lighters. "If a child starts a fire, it seems their first reaction is to run and hide under a bed or in a closet," Hughes said. "We want to stress teaching children fire prevention. Parents need to teach their children the importance of contacting the fire department if they start a fire. It is

Bass anglers begin season

Wayne Burge won the first tournament of the season for the North Alabama Military Bass Anglers Association.

Burge took first place with a total weight of 18 pounds 9 ounces in the fishing tournament held Saturday, Oct. 3 on the Tennessee River out of Decatur Boat Harbour. He also won the big fish award with a 4 pound 9 ounce largemouth.

Second place went to Harold Wicker with a total weight of 6 pounds 8 ounces. Third place went to T.C. Nettles with 6 pounds 5 ounces. There were 33 fish brought to the scales, weighing a total of 49 pounds and 9 ounces.

"All fish were returned to the river alive," said Don Larimore, the North Alabama MBAA district director. "The MBAA strongly believes in catch and release."

The North Alabama MBAA is looking for new members; if interested, call Larimore 582-0346 after 3 p.m. or see any member of the group. Prospective members are welcome to attend any meeting of the MBAA. The next meeting is set for 6 p.m. Nov. 4 at the NCO Club.

an Army regulation that all fires be reported to the fire department even if you put the fire out yourself."

The inspectors noted that smoke detectors have been a problem lately. "We are getting a lot of false alarms; smoke detectors are so sensitive almost anything will set them off," Sain said. "Dust, cigarette smoke, and even hair spray have been known to activate the detectors. We realize it is a problem but we have to stress if they go off people need to follow the proper procedures and evacuate. Smoke detectors and other devices are designed for protection and should not be taken lightly."

The department has been receiving some long-awaited new equipment. Because of the types of structures on the arsenal, the old ladder truck has been replaced with a new one. The new truck, costing about $250,000, has a ladder capable of extending 85 feet in all directions. This truck will allow the crew to reach areas they might not otherwise be able to reach, according to Bill Cross, an assistant fire chief.

"Recently we had a major fire at the research and development test area and this truck was instrumental in stopping the fire and saving the two and one half million dollar building," Cross said.

"We have also purchased a mini-pumper which is a fast attack truck which is capable of putting small fires out. Because it is smaller, our response time is less. Our response time to the housing area is two or three minutes," Cross said. He added that the department can respond to a fire anywhere on the arsenal in "no more than four minutes."

There are 35 area fire marshals who conduct monthly inspections of their areas. They report directly to the post fire marshal who is the director of fire protection and prevention.

"This year we have several outstanding fire wardens and as part of the fire prevention week we have presented them with certificates. Bonnie Walker, Bobby Balleu, Dausey Irwin, Milton Stover and Marian Mialki all have been instrumental in helping keep the arsenal free from fires," Cross said.

The three stations service the entire arsenal. Station 1 is located on Rideout Road, station 2 on Vincent Drive and Redeye Road, and station 3 on Patton Road and Redstone Road. The department includes Fire Chief Sam Taylor, three assistant chiefs, three fire inspectors and 35 firefighters.

"I want people to remember that every fire, no matter how small, has to be reported to the installation fire chief and preventing fires is everyone's business," Sain said. To report a fire, call 117 (if using a government phone) or 876-2117.

CHECKING — Billy Riddle, driver/operator for the fire department, checks the pump level panel on the 85-foot ladder truck.

Dental Activity commander believes in quality care

BY SKIP VAUGHN

This is a good time to make a dental appointment here, according to the commander of Redstone's Dental Activity.

The waiting period for an appointment after the initial examination is minimal, said Col. Dan Dalzell, DENTAC commander. "Recently it's been down to three or four days between the examination appointment and the follow-up appointment for routine care. "At the present time and as long as space available time and resources exist, comprehensive dental care will be available for family members of active duty. And this is new," he added. "We're offering basically anything a family member needs. This is for family members of active duty. I think it is an opportunity that does not happen very often and I urge people to take advantage of it."

Dalzell arrived in August after commanding the dental activity at Bremerhaven, West Germany, for three years. He assumed command here from Col. Walter Lohse who went to Giessen, West Germany.

"During peacetime we have to ensure every soldier is ready for combat from a dental standpoint," Dalzell said. "A soldier that has a toothache is probably just as much a casualty as a soldier who's out for anything else. So it's important to keep these soldiers dentally fit."

"Another peacetime mission or function involves the family member dental care. I feel very strongly that dental care for the family members is a very important quality of life issue of the soldier. I think that the soldier who does not have to worry about the dental needs of his or her family has one less concern to worry about that can take away from job performance."

The Active Duty Dependents Dental Insurance Plan has been the latest major change for the Army dental system. This is a voluntary program of preventive services and basic routine care for family members of active duty military. Family members enrolled in the program would select a dentist in the local area. A fee—$3.93 for one dependent, $7.86 for two or more dependents—would be deducted monthly from the soldier's basic pay. This premium pays for basic dental services such as exams, X-rays, and cleaning. For other routine services, such as fillings or repairs to dentures, the servicemember pays 20 percent of the cost to the participating dentist.

The insurance plan does not cover specialized care such as root canals, crowns, bridges, or new dentures. "Each military family must make a decision of whether or not to enroll in the insurance plan," Dalzell said. Soldiers have been given a grace period of up to Oct. 31 to disenroll in the plan. Also, soldiers moving to another installation have 90 days from their reporting date to disenroll at their new location.

"Probably the most important thing we do as doctors is care for the patient; treatment is just part of care for the patient," Dalzell said. "I think our patients should expect nothing but the very best from Army dentistry. And I feel if they don't get it then they should tell someone—the clinic chief, the NCOIC of the clinic or myself, the DENTAC commander."

Dalzell, 49, is originally from Ionia, Mich., about 30 miles east of Grand Rapids. He graduated from Albion (Mich.) College in 1960 with a degree in biology and chemistry, and received a doctor of dental surgery degree from the University of Michigan in 1965. Dalzell entered the Army as a captain in '65 and has spent the past 22 years at various dental assignments. He received a master's in pediatric dentistry from the University of Missouri at Kansas City in 1972. He and his wife Glendyl have two daughters—Rebecca, 19, and Betsy, 18—and a son Luke, 13.

"I'm trained in the oral health care of the infant, child, teen-ager, and child with special needs," Dalzell said. "And I feel very strongly that early and continuing care is necessary to ensure a lifetime of good dental health."

He serves as the children's dentist here. There are nine dentists at Redstone—including eight dental officers and a contract dentist. The hospital dental clinic provides care for active duty medical personnel and for active duty service members assigned at Research Park. The main dental clinic is where all other Redstone service members go, along with their family members, plus retired military and their families. Active duty military have top priority.

"My family and I are very glad we're here at Redstone," Dalzell said. "We've heard very favorable things about the post and the Huntsville area. It's a nice place to live. We're just glad to be here, we like the South and warmer weather."

Notre Dame picked to pounce on Pitt Panthers

BY SKIP VAUGHN

Heisman Trophy candidate Tim Brown leads unbeaten Notre Dame into Pittsburgh this weekend.

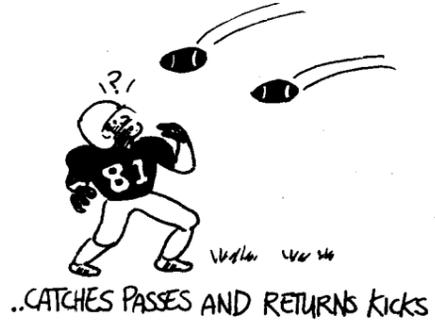

Notre Dame surprised Michigan 26-7, ripped Michigan State 31-8, and turned back Purdue 44-20. Brown, a senior flanker, sparks the Fighting Irish by catching passes and running back kickoffs and punts—often for touchdowns.

Pitt opened with a big 27-17 win over Brigham Young, blanked NC State 34-0, was upset by Temple 24-21, rebounded with a 6-3 win over West Virginia, and fell last week to Boston College 13-10. The Panthers have a tough, blitzing defense that could pull a big upset. But probably not this time. The pick here is...Notre Dame.

Skip's Picks last week resulted in a 29-8 record, bringing the season totals to 135-42-3 for 76 percent. Here are this week's picks for selected games in major college football:

- Notre Dame at Pittsburgh— ND by 7.
- Alabama at Memphis State— Bama by 24.
- Vanderbilt at Auburn— Auburn by 30.
- Cal-Fullerton at Florida— Fla. by 28.
- LSU at Georgia— Georgia by 3.
- Ole Miss at Kentucky— Kentucky by 1.
- Virginia at Clemson— Clemson by 21.
- Fla. State at So. Miss— FSU by 17.
- Maryland at Miami (Fla.)— Miami by 14.
- Wake Forest at No. Carolina— NC by 4.

Mine can be modified in a flash for training

BY JEFF WATSON

Innovation is the key word when it comes to realistic training. And for the soldiers whose responsibility it is to create, rethinking old ideas can lead to improvements.

SSgt. Henry Greene of B Company, 832nd Ordnance Battalion at OMMCS, recently helped improve upon an idea that adds realism to training. His idea involves modifying the M18A1 Claymore Mine so that soldiers can easily see if they have followed the correct operating procedures.

Each year more than 2,000 students graduate from advanced individual training courses at the missile school. Before graduation each student must complete end of courses testing which includes installing, firing, and recovering a Claymore Mine. Until now, when the mine was installed and fired, nothing happened. Students simply yelled 'Claymore', pressed the firing device, and that was it. Now, thanks to a little ingenuity, there is visual proof that things were done right, or wrong.

The modification Greene helped devise involved installing a flash socket and bulb on the mine. By splicing a wire and adding electrical clips, the Claymore's M57 firing device is then capable of firing the flash bulb, as it would an actual mine. By using this technique, the students know immediately if the mine fired. In addition to the added realism, it will also let them know, by a premature flash, if they forgot to use the M40 test set while checking the continuity of the system prior to detonation.

"Some of the students become disinterested in doing the same training over and over, and not seeing any results," Greene said. "This is the safest system we have for training students on the Claymore where they can get direct feedback on the correct procedure. It adds realism to their training and it lets them know where they are making their mistakes."

"Students do not normally see anything happen during Claymore firing; they receive no feedback," said Lt. Col. William Taylor, commander of the 832nd Ordnance Battalion.

"We can tell the students what they did right, or what they did wrong, but it is not the same as them seeing it for themselves.

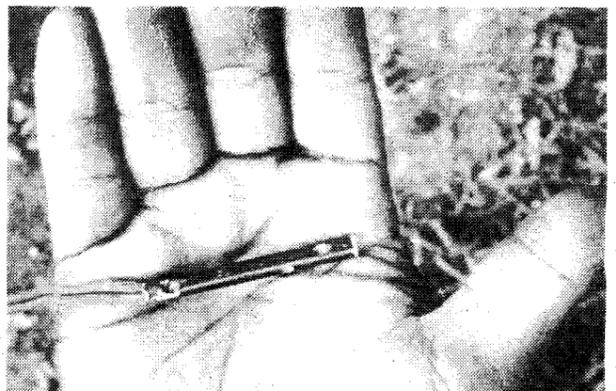

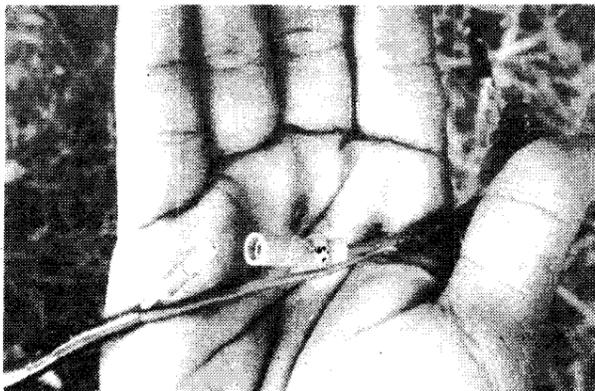

"This device is very unique and I'm surprised it hasn't been thought of before. It opens a new dimension of realism in training. It provides us with positive feedback that reinforces correct procedures while at the same time giving the students confidence in themselves and their equipment."

Greene says that the invention of the device is not all his own doing. He credits Randy Porter and the Training Support Office at OMMCS with the initial conception, and says that he just helped work out a few 'bugs' in the system. It took about a week to perfect the device from the original prototype.

Current cost to modify a mine is under $2.50, and it takes only about 30 minutes to perform the operation.

According to Greene, everything needed can be ordered through supply with the exception of the flash sockets and bulbs, which are obtained through local purchase. The battalion has six of the units completed with plans for more on the way. They plan to use the devices for end of course testing, Saturday soldierization, field training exercises, and night training.

MODIFIED — Upper level photos show how the flash bulb is connected to a Claymore mine. By splicing wire and adding electrical clips, as in lower photos, the Claymore's firing device is capable of firing the flash bulb.

Liquid foods being tested in some military hospitals

BY EVELYN D. HARRIS

American Forces Information Service

When food technologists at the U.S. Army's Natick Research and Development Center talk about a liquid lunch, they don't mean three martinis.

Here's their recipe for hot apple pie: Open package, put contents in a blender, add a cup of hot water and let'er whirl. While the recipe doesn't sound like Grandma's the result tastes even better when the alternative is eight weeks of milk shakes and strained table food.

The Massachusetts facility's liquid foods, called "dental liquids," are now being tested in 12 military hospitals. These include those run by the Army, Navy or Air Force, two of them overseas and the rest in the United States. The foods are being given to patients who have had to have their jaws wired shut, throat cancer patients and those whose teeth have been removed prior to being fitted with dentures.

According to Natick food technologist Susan J. Erickson, patients who have had their jaws wired shut due to injury quickly tire of a bland or over-sweet traditional liquid diet and refuse to eat.

Military and civilian volunteers, most of whom work at Natick or on nearby military installations, help the center test products before they are sent out for field tests. But several years ago, the dental liquids got an early test by an unusual subject — a local softball player.

The player, Robert Fiorvanti of Framingham, Mass., was punched in the mouth by a member of the opposing team. The knuckle sandwich caused serious damage, and Fiorvanti had to have his mouth wired shut. (Fiorvanti, whose good sportsmanship went beyond the call of duty, didn't sue his assailant.)

The director of Fiorvanti's league happened to be Art Reardon, Natick's deputy public affairs officer. Reardon half-jokingly suggested that the player try some of the new liquid meals. Fiorvanti quickly accepted, and Reardon arranged for television cameras to record the results.

Fortunately, Fiorvanti liked the food. That is, he liked the chicken in wine sauce, the beef and gravy, the vegetables and desserts. His only complaints: The spaghetti tasted good, but the oregano stuck to his teeth. He didn't like the sloppy joes, but he didn't like them even before his problem.

Natick food technologists took this into account and now use more finely ground oregano. Liquid foods have to be ground especially fine since patients with wired jaws can't brush their teeth thoroughly.

Other items available include French toast, noodle parmesan, turkey and gravy, pork with stuffing, strawberry shortcake, barbecued chicken and even chili con carne. According to Erickson, spicy foods were included because they were missed most by liquid diet patients.

Natick technologists have developed a prototype two-day menu with 20 items and are working on a five-day menu consisting of breakfast items, creamed soups, entrees, starches, vegetables and desserts, plus six flavors of a nutritional-supplement milkshake. The menus provide about 2,200 calories and 74 grams of protein a day when water is used for reconstruction. When three milkshakes are added, the menu contains 3,500 calories and 130 grams of protein. The number of calories can be adjusted by decreasing or increasing the number of milkshakes.

The dried foods can be stored in their pouches for three years at room temperature. Natick researchers are working on a new methods of producing the foods that will make the product less costly. They are also fine-tuning the foods so that they can be rehydrated in the pouch without the use of a blender.

'Latchkey children' subject of seminar

Children who care for themselves when they aren't in school and their parents are at work will be the subject of a seminar here Oct. 14.

Such youngsters are called "latchkey children." They have to let themselves into the house each day before mom and dad arrive.

"Latchkey children are children of both working parents who have time to spend at home when no parents are at home," said James McFarland, an investigator with the Provost Marshal Office. "There are about 15 million of those children in the U.S."

A Latchkey Children Seminar, presented by the Investigations Branch of Provost Marshal Office, will be held at the Bicentennial Chapel from 2-3:30 and 6-7:30 p.m. Oct. 14. After opening remarks by Lt. Col. Elton Stephenson, the provost marshal, speakers are to include a representative from Latchkey Coalition of Huntsville and a representative from Redstone's Child Development Services. There will also be a slide presentation.

"What we're trying to do is get working parents of military children together to see what is really meant by 'latchkey children,'" McFarland said. "A lot of people don't know what latchkey children are."

The investigations branch encourages family members of the Missile Command and Redstone Arsenal communities to attend this seminar. Military members are asked to ensure their spouses attend, and commanders are requested to encourage attendance by military members with families.

"It sure didn't take us long to get comfortable in our new house here at Fort Polk. Connie loves the size and layout. Ronnie-Lee loves the playground. And there's even room to store my boat.

"We love our quarters. This house has been very important for us in making a good home.

"Because we're in the Army, people may not expect us to live this well. But the Army has changed a lot in the past five years. It's a good place to live, to be.

"Connie and I feel that the Army's really come a long way in housing and, you know, in taking care of its people."

The overall quality of quarters on posts throughout the Army continues to improve. And housing starts and renovations are at an all-time high. It's all part of the Army Family Action Plan in action.

Dogs to be re-vaccinated as precaution

Redstone's veterinary clinic will re-vaccinate about 200 dogs previously vaccinated for rabies in order to ensure that the animals have adequate protection from the virus.

The re-vaccination is being done in response to a suggestion from Norden Laboratories, manufacturer of a rabies vaccine used here. Results of recent tests showed that the three-year vaccine, when administered subcutaneously (under the skin), is not effective for the full three years, according to officials at the clinic here.

The vaccine has been proven effective for three years when administered intramuscularly, but the subcutaneous method of injection is thought to be less painful to the animal, and has been used with provisional government approval since 1985, according to a recent article in the Washington Post. The Redstone clinic began using the subcutaneous method about a year ago, according to Kathy Yawn, a veterinary technician.

"Since we do shots once a year, this is really probably of no consequence," she said, adding that the vaccine held up fine under the two-year test.

"This is just a precaution," she said.

The re-vaccination effort will involve puppies and other dogs that received their very first vaccinations through the subcutaneous method, and dogs that have been brought in from states which require vaccination either every two or three years, according to CWO 2 Alex Stokes, deputy commander of the veterinary activity here.

Dogs that received the vaccine most recently will be the first to be re-vaccinated, and those that were vaccinated from nine months to a year ago will be worked into the regular 12-month schedule, Yawn said.

"They will be scheduled— no walk-ins," she said.

Owners who need to bring their dogs in for re-vaccination will be notified, either by phone or by mail, Stokes said. When owners bring dogs in for re-vaccination, there will be no charge for the injection.

Soldier convicted for abusing child

A Redstone soldier was court-martialed here last week for committing indecent acts with a child.

Sgt. Ronald L. Alexander, 30, of C Company 73rd Ordnance Battalion, was found guilty of three counts of indecent acts with a child under 16. The victim was a female family member, according to Capt. Bradley Bodmer, the trial counsel who prosecuted the case.

Alexander was convicted of committing sexual acts with the young girl over a three year time period, according to Bodmer. She was 12 years old when the incidents began and is 15 now. "He was charged with acts over the three years, going back to Germany," Bodmer said. "All the acts didn't occur at Redstone; some in Germany, some here."

He was reduced in grade to private E-1, ordered to forfeit all pay and allowances, sentenced to 10 years in prison, and will be dishonorably discharged. A nine-member jury of officers and enlisted members heard Alexander's case in a general court-martial Oct. 1-2. The judge was Lt. Col. Andrew Chwalibog of Fort Campbell, Ky. The defense lawyers were Maj. Melvin Abercrombie of Fort Benning, Ga., and Randall Gladden of Huntsville.

Alexander, who has been on active duty for 12 years, came to Redstone in January 1986. He worked as a legal clerk in the 269th Ordnance Brigade. Alexander will serve his sentence at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., said Bodmer, who is one of two prosecutors in the staff judge advocate office here.

A Company-73rd, Marines win Commanders Cup

Redstone's top military units for sports this year are A Company-73rd and the Marine Corps.

A Company, 73rd Ordnance Battalion won the 1987 Commanders Cup by earning the highest point total in eight different events. Of the eight sports included in the competition, A Company won first in football and basketball, and took second in softball, skeet/trap, bowling and volleyball.

HHC MICOM finished second in the Commanders Cup competition, and the Marine Corps won in the small unit category.

Lt. Col. William Katholi, RASA deputy commander, presented the trophy to Capt. Albert Madrell, commander of A Company-73rd.

Soviets conduct effort to acquire Western technology

BY DONNA MILES

American Forces Information Service

"The capitalists," Soviet leader Lenin once boasted, "will sell us the rope to hang them."

More than 60 years later, the Soviets are still buying "rope" — as demonstrated by the recent sale of sensitive technology to the Soviet Union by one of Japan's largest manufacturers.

A subsidiary of the giant Toshiba Corp. and the Norwegian Kongsberg Trade Corp., illegally sold high-tech machine tools and computer software used in propeller production to the Soviet Union.

The equipment allows the Soviets to produce advanced propellers for submarines, making them more difficult to detect and track than earlier models.

In retaliation, Congress is considering sanctions against Toshiba, including legislation that would ban the sale of Toshiba products in military exchanges.

Toshiba rings up some $3 billion in U.S. sales each year. In 1986, Toshiba sales totaled about $19 million throughout the Army and Air Force Exchange Service and $2.5 million in Navy Exchange and Resale Service stores.

But whether or not sanctions are imposed, they can't undo the damage already done. "American servicemen are in greater danger as a result of Toshiba's actions," one congressman protested.

Hardly isolated

The Toshiba incident is hardly isolated. According to a Department of Defense report published earlier this year, it is representative of the Soviet Union's systematic, no-holds-barred effort to acquire Western technology with direct or indirect military application.

This campaign, as outlined in the report, employs thousands of Warsaw Pact intelligence officers, scientists, diplomats, military personnel and espionage agents, who work to fill a "wish list" of technology the Soviets want to acquire.

Automated production and control technology, such as that sold by Toshiba, tops this list, along with computers, deep underwater equipment and telecommunications and sensor technologies.

The Toshiba incident underscores the importance of strong international cooperation in plugging up the flow of sophisticated technology to the Soviet Union and its allies.

Directing this effort is the Coordinating Committee for Multinational group that regulates the export of high-tech goods by the United States, its Western European allies and Japan.

The committee is working to strengthen controls on sensitive items to help prevent them from making their way to the Soviet Union. Some items being reevaluated are superconducting materials and metals, computer software, superprecision measuring equipment, photosensitive devices, acoustic wave devices, electronic materials, lasers, recording equipment, power sources and microwaves.

Such controls can be only as successful as the people with access to this equipment make them.

The equipment sold to the Soviets by the Toshiba and Kongsberg companies is an export-restricted commodity. To hide its sale, the companies submitted a false end-user certificate stating that lower-grade equipment was destined for a civilian facility in Leningrad. In fact, state-of-the-art production equipment was sent to the Baltic Shipyard, the largest of three Soviet submarine propeller manufacturing facilities.

Despite incidents like the Toshiba case, Western cooperation in stemming the flow of sensitive technology to the Soviet bloc appears to be paying off.

According to the DoD report, such cooperation has forced the Warsaw Pact to use more difficult and costly methods to get the Western technology needed to keep pace with the West.

For example, the Soviet bloc countries have stepped up illegal attempts to divert the products they want but that are denied to them because of the licensing process. According to the report, one method they use is an elaborate network of front companies, generally in the West, with routings through neutral countries' transit zones.

DoD, in cooperation with the Customs Service and Justice Department, is taking steps to identify and stop these diversions. Within DoD, specially trained Navy and Air Force Reserve units assigned to the Defense Technology Security Administration use intelligence analysis to spot potential diversion attempts.

But no matter how sophisticated the methods of tracking the leakage of technology, the U.S. government has long recognized that technology security depends on awareness and international cooperation.

"We must continue to encourage our allies and friends to strengthen their programs of technology," said Secretary of Defense Casper W. Weinberger. "Many of them must give greater political importance to export controls, set tougher penalties for violators and tighten export enforcement procedures.

"Holding firm to our present course will make us a more secure nation in the 1990s," he said.

History shows each vote does in fact count

BY DONNA MILES

American Forces Information Service

"America is a land where a citizen will cross the ocean to fight for democracy and won't cross the street to vote in an election."

This wisecrack holds more than a grain of truth.

Last year, more than two million members of the U.S. military stood their posts around the globe, ready to defend their forefather's sacrifice.

Yet, according to a survey of active duty service members, just one in five voted in the 1986 general elections.

That's low, even in light of a national average in which slightly more than one in three eligible people voted.

In a recent letter to the service secretaries, Secretary of Defense Caspar W. Weinberger acknowledged that while voting participation among military people has increased, each service can further improve.

Surveys show that more men and women in uniform voted in 1986 than in 1978 — the last non-presidential election year during which a survey was conducted.

The Air Force led the voting at 30 percent in the 1986 election, up eight percent from 1978. The Marine Corps had a 20.1 percent turnout, up 10 percent from eight years earlier. The Navy showed five percent increase, with 20 percent of its force voting in 1978. The Coast Guard had an 18.2 percent voter turnout, about the same percentage as eight years earlier. The Army had a 15 percent turnout, three percent more than in 1978.

According to Weinberger, 33 percent of those surveyed said they did not vote because they were not familiar with the candidates or issues. Thirteen percent of the officers and 10 percent of the enlisted people said they didn't go to the polls because they had no candidate preference. Eight percent of the officers and 12 percent of the enlisted people said they didn't know how to get a ballot.

"This indicates that over 40 percent of those eligible to vote declined to do so at least partly because they lacked information on the candidates or issues or on the procedures for voting," Weinberger said.

Surveys continually show that many people don't vote because they don't believe their one vote matters. History is full of examples of how wrong that belief is.

If one more voter in each California district had voted for Charles Evans Hughes in the 1916 election, he would have been elected president. The incumbent, Woodrow Wilson, would have gone down in history as a one-term president.

John F. Kennedy gained the White House instead of Richard Nixon in 1960 by an average of less than one vote per election precinct.

President Andrew Johnson escaped removal from office by one vote. At the impeachment trial in the Senate, Edmund Ross cast the deciding vote against conviction.

The 12th Amendment, which provides for election of the president and vice president, was approved in the House of Representatives by a single vote. Nathaniel Macon's vote gave its proponents exactly the two-thirds majority necessary for passage.

In Indiana's 1984 congressional race, Rep. Frank McCloskey retained his seat by a mere four votes.

This fall, as the men and women in uniform go to the polls or file their absentee ballots, they won't know if their single vote will make a crucial difference.

But this they will know: Their votes will help elect judges, mayors and school board members to represent them on many important everyday issues that touch their lives. Voting will give them a chance to express their views on such issues as pay and allowances, taxes, housing, retirement, hospitalization and schools for their children.

"This is one of the rights our military members are prepared to defend, yet they do not avail themselves to the opportunity to exercise their franchise," Weinberger said. "They have a civic responsibility to vote."

Close combat systems golfers win

Close Combat Systems Management Office won a golf match against Materiel Management Directorate on Sept. 28 at the Arab Country Club and Golf Course.

CCSMO posted a net team total of 891 while MMD finished with 917. Each office fielded a team of 12 players. Actual scores were handicapped and net scores were used to determine the winner.

Lee Schnurbusch, chief of CCSMO, and John Finafrock, deputy director of MMD, provided the "traveling trophy" on which the names of the winning team are engraved. Organizers said the real prize at stake, though, was the bragging rights that go to the victors. Plans are already underway for a rematch in the spring of 1988.

Members of the winning team from CCSMO, in addition to Schnurbusch, included B. Self, K. Lund, R. Harris, J. Godwin, C. Burgoyne, R. Kerr, J. Chaney, T. Bogdanski, B. Wyatt, H. Cleveland, and B. Tankersley.

Competing for MMD, in addition to Finafrock, were R. Wood, B. McGee, J. Isom, G. Tucker, R. Turner, W. Chaney, G. Brown, R. Sanders, J. Link, S. Blake, and B. East.

In addition to the overall team trophy, prizes were awarded as follows: two-person low scores net— first place, S. Blake/B. East (MMD), net score 137; second place, H. Cleveland/B. Tankersley (CCSMO), 140. Individual low score net— first place, S. Blake (MMD), 68; tied for second, B. East (MMD) and H. Cleveland (CCSMO), 69. Closest to pin 18— S. Blake (MMD).

CFC campaign has fast start

The local Combined Federal Campaign has collected more than $265,000 in its first report week, according to tentative totals.

"The pre-computer cycle raw collections for the first report week for the 1988 Huntsville area total $265,628.26," stated a release from Eric Thomas, chairman of the local federal coordinating committee.

"This figure does not account for pledge card rejects or sealed envelopes. The corrected adjusted dollar amount will be reported in next week's Redstone Rocket along with the pre-computer raw collection figure for the second report week."

The charity campaign began Sept. 21 and will continue through Oct. 30. The goal for this year's drive is $850,000.

"Caring and Sharing—the Tradition Continues" is the theme for the campaign that benefits voluntary human health and welfare agencies.

TRIBUTE — Brig. Gen. Robert L. Stewart, the deputy commander of the Strategic Defense Command, his wife Mary and their daughter Jenny admire an 8 by 10-foot photomural of the general when he was serving with National Aeronautics and Space Administration as the Army's first astronaut. The mural was unveiled last week at the Alabama Space and Rocket Center where it will be displayed permanently.

TRAINING AND SIMULATION CONFERENCE

- October 21-23, 1987
- Holiday Inn, Research Park
- Huntsville, Alabama

American industry and government spends 40 to 60 billion dollars each year on training and employee development. Are government and industry getting a return on their investments?

The American Institute of Aeronautics and Astronautics (AIAA) and the American Society for Training and Development (ASTD) have designed this two-and-one-half day conference to assist trainers and managers in utilizing the resources devoted to training and simulation that make organizations more efficient and effective. It addresses the issues at the heart of effective training and simulation by providing sessions devoted to four crucial elements:

- needs assessment/analysis
- program design
- program implementation
- program evaluation.

From the high tech issues of training for space flight missions to developing managers and supervisory personnel to entry-level training for new employees, the conference provides informative workshops and discussions of current issues and trends in training with other professionals from a variety of organizational settings.

Travel pay system changes procedure

A new automated travel system has changed the procedure for obtaining a travel advance, according to the Finance and Accounting Division, Resource Management Directorate.

The DD Form 1351, Travel Advance, is no longer required to be prepared by the traveler. Travelers requesting an advance should prepare only the DD Form 1610, Request and Authorization for TDY Travel of DOD Personnel.

A mechanized DD Form 1351 will be prepared by the Travel Pay Section based upon the DD Form 1610 submitted by the traveler. Travelers should put their office symbol and office telephone number on their 1610, officials said.

"The preparation of the DD Form 1351 by Travel Pay Section will cause a little delay in processing the traveler's advance," stated an F&A release. "The traveler can help reduce the waiting in line by submitting four copies of an authorized DD Form 1610 two or three days in advance.

"While the voucher examiners are becoming familiar with the new system, travelers may experience slight delays in receiving settlement vouchers," the release added. "The delay in processing settlement vouchers will be temporary. Your cooperation and patience are requested." For more information, call Ann Howard 876-1706.

High blood pressure is serious business.

That's one way of looking at it. Another way is to ignore it and hope it goes away. Or tell yourself it's hopeless. And that's called playing with fire. Because there's one thing we know for certain. And that is that high blood pressure can usually be controlled. By following your doctor's advice. By exercising regularly to control weight. By eating the right foods. By cutting down on salt in your diet. And by sticking to your prescribed medication. Because if you don't take it seriously today, it could take you by surprise tomorrow.
