Cianciolo takes command

New MICOM commander once served here as project manager

Maj. Gen. Gus Cianciolo today becomes commander of the Missile Command and Redstone Arsenal.

Cianciolo succeeds Maj. Gen. Thomas Reese who has been the commander here since May 1986.

As MICOM commander, Cianciolo leads more than 8,000 soldiers and civilians who provide research, development, production and worldwide support to Army missiles, rockets and related programs, including foreign missile sales.

As Redstone commander, he supports and services 19 other Army commands and activities on the arsenal and in Huntsville, and some 7,000 retired military personnel and their families living in the Huntsville area.

Reese will assume new duties in the Pentagon as deputy for systems management on the staff of the assistant secretary of the Army for research, development and acquisition. Cianciolo has been serving in that position since April 1987.

Cianciolo was born in Covington, Ky., on March 11, 1936. Upon completion of the ROTC curriculum and the educational course of study at Xavier University, he was commissioned a second lieutenant and awarded a bachelor's degree in accounting. He also holds a master's in aerospace engineering from the University of Southern California.

His military education includes completion of the Field Artillery School, U.S. Army Command and General Staff College, and the U.S. Army War College.

Cianciolo's assignments have included commander, 41st Field Artillery Group, V Corps Artillery, U.S. Army Europe; Multiple Launch Rocket System project manager here from 1982-83; and deputy director of materiel, plans and programs in the office of the deputy chief of staff for research, development and acquisition in Washington, D.C.

REESE

Upon completion of the Army Command and General Staff College at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., he was a staff officer in the air mobility division, office of the chief of research and development in Washington, D.C. Cianciolo was the assistant fire support coordinator, later executive officer, for division artillery, 2nd Armored Division at Fort Hood, Texas. Subsequently, he became the assistant chief of staff, G-5 (civil affairs), for the 2nd Armored Division; and then commanded the 1st Battalion, 78th Field Artillery, 2nd Armored Division. Following his attendance at the Army War College at Carlisle Barracks, Pa., he became project manager of the Standoff Target Acquisition/Attack System at the Army Electronics Research and Development Command, Fort Monmouth, N.J.

Awards and decorations which Cianciolo has received include the Bronze Star Medal with "V" device (two oak leaf clusters), Meritorious Service Medal (with oak leaf cluster), Air Medals with "V" device, the Army Commendation Medal (with two oak leaf clusters), the Master Army Aviator Badge, and the Army General Staff Identification Badge.

He and his wife Sheila have three children: Teresa, Martin and Anthony.

Command change ceremony schedule

The Missile Command will get a new commander in a ceremony set for 11 today in front of headquarters building 5250.

Maj. Gen. August M. "Gus" Cianciolo will succeed Maj. Gen. Thomas D. Reese as commander of MICOM and Redstone Arsenal.

The change of command is to be conducted by Gen. Louis C. Wagner, commanding general of Army Materiel Command. Among the general officers expected to attend are Lt. Gen. Jerry Max Bunyard, a former commander here who is now AMC deputy commander for research, development and acquisition.

About 600 invitations were sent out, according to the protocol office. Among those invited were general officers, commanders of major subordinate commands, the Army community relations committee, some retired officers and some retired civilians.

Buses are to shuttle workers here from their buildings to and from the ceremony. Three buses are being dispatched to building 4488, one bus to 4505, two buses to 5400 (one at north entrance and the other at south entrance), two buses to 7442, one bus to 112, and one bus to Strategic Defense Command at Research Park. "Buses will arrive (at the buildings) no later than 9:30 and then will shuttle back and forth till the beginning of the ceremony; and then, when the ceremony's over, they'll shuttle back and forth till everyone's gone," said Capt. Larry Franklin, operations officer at Support Troops headquarters.

Vehicles must be registered here for new decal by July 29 deadline

Most people have complied with the requirement here that their vehicles be registered this year but others still have until the end of July to get a new decal.

Some 43,318 vehicles were registered on post from the beginning of January through June 30, according to Jackie Wyke, lead security clerk at the vehicle registration and identification section. She estimates the number will wind up being around 50,000.

"We're averaging about 200 a day, and they've got until July 29," Wyke said.

Everyone connected with the Army here— active and retired military, Army civilian, and contractor people —must get a new decal by July 29 in order to drive through the arsenal gates. The purpose is to establish a new accountable decal control system and to update the files. Nearly 79,000 vehicles were registered on post by the end of last year.

"We'll have a better accountability of our records, and overall it'll enhance security," Wyke said. Unlike their predecessor, the decals being issued since Jan. 4 include a serial number so there will be a certain decal for each vehicle. This is expected to help officials police the system for improperly obtained decals on unauthorized vehicles.

The expiration system remains unchanged. Contractor decals are good for one year while military and civilian decals expire after three years.

OMMCS conducts reduction in force

The Ordnance Missile and Munitions Center and School has announced it will conduct a reduction in force in its civilian work force.

The reduction in force is caused by budget constraints which resulted in the elimination of a number of civilian spaces.

Approximately 145 positions will be eliminated. Through the use of vacancies and the reassignment of personnel, an estimated 65 civilians will be involuntarily separated. Notices are scheduled to be issued on July 25 with an effective date of Sept. 29.

"Every effort has been made to lessen the impact on the civilian employees and every effort will be made to assist those separated to find new jobs," OMMCS said in a news release.

Several placement programs are available to assist employees. The Department of Defense priority placement program is available for employees willing to relocate and work at other installations. The Office of Personnel Management's displaced employee program is available for referral to other federal agencies.

In addition, in cooperation with the Department of Labor and State Employment, assistance will be given to employees in locating positions with state and private employers within the local community.

Emotional farewell

Editor:

On July 1, CWO 4 M.L.S. "Rob" Robley, conventional ammunition division, OMMCS, was feted at a retirement luncheon at the Officers Club. It was an emotional, heartwarming farewell to an individual who dedicated 33 years of his life to the U.S. Army. He was a proud military man who respected his peers and associates regardless of their ranks. He has traveled a long way and has seen the world many times over. Collections of friends made from tours in Taiwan, Japan, Vietnam (three tours), Germany, Italy, Korea, Texas, and Alabama are priceless to him. He's done it all and most of the time "did it his way." Not only did he make the Master Warrant Officer List but he was the only one selected in his technical field.

He wanted to say thank you to all those present and he wanted to acknowledge those who have led him to the "right path," but emotions took over and all he could do was cry. But then, he cried, too, when he saw the names of fellow soldiers and friends on the walls of the Vietnam Memorial in Washington, D.C.

Therefore, I, his wife, would like to say what he couldn't say. Thank you for making his last day in uniform memorable. Thank you one and all for being a part of our lives; thank you 1st Lt. John H. Rowell of OMMCS for setting up the luncheon and for being able to accommodate all of the people that attended, and Capt. Ernest Boyd, OMMCS, for the nice comments and presentations; and to all the civilians, officers and friends who cared. Mahalo and aloha!

Bring back beer

Editor:

Several Saturdays ago, the Missile Command held its annual MICOM Family Picnic, which appeared to be a huge success. The weather was fine: the small bit of rain during the afternoon cooled things off a bit. The games, entertainment, and exhibits were good: there seemed plenty of offerings for the multitude of happy picnickers. The food was great: the barbecue was fantastic, and the hot dogs hit the spot.

One item conspicuously missing from the picnic was the traditional drink of picnickers everywhere—beer. True, this has been one of the most hotly debated points of the picnic in years past. We've all heard the objections: emphasis on prevention of drinking and driving, lack of control for rowdy over-indulgers, offending the temperate, etc., etc., etc. These are all good arguments, and should not be ignored, but do not tell the whole story.

Ice cold alcoholic beverages were not banned from the picnic, as evidenced by the many picnickers foresighted enough to bring their own. This contests the above arguments against beer; people can get just as rowdy, uncontrollable, and drunk on imported beer as they can on beer sold at the picnic—more so, considering that beer vendors at the picnic monitor their customers and refuse to sell to the intoxicated. More to the point, responsible drinking of beer in moderation does not equate to drunkenness. For those of us who decided that one or two purchased cups of beer would be preferable to carrying an entire cooler filled with beer, no beer was available. Since beer had been available in years past and no announcement made that it wouldn't be available this year, many planned to purchase beer at the picnic.

Beer, as the traditional ice-cold Saturday afternoon drink, is a true happy camper's delight (even if served tepid in plastic cups). The lack of beer at the picnic was noticed and was a big disappointment to many. Beer (especially with bratwurst) is as traditional a part of the mega-picnic event as the dunking booth. The picnic just wasn't the same without it.

In the interest of tradition, for the benefit of future picnickers and for the greater good of the MICOM Family Picnic, we urge next year's Picnic Committee to bring back the beer!

Hospital food service faces contracting

A cost-comparison study performed by Fox Army Community Hospital and the Missile Command Procurement Directorate July 7 probably will result in the contracting out of Nutrition Care at the hospital.

As a result of the contracting out, 14 food service workers now employed by the Army could be replaced by a contractor operation, according to Jeanne Ridenour of the Procurement Directorate. Apparent low bidder for the operation was Industrial Maintenance Services Inc. of Dothan, Ala.

"The current workers would have the right of first refusal for the contractor jobs," she said. Workers were told of the decision Monday.

Ridenour said the cost comparison and supporting

Job well done

Editor:

The employees of Structures Directorate, GSE Design Function would like to commend custodians Willie Newby and Hose Maples for a job well done. Their performance is well beyond what is required of them. They always seem to take pride in their work whether it is a major or a minor task.

It is nice to know that there are people willing to do the little things necessary to make life more comfortable for those around them. Once again thanks, Willie and Hose, for a job well done.

documents are available for viewing in the comptroller's office in the headquarters suite of the hospital. To arrange for a review, call Evelyn Byron at 876-2451.

A 15-day appeal period is required before the contract can be awarded. The appeal period for this contract began July 11 and will end at the close of business July 29, Ridenour said.

Any interested party—including workers in the activity, the union, or offerers responding to the call for bids—can appeal the cost comparison decision. Appeals should be in writing and addressed to the U.S. Army Missile Command, Attn: AMSMI-PC-FAC/Johnny Kilpatrick, contracting officer, Redstone Arsenal, Ala. 35898-5280.

Defense spending controls modified

WASHINGTON—The Department of Defense has announced modifications and extension of financial controls emplaced earlier to help meet the FY 88 outlay target.

The original controls were announced May 20 by Deputy Secretary of Defense William H. Taft.

Under the new guidelines, the spending freeze will be relaxed on new research-and-development and professional services contracts. New contracts will be permitted in these areas, but obligations will be limited to 75 percent of the monthly average to date. Priority will be given to contracts delayed during the original six-week freeze, and small and minority businesses will receive special consideration.

Other outlay constraints on civilian employee overtime pay, new hiring and general administrative services will remain in effect until the end of this fiscal year. Senior DOD managers will have discretion to waive restrictions when national security considerations require.

Taft said the modified guidelines should be sufficient to permit DOD components to comply with the outlay limits in the Bipartisan Budget Agreement. Outlays will be continually monitored on a monthly basis, but no other controls are anticipated, Taft said. (Arnews)

Contract banks collect debts

WASHINGTON—Soldiers overseas who aren't keeping up with debt payments to military contract banks are now finding the money they owe is being involuntarily collected from their paychecks.

Under a program that started March 1, soldiers' debts not collectible by military contract banks may now be forwarded to the Army finance center for offset against the soldier's pay, according to officials at the Army Finance and Accounting Center at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind.

The new procedure is designed to help keep down the cost of overseas military contract banking. All soldiers should in the long run benefit from the program, since it will help keep fees and service charges down. (Arnews)

Patch assumes command at TMDE Support Group

Col. George E. Patch is the new commander of the Test, Measurement and Diagnostic Equipment (TMDE) Support Group.

Patch assumed command July 12 from Col. Perry C. Butler, who is to become the commander of Redstone Arsenal Support Activity. Butler had served as TMDE commander since June 1986.

Patch, a 45-year-old New Jersey native, previously served as deputy director of Procurement Directorate, at the Missile Command.

His awards and decorations include the Silver Star, Bronze Star with "v" device (two oak leaf clusters), Meritorious Service Medal (three oak leaf clusters), Army Commendation Medal (one oak leaf cluster), National Defense Service Ribbon, Vietnam Service Medal, and the Republic of Vietnam Campaign Medal.

He and his wife Diane have two children: Gregory and Layne.

Retiree dental care to decrease soon

Future staffing of dental facilities based on other patient categories

Dental care to retired military and their family members will be decreased effective Aug. 1.

The decision to reduce services to the retired community is not a local decision but a directive from the assistant secretary of defense for health affairs, according to Dental Activity commander Col. Dan Dalzell.

Emergency treatment, examinations, and standby treatment will continue. Retiree services to be eliminated include cleanings, fillings and denture adjustments.

"The main dental clinic retiree patients may stand by for appointment slots which may become open due to 'no-shows' and cancellations," Dalzell said. "Keep in mind, however, that if you choose to utilize the 'standby' system, it is possible that we may not be able to work you in."

The new guidance could result in less doctors assigned to the dental clinic and if that happened the 'standby' policy would be seriously affected, according to Dalzell.

Dental procedures for active duty members will remain the same, and dental care will still be provided on a space-available basis for their families.

The decision to cut retiree benefits is based on Chapter 55, Title 10 of the U.S. Code for Medical and Dental Care. A reason given for the reduction is that future staffing of dental facilities will be based on treatment provided to only certain categories of patients. They are: active duty members; members on duty other than active duty; members of armed forces of NATO countries on duty in the U.S.; dependents of active duty members living with sponsors overseas; dependents of active duty members living in dentally-underserved areas of the U.S.; dependents of active duty members for emergency care; children of active duty members for preventive dentistry care as directed by Department of Defense; dental care as a necessary adjunct to medical, surgical, or preventive treatment; and eligible beneficiaries other than described above, who are required for purposes of teaching and training health care professionals, such as dental residency programs in pediatric dentistry and orthodontics.

"For example, under the new policy, an active duty soldier comes into the clinic and has a tooth filled, we get credit for that filling and we get paid for that filling just like downtown. If a retiree or their family member comes in for the same thing, we receive nothing," Dalzell said.

"I feel the retirees are getting the rug pulled out from under them but unfortunately there is nothing we can do to prevent it," he said.

For more information about the new directive, call the chief dental NCO or the Dental Activity commander at 876-2530.

The military justice system and how it operates

Editor's note: Capt. Willard Rathbun is chief of military justice in the Staff Judge Advocate office.

BY WILLARD RATHBUN

When a possible crime is brought to the attention of Army authorities, an initial investigation is conducted by military officials, and an evaluation is made to determine whether the Army has legal authority or jurisdiction to pursue the case.

This determination— of whether the Army should fully investigate and prosecute the case or transfer it to some other state, federal or foreign agency —is based on a number of factors. These include the type of crime, where it was committed, and the military status of the accused. If the Army does not have jurisdiction, the appropriate civilian authorities will be notified and will themselves determine whether prosecution is appropriate.

If the Army does have jurisdiction, potential punishment for criminal convictions can range from minor sanctions— such as an oral reprimand — to the more serious punishments of life imprisonment or death in certain felony cases such as premeditated murder. The decision of how to proceed is made by the accused's chain of command. At the lowest level, the accused's immediate commander may dismiss the charges or, if the offenses are determined to be minor, initiate nonjudicial punishment (Article 15) proceedings. Under such proceedings, that commander determines guilt or innocence and can impose small fines, reductions in pay grade, and restrictions on freedom less than confinement.

Courts-martial

Offenses may be disposed of by administrative elimination boards or by military criminal trials known as courts-martial when determined appropriate by a commander who by law can convene these boards or courts. The lowest level of courts-martial is the summary court-martial, roughly equivalent to a civilian municipal, police or magistrates court. A military officer sits as judge and may sentence the accused in most instances to loss of two-thirds of one month's pay, reduction in rank and 30 days in jail.

A special courts-martial is the intermediate military court and consists of a legally qualified military judge and a jury of military personnel. It also has a prosecuting attorney, known as trial counsel, and entitles the accused to a defense attorney. If requested by the accused, he or she may be tried by a military judge alone. This court may impose sentences or fines, reduction in rank, confinement in jail for up to six months, and in certain cases, a bad conduct discharge from the Army.

A general courts-martial, the highest level of courts-martial, is usually reserved for serious military or civilian-type offenses (felonies). A general court-martial is normally ordered by a general and consists of a military judge and— at the option of the accused —a jury. It may impose up to the maximum punishments authorized by law including, depending on the offenses involved, a dishonorable discharge, life imprisonment or death. The President has listed the maximum punishments authorized for the various military offenses under the Uniform Code of Military Justice in a book known as the Manual for Courts-Martial. Your victim/witness liaison can advise you regarding the maximum punishment for the offense under investigation.

Preliminary hearing

In most cases alleging serious offenses, normally a formal, preliminary hearing is held. This Article 32 hearing is to evaluate the quality and quantity of the evidence and to recommend what level of courts-martial, if any, is appropriate.

Where a case has been sent to a special or general court-martial, often a pretrial agreement is reached between the commander who authorizes the court-martial and the accused. These "plea bargain" agreements are entered into for a number of reasons, including sparing a victim the trauma of testifying in court, elimination of the delay and cost of a lengthy trial, and reducing the risk of having a case reversed by an appellate court. Pretrial agreements usually provide that the accused will plead guilty in exchange for a limit on the sentence, or dismissal of certain charges.

The military justice system is designed to promote good order and discipline in the armed forces, provide a system for the just disposition of criminal offenders, provide the accused a fair trial, prevent the commission of further crime, and appropriately punish and rehabilitate those persons whose guilt has been proven beyond a reasonable doubt. In order to accomplish these goals, the military community's cooperation with law enforcement and other military authorities is extremely important.

Soldiers encouraged to exercise their right to vote

BY FREDA BRAME

Voting is a right that, unfortunately, many soldiers and family members don't take advantage of.

A study of the 1984 presidential election revealed that the overall voting rate for military members was considerably less than the national average, according to Col. Valmore Girard, the MICOM voting assistance officer.

A further breakdown of the figures showed that officers and senior NCOs were more likely to vote than other enlisted personnel.

A major goal of the voting assistance program is to ensure that every soldier has the opportunity and is encouraged to vote.

"The problem is energizing those people who have a tendency not to vote," Girard said. "One key is NCO involvement. The NCO chain needs to get involved and encourage junior NCOs and soldiers to vote."

Many individuals may fail to vote because they don't fully understand the absentee voting procedures for their state.

The Army Voting Assistance Program aims to make it easier for soldiers and their family members to exercise their right to vote.

Voting assistance officers—trained to provide information and assistance to individuals attempting to register and vote—are available in every unit. These officers will help soldiers and family members to correctly fill out and submit Federal Post Card Applications (FPCA) for absentee ballots.

Each voting assistance officer should have a DA Pam 360-503, '88/89 Voting Assistance Guide and an ample supply of federal post card applications. Instructions for helping individuals to register and vote absentee are provided alphabetically by state in Chapter 3.

The voter's state of residence is important because each state requires the FPCA to be filled out in a slightly different way. Also, to be valid, the FPCA must be legible and signed.

August is Voters Registration Month and unit voting assistance officers will be contacting soldiers and encouraging them to vote. Every soldier will have the opportunity to submit their FPCA and protect their right to vote in the 1988 general election.

ASSISTANCE—1st Lt. Michele Goddette, the voting assistance officer for Headquarters Detachment, 832d Ordnance Battalion displays the '88/89 Voting Assistance Guide.

Swim association offers year-round fun, fitness

BY PAM ROGERS

It's about that time of year again. School has been out for over a month, and doesn't begin again for another month. The initial euphoria of summer vacation has worn off—the kids are bored and moms are climbing the walls.

Well, it's not that way for one Redstone family. Jennifer and Marcia Kjer stay busy all year long through their participation in the Huntsville Swim Association. Their parents, Capt. Jim and Sara Kjer are almost as involved as their swimming offspring, offering encouragement, shuttling the girls to practice and meets and assessing the competition.

Jennifer, 9, learned to swim after a near-disaster. "She took private lessons after she fell off a dock at Fort Ord. I panicked, and I wanted her to learn to swim," Sara said. Jennifer was 3 years old at the time. Marcia, 6, learned to swim when she was 4.

Jennifer began competitive swimming when she was 6, and has been swimming ever since. This summer she made the hall of fame, as one of the five fastest swimmers in her age group in the southeast, Sara said.

Marcia began to swim competitively when she was 5. Both girls were high-point winners at a recent meet in West Point, Miss.

Both girls say they like swimming, but they hasten to point out that the attraction of team swimming is the competition.

"I like it because of the ribbons and medals and trophies you can win," Jennifer said.

"I just like to swim," said Marcia. "I like the butterfly best."

There are several children of military families who swim with the Huntsville Swim Association. Sara would also like to see an arsenal group participate in the Rocket City Swim League, a group which organizes children from neighborhood pools for summer competitive swimming.

"Redstone has a youth swim, but they're having trouble getting support. I'd like to get something started on post. That's my goal," Sara said.

In the meantime, HSA welcomes any child between the ages of 5 and 18 who can swim 25 yards unassisted, according to Assistant Coach Barbara Belyea.

There are several swim groups which can accommodate youngsters of different ages and skill levels. Groups are also divided according to the amount of time swimmers are willing to commit to the sport, Belyea said.

"Each child makes a commitment at the beginning," she said. There is a group for kids who are uncommitted, just practicing when they can. At the other extreme is a group for swimmers who want to compete on the national level. They practice nine times a week.

Belyea believes swimming is about the best all-around sport a child can participate in.

"The benefits are overall physical conditioning, and it makes a more well-rounded child. I think it does a lot for their self-discipline," she said.

"Each child out here has a different goal. Some come for the physical activity, to keep weight off. Then they decide they really want to compete," Belyea said.

The season for HSA begins Sept. 15. Kids who sign up have two weeks to decide if they really want to stick with it before they have to pay their fees. Fees vary with the amount of practice sessions children opt for, Belyea said.

For more information about the HSA, call Ann Page 882-0172 or the HSA office 883-2290.

Early retiree starts new career outside government

BY RUTH MECHAM

At least one of the more than 400 people who took advantage of early-out retirement this year went on to start a new career outside the government.

"I wanted to do something different, something I enjoyed and something I could have fun with," says Francis Lundy, retired contract specialist.

Lundy was a contract specialist in the Procurement Directorate for 20 years. "I would go to work and some of the ladies I worked with would have me fix their scarves. When I announced I was going to retire, one lady said I would have to have a class and teach them how to tie scarves. I said if I did that I might as well go into the scarf business," she says, laughing.

A few weeks after retiring, Lundy started applying for jobs. She had an idea but, as she puts it, there are very few short older models.

"In my opinion, older established women are the ones who shop more and make more purchases and I thought modeling would be fun," Lundy says.

During an interview for a modeling job with a local department store, she mentioned she tied scarves. Since then she has been modeling for the department store and will soon start conducting scarf demonstrations for the store.

"I have always worn scarves," Lundy says. "I like them. It is possible to take an inexpensive dress and by adding a scarf make it look expensive. It's even possible to wear the same dress five days in a row and have five completely different looks. As I see it, the point of a scarf is to accent what you are wearing and to save money."

Lundy has performed scarf demonstrations for a variety of civic clubs and organizations. She also conducts seminars for smaller groups.

"I like the small groups, no larger than 20 people," she says. "I don't encourage refreshments because it is two hours of intense hands on scarf training."

How you wear a scarf, according to Lundy, can make you look slimmer, add height and add a classy look. "I like the larger scarves. They are my favorite, you can wear them with anything," she says.

"The most important thing to remember about scarves is they don't have to be tied perfect. If it's not perfect but looks good, wear it that way. Even a beginner can tie a scarf pretty; just about anything will turn out nice," Lundy says.

She does encourage practice and suggests looking at how other women have their scarves tied for ideas. "It's really funny, I thought when I retired I would be able to sleep and I wouldn't have pressure on me like I did before I retired. I find myself now, just as busy. I've gotten up at 3 or 4 in the morning because I was dreaming about tying a scarf and I wanted to see if it would work. The big difference now is I'm having fun and really enjoy what I'm doing."

Lundy admits that when she was younger she was the shy one in class; she has worked hard to get over her shyness. "I remember in school I would be the first one to volunteer for reading assignment or anything which required me to get up in front of a group of people. I knew I had to be first in order to get it over with before I lost my nerve," Lundy says.

"Now, it (getting up in front of people) is easy and I enjoy it. I believe a person can do anything they set their mind on; all they have to do is practice, practice, practice," she says.

When she isn't modeling or demonstrating scarves, Lundy and her husband of 14 years enjoy ballroom dancing and are members of the Redstone Dance Club. The couple has four children and three grandchildren.

"My children are my fan club, they follow me around to demonstrations or when I'm modeling and give me that little bit of encouragement we all need," Lundy says.

"Just remember, don't throw away any accents; I've got scarves I had in the '50s. Accents are so versatile and add so much and the way you wear them is limited only to your imagination."

Hard work pays off for supervisor at logistics center

BY RUTH MECHAM

A MICOM worker who began her career as a clerk typist has become a division chief for land combat systems.

Last week Nelindra Corum became the first woman working in the Missile Logistics Center to be promoted to the grade of GM-15.

"I don't think it has soaked in yet. I'm appreciative of the opportunity, trust and confidence that has been given to me," Corum said.

Corum started her career with civil service in 1963 working at Fort Benning, Ga., as a clerk typist. She moved to Huntsville in 1964 and started to work for the supply and maintenance directorate of the Missile Logistic Center as a clerk typist. She made a career change in 1969 to the position of inventory management specialist, commonly referred to as item manager.

"With the exception of three years, I have always worked at MLC," she said. "I worked for the Pershing project office from January 1980 to April 1983 as a logistics management specialist and it required a lot of traveling. I think the treaty is wonderful. I know what the Pershing system is capable of doing and I feel it had a strong influence on making the treaty work. It was hard for me to leave my family and travel so much; but during this time I realized the importance of the work MLC does and the effects it has on soldiers in the field."

She returned to MLC in 1983 as a supervisory inventory management specialist and her career has taken off since then with a promotion about every year and a half.

"I'm probably one of the few civil service employees that can say I've never had a bad boss," Corum said. "I have always had supervisors who have encouraged and supported me. I like to think I have modeled myself after very good people and I'm not afraid of hard work."

Once a supervisor, according to Corum, you have to learn to put trust in those who work for you and you have to be fair. "I think the people that work for me would say I'm a fair and honest person. They know I know my job and I know MLC functions as a team, I feel like my staff makes up the best part of the team," she said, smiling.

She describes herself as a functional type person who has always worked hard at anything she has done. "I never set a goal to become the first female GM-15 in MLC; I have set goals for myself to work hard and take pride in my work and I demand those qualities in my staff."

Corum says her career has not prevented her from being a wife and mother of three. "It's kind of funny,

I worked the whole time I was pregnant and all three of my children were born on Monday so I was just off work the required six weeks."

The couple live in Hazel Green and own 13 acres of land which keeps them busy when they aren't pursuing their professional careers. "I have a big garden and I love working in it. I find it relaxing and refreshing and it gets my mind off the pressures of work. We freeze some of the goodies from the garden and we give a lot away," she said.

Having two daughters still home, one a teen-ager and the other a pre-teen, keeps life busy for the Corums. "We have a swimming pool in our back yard and we always have kids running around. My husband comes from a large family and we really enjoy the company of the kids, their friends and all the nieces and nephews. When I had to travel a lot it was hardest on Jaime (her youngest daughter), she was supportive and understanding and now that I'm not having to travel we are really enjoying each other."

Army improves re-enlistments

Recruiting and retention figure for the first quarter of fiscal 1988 were satisfactory, but signs show difficulty ahead in meeting goals.

That's the word from the Pentagon's manpower head, Grant S. Green Jr., assistant secretary of defense for force management and personnel.

All services achieved their overall first quarter recruiting objectives, but only the Army improved its first-term re-enlistment rate over comparable 1987 figures. Overall career retention rates showed some improvement over last year.

Green indicated that a strong economy, a shrinking pool of available youth, fewer recruiting resources and military pay falling behind private-sector wages will add up to more competitive market conditions for the services.

Young pilot returns home

Jennifer Hudgens, the 11-year-old Redstone pilot, landed at the Redstone Airfield about 2:30 p.m. Sunday, ending her unofficial record breaking cross country flight.

Her 4,500 mile flight began at Homestead, Fla., on June 26 and ended in Nome, Alaska at about 4 p.m. last Wednesday, after inclement weather caused several delays and a last-minute change of course.

Jennifer and her father, Maj. Richard Hudgens, had originally planned for a five to six day flight to Point Barrow, Alaska, but recurring weather problems extended the trip by several days and forced them to conclude the trip at Nome. The distance involved was about the same.

Jennifer's cross country flight is an unofficial record for a child her age and she is the first girl to make a long distance flight of this sort.

After flying more than 9,000 miles in 15 days, Jennifer is ready for things to be back to normal. She said she is tired, but happy that she completed the flight.

Pair hope to make big hit at Army softball tryouts

BY SKIP VAUGHN

Two soldiers from Redstone have been selected to try out for the All-Army softball team.

Spec. Earl Manning of Medical Company and Spec. Darren Mesch of Headquarters & Headquarters Company are to participate in the Army men's softball team trial camp July 20 to Aug. 13 at Fort Indiantown Gap, Pa. They are among 20 soldiers selected to take part in the camp.

"I feel it's a great honor," Manning said. "It's something I really didn't think I had a chance for because of the amount of people in the Army, but I thought I had the talent capabilities as well as Darren here."

"Took a lot of paperwork, though," Mesch quipped. Selection by Department of Army was based on their applications and recommendation of the Redstone sports director, Irv Lyles. "I'm thankful the Army's giving me the opportunity to participate through the command here and DA," Mesch said.

Manning, 27, is from Wheeling, W.Va. He played for an American Legion baseball team that won the West Virginia state championship in 1978. His college team, Valdosta (Ga.) State, won the NCAA Division II national championship in 1980. A shortstop and centerfielder, he plays on a Huntsville softball team and the MEDDAC team.

"I'd like to give some credit to the people who belong to my unit," Manning said. "Without their support, I wouldn't be going (to the trials) right now."

Mesch, 26, is from Marissa, Ill. He was a catcher and pitcher at Belleville (Ill.) Junior College which won its regional in 1982. While stationed at Fort Greeley, Alaska, his team won the 6th Infantry Division softball championship in 1986. A team he played for in the community there won the Alaska state softball championship that year. He plays on the post team and the HHC team.

"I play shortstop on both teams," Mesch said. "But at All-Army, whatever's necessary. That's the way we both (himself and Manning) are. We want to fill the Army's needs in softball."

ALL-ARMY BOUND— Mesch and Manning will represent Redstone at the Army men's softball team tryouts.

Both soldiers have been stationed here since September 1987 and expect to leave in January 1989. Manning, an eye specialist, will be going to Germany. He and his wife Sandra have two daughters: Laree, 9, and Jessica, 1.

Mesch, a petroleum supply specialist at the airfield, will be returning to Alaska. A bachelor, he enjoys fishing and golf.

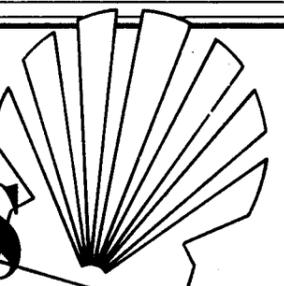

Department of Army headquarters will provide prepaid airline tickets for the soldiers selected for the upcoming softball tryouts. Two coaches and 18 players were named to participate. Those selected at the trial camp will participate in the armed forces championship Aug. 13-19 at San Diego. Also at stake in San Diego will be spots on the armed forces team, which will compete in the American Softball Association championship in Savannah, Ga., Sept. 2-5.

"It's quite an honor to be selected (for the trial camp) and quite a feather in their cap," said Joe Hopkins, chief of community recreation division.

Army ROTC grad wins top honor

WASHINGTON— Army 2nd Lt. Robert D. Haycock received the annual Hughes Trophy award June 23 as the most outstanding Reserve Officers' Training Corps commissioned graduate for 1987.

"I got involved in ROTC in 1984 as a college freshman at Eastern Illinois University in Charleston," Haycock said in an interview just before the ceremony. "They push academics in ROTC. And, they expect you to 'crack the books.'"

For Haycock, cracking the books paid off. A 23-year-old psychology major who minored in history, he was graduated last year from the university. He now serves as the 1st platoon leader, A-Company, 1/504th Parachute Infantry Regiment, 82nd Airborne Division at Fort Bragg, N.C. Since November 1987 Haycock has completed the infantry officer basic course, jumpmaster school and pathfinder school.

Haycock accepted a plaque, provided by the trophy's namesake, Hughes Aircraft Company, from Undersecretary of the Army Michael P.W. Stone during a Pentagon ceremony. (Arnews)

Deadline

As of June 30, civilians had registered 15,089 vehicles, contractors 14,741, active enlisted 3,522, retired enlisted 4,568, active officers 1,651, and retired officers 3,747. "I think the reaction's been real good," Wyke said. "You're always going to have a few, but we haven't had many complaints. Everybody's been real cooperative. And we've had a real good response from the retired community."

Registration is conducted from 7:15 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday at the vehicle registration and identification section, building 3423 on Gray Road. Besides Wyke, members of that section of the Provost Marshal Office include Mary Branum, Faye Simmons, Jacquelin Smith and Jovita Huskinson.

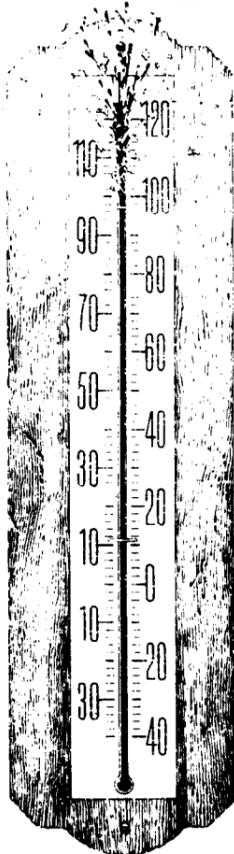

"We thank them (the people who have registered their vehicles) for their response and their patience," said Diane Samsonavicius, chief of administrative office of the Provost Marshal Office.

To register, people must complete a DA form 3626 for each vehicle. They must have the certificate of state registration required by the state in which the vehicle is registered (this can be a tag receipt, bill of sale, title, or application for title); a valid state driver's license; and a military identification card or security identification badge. And if the vehicle is owned by someone else (other than spouse), they must have written permission from the owner. For more information, call 876-5770.

"Go ahead and sign the contract. What have you got to lose? Since you're in the military, you can cancel the agreement anyway."

The salesperson trying to pressure you with this argument is referring to the Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act of 1940—but he doesn't have the facts straight. The act can never be used as an excuse to cancel a legitimate debt—such as a contract to purchase an automobile—incurred after entry on active duty.

According to Capt. Alice McKenna, an attorney with the Army's Legal Assistance Office, the civil relief act was intended to protect draftees from financial obligations incurred before they were drafted. It protects members from being sued for immediate reimbursement of debts incurred before entry on active duty.

But the act's protection applies only if a court agrees that the member is making less in the military than before joining. Military lawyers said that rarely happens today. Moreover, the act doesn't protect a servicemember against proceedings for debt indefinitely. Those who flout their obligations in civilian life will not be able to obtain indefinite delays in paying off just debts—simply because of the act.

Federal Trade Commission attorney Lewis Franke said that a few military members may be confusing the Soldiers' and Sailors' civil Relief Act with the commission's "cooling off" rule. The cooling off rule applies to all consumers, military and civilian. But it applies primarily to purchases made at home from door-to-door salespersons. It doesn't apply to telephone, mail-order and real estate sales, insurance or securities. Franke said military and civilian consumers who are unaware of the limitations of the protection provided by the rule could easily fall prey to hard-sell tactics from the unscrupulous. "the cooling-off rule does not apply to health club contracts, car contracts or other such contracts signed at the seller's usual place of business," he explained.

Besides door-to-door sales, the rule applies to sales involving more than $25 made anywhere other than the seller's normal place of business. For example, it applies to consumer product "parties" given in private homes and to sales made in rented rooms and restaurants.

According to Federal Trade Commission rules, the seller must inform you of your cancellation rights at the time you agree to the sale. In addition, you should receive two copies of a cancellation form (one to keep and one to send to the seller) and a copy of your contract or receipt. The contract or receipt should be dated, show the name and address of the seller and explain your right to cancel.

To cancel the sale, sign or date one copy of the cancellation form. Mail or hand deliver it to the address given for cancellation anytime before midnight of the third business day after the contract date. Keep the other copy for your records. Since proof of the mailing date and proof of receipt are important, it is best to cancel by certified mail.

If you aren't given cancellation forms, write your own cancellation letter or telegram and let the Federal Trade Commission know you weren't given the required forms. You don't need a reason for changing your mind.

Federal retirement and sick leave: how they work

BY JIM GARAMONE
American Forces Information Service

Sick leave is an insurance policy for most federal workers, but it can also be money in the pocket for many nearing retirement.

It accumulates at a rate of four hours per pay period. Unlike annual leave—which workers must use or lose—sick leave accumulates as long as a person works for the government.

When people retire, they do not get reimbursed for sick leave hours; however, they may be credited with those hours as part of total federal service for retirement purposes.

The arithmetic runs as follows:

Under the Civil Service Retirement System, 2,087 hours of sick leave make up a year and 172 hours make up a month. Thus, accumulating a year's worth of sick leave requires just over 20 years of federal service, six months' worth of sick leave takes 10 years, and so on.

To take an example: A person who retires after 30 years federal service and has 2,435 hours of accumulated sick leave would actually retire with 31 years and two months of total federal time.

Sick leave itself, however, cannot be used to qualify for retirement. That is, a person with 24 years of federal service cannot add a year of accumulated sick leave and thus be eligible for retirement with 25 years of service.

This raises a question about whether an employee benefits from accumulating sick leave.

A recent General Accounting Office report noted that federal workers now take more sick leave in the years before retirement than at any other time in their careers.

Personnel officials claim employees would be in better financial shape if sick leave was added to their time in service. "The payoff for adding the sick leave to retirement lasts as long as you receive a retirement check," said an official.

However, federal workers under the new Federal Employees Retirement System plan cannot accumulate sick leave for retirement purposes. This includes employees who chose to leave the Civil Service Retirement System for the new plan as well as new employees since 1984, who are automatically enrolled in the new system.

Those who transferred to the Federal Employees Retirement System had their sick leave frozen for retirement purposes. "If employees end up with fewer hours than they had when they transferred, then that is what they get. If they save more hours, they still only get the number they transferred with," an official said.

Thus, persons who transfer from the Civil Service Retirement System to the Federal Employees Retirement System with 1,000 hours of sick leave receive 1,000 hours of credit (about six months) when retirement comes around. However, if they end up with 700 hours at retirement time, that's all they get credit for. If they stay and continue to accumulate sick leave, they still get credit only for the 1,000 hours.

U.S. and Soviets make 'start' towards arms reductions

BY TOM JOYCE

American Forces Information Service

Equal. Bilateral. Global application. Verifiable. These principles guided the United States during negotiations with the Soviets that led to the signing of an intermediate-range nuclear forces agreement to eliminate all ground-launched ballistic and cruise missiles with ranges between 500 and 5,500 kilometers.

But efforts to reduce and control arms did not end with the signing of the INF treaty. The countries continue to negotiate at the Strategic Arms Reduction Talks, Defense and Space Talks, Nuclear Testing Limitations, Conventional Arms Control and Chemical Arms Negotiations.

In the Strategic Arms Reduction Talks—commonly referred to as START—the focus is to reduce systems that pose the most acute danger of sudden nuclear attack: offensive ballistic missiles. This is not a new objective. In his fiscal 1989 Annual Report to the Congress, Secretary of Defense Frank C. Carlucci wrote, "Our concern over the destabilizing nature of non-recallable ballistic missiles, particularly intercontinental ballistic missiles with their short flight-times, has always been a central theme of the U.S. START position."

The Soviet Union has attempted to link a START agreement to limits on President Ronald Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative. The United States rejects any preconditions while pointing out that the Strategic Defense Initiative is a research and technology program only.

The U.S. goal in the Defense and Space Talks, according to Carlucci, is to convince the Soviet Union to change the nature of the strategic defensive systems rather than maintaining the current nuclear offensive standoff.

On Jan. 22, 1988, the United States put forward a draft Defense and Space Treaty to fulfill an agreement that Reagan and Soviet General Secretary Mikhail Gorbachev reached at their summit in Washington, D.C., in December 1987.

The Defense and Space Talks are the other part of the Nuclear and Space Talks that have been going on in Geneva for about three years. These negotiations are an attempt to reach agreement with the Soviets on the future of defensive technologies that could, if effective defenses prove feasible, protect countries against ballistic missiles.

The White House statement read, in part, "It would provide a jointly managed, predictable, precise, and stable basis for developing, testing, and when proven feasible, deploying advanced defenses against strategic ballistic missiles. Such defenses would decrease the risk of war."

As long as the United States must rely on nuclear weapons to deter Soviet aggression, nuclear testing will be required to ensure those weapons remain safe, reliable, effective and survivable. At the same time, talks aimed at nuclear testing limitations are moving ahead.

On Feb. 15, 1988, the United States and the Soviet Union resumed Round II of the Nuclear Testing Talks. As a first step, both countries agreed to negotiate effective verification measures for two existing, but unratified, nuclear testing treaties: the Threshold Test Ban Treaty and the Peaceful Nuclear Explosions Treaty.

The two nations have agreed to design and conduct joint verification experiments at each other's nuclear test sites, which will provide opportunities to measure the yield of nuclear explosions.

According to the White House, the United States has a longstanding and continuing position that a comprehensive test ban is a long-term objective, which must be viewed in the context of a time when the United States does not need to depend on nuclear deterrence to ensure international security and stability.

That view would also include a time when the United States and the Soviet Union have achieved broad, deep and verifiable arms reductions, substantially improved verification capabilities, expanded confidence-building measures and greater balance in conventional forces.

In February 1987, representatives of NATO and the Warsaw Pact began negotiations in Vienna on a mandate for new talks on achieving conventional stability in Europe. The negotiations will address conventional forces from the Atlantic to the Urals. The sides have agreed on the following objectives: to establish a stable and secure balance of conventional forces at lower levels; to eliminate disparities prejudicial to security and stability; and to eliminate, as a matter of priority, capability for launching surprise attack and large-scale offensive action (capability which NATO neither has nor aspires to).

Representatives of NATO and the Warsaw Pact resumed the talks in Vienna on Jan. 28, 1988.

"These talks gain added importance in light of the recent signing of the INF treaty and progress in START negotiations," said Carlucci. "The United States has a responsibility to act in concert with its NATO allies to ensure that a conventional balance is struck in Europe which both enhances regional stability and preserves the alliance's ability to execute its strategy of flexible response."

saw Pact agree to a mandate for conventional stability talks, the United States and its NATO allies will reassess the status of the talks.

The United States has been actively participating in chemical weapons arms control efforts for more than a decade. In 1984, U.S. representatives presented a draft treaty in Geneva to promote negotiations. The ultimate objective has been a comprehensive, effective, verifiable and global ban on the weapons.

After years of denial, the Soviet Union finally admitted, in 1987, that it possesses chemical weapons and claimed to have ceased production. The Soviets have also agreed in principle with the longstanding U.S. position favoring short-notice, mandatory, on-site challenge inspections as a necessary element of an effective verification regime. The USSR has still not accepted key elements of the U.S. draft treaty, which are prerequisites to implementing challenge inspections.

The U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency notes, however, that "While the U.S. welcomes greater Soviet openness, the Soviet Union has not provided nearly as much information about its chemical capabilities as has the United States, and many serious questions remain."

In light of the global nature of the chemical weapons threat and the United States commitments around the world, a chemical weapons ban will require the participation of all states capable of manufacturing the weapons. Thus, the eventual achievements of a Soviet-American consensus will constitute only the first step towards the ultimate goal.

Post exchanges offer more savings

Shoppers in Army and Air Force Exchange Service stores save an average of 24.9 percent compared to prices charged in commercial stores, according to the 1988 A.C. Nielsen Company price comparison survey.

The survey showed AAFES had lower prices 93 percent of the time while commercial prices were lower 7 percent of the time. Prices were compared in February outside 17 Army and Air Force installations in the United States. The 24.9 percent savings does not include state or local sales taxes.

"We use the Nielsen survey to see if we're meeting our goal of saving customers 20 percent compared to downtown prices," explained Maj. Gen. John E. Long, AAFES commander. "I'm proud to say we exceeded our goal."

The survey included 317 high-volume, nationally-branded items. Five test shoppings of each item in each location were attempted. The survey compared commercial prices of the day, including "sale" prices, with the AAFES regular prices for like items.

Household and stationery items had the highest percentage savings at 31.1, followed by clothing and furnishings at 30.7, jewelry at 25.3, automotive at 16.7, tobacco products at 15.5, toiletries at 17.2 and sundries at 13.1.

Markets surveyed were areas around England Air Force Base, La., Fort Sill, Okla., Randolph Air Force Base, Texas, Fort Jackson, S.C., Patrick Air Force Base, Fla., Robins Air Force Base, Ga., Cameron Station, Va., Fort Monmouth, N.J., Pease Air Force Base, N.H., Ellsworth Air Force Base, S.D., Fort Carson, Colo., Fort Knox, Ky., Scott Air Force Base, Ill., Fort Lewis, Wash., Norton Air Force Base, Calif., Fort Ord, Calif., and Williams Air Force Base, Ariz.

No cut in housing allowance this month

FORT BENJAMIN HARRISON, Ind.— There will be no cut in the variable housing allowance for soldiers in July, say officials at the U.S. Army Finance and Accounting Center here.

The Army continues to plead its case with Congress to provide relief for the projected VHA shortfall, to preclude cuts in August and September, but so far no agreement has been reached.

If Congress doesn't provide relief, there may be a reduction of VHA payments in August and September, but officials say the new rates are not yet available.

Also, because VHA rates are based upon pay grade and geographic location, it isn't possible to make blanket statements about how large the cuts could be.

"We're still hoping that Congress will come through. We've already been able to postpone the cuts the 'Army Times' reported were coming this month, and we're hoping we can save VHA for August and September as well," said Mary Harden of the USAFAC public affairs office. "But the final determination will depend on Congress." (Arnews)
