Commander stresses quality, public's perception

Opening Redstone Arsenal roads to public use in order to relieve traffic congestion in the city and county is not compatible with MICOM's mission responsibilities, Maj. Gen. Gus Cianciolo said last week.

"I know it's not easy to appreciate my considerations when you're stuck in rush-hour traffic on the Parkway, but they are very real and very vital to Redstone Arsenal's secure, safe operation," the MICOM commander said in an address to corporate members of the Association of the United States Army.

He said the sensitive nature of MICOM programs, and the fact that Russians now make short-notice visits, combine to make public use of installation roads a "notion I can't entertain."

In the address to the AUSA group last Wednesday, and in a speech the previous day to the Society of Logistics Engineers, the MICOM commander discussed his new command, the relationship between the MICOM/industry team and public perceptions of that relationship.

He said the challenge the team faces today is to keep programs on schedule and within cost in the face of manpower and budget constraints "while continuing to provide soldiers with the kinds of high-quality, high-technology missile weaponry they must have to fight, survive and win on the modern battlefield."

"And let us resolve that quality will be our watchword," he added.

Cianciolo said too that the conversion to the matrix concept and establishment of program executive officers has put in place a system of management that neatly complements today's MICOM/industry team effort.

He commended the team's success in discharging its major role in the rearmament of America by buying and fielding "tens of billions of dollars in new weaponry that includes some remarkably effective force multipliers that enable our relatively small Army to be so very good."

At the same time, he pointed out, a multi-million dollar program has been executed to replenish the repair parts pipeline that will sustain soldiers overseas in the event of war.

These accomplishments were carried out while pushing competitive purchasing, multi-year contracting and small business involvement to record-high levels, he noted.

"MICOM traditionally has been and continues to be an outfit that does a lot of things really well," said Cianciolo. "That is one of many reasons I am honored and elated to have been chosen to lead it. Another is the strong, supportive and exceptionally productive alliance that exists between Army and industry."

Describing the MICOM/industry relationship as "one characterized above all by devotion to uprightness and responsibility," Cianciolo called for a standard of conduct that looks beyond issues of legal-

Annual service at Post Chapel rekindles memory of POW/MIAs

BY RUTH MECHAM

Soldiers quietly entered the Post Chapel last Friday morning for an annual service in memory of America's prisoners of war and those still missing in action.

They walked past a pew designated in memory of POWs and MIAs. A candle was at each end of the pew, and the official POW/MIA flag hung above while a U.S. flag lay in the center of the bench.

"This pew reminds us that even in the darkest of times the Light of God continues to shine," said Chaplain Russell Walker, chairman of the POW/MIA recognition committee. "The pew is cordoned-off to remind us that though they are missing, they continue to have worth and value and deserve the dignity of recognition."

Paul Miller, retired master sergeant and former Korean War POW, was the guest speaker. Miller spent more than 1,000 days as a prisoner of war. He spoke of the trials and tribulations he and other men suffered as a result of their capture. Tears filled his eyes as he spoke of never losing his faith in God and country.

He went on to say we must not forget those still missing and we must continue and strive to secure their freedom whether they are still alive or not. He concluded by encouraging all young soldiers to know their code of conduct. And should they have the same misfortune, he said, they should always remember who they are and that their suffering is securing freedom for our nation.

"By all means," Miller said, "always remember the flag and that it stands for our blessed freedom."

Housing allowance

Defense secretary takes steps to offset VHA cut

WASHINGTON— Secretary of Defense Frank C. Carlucci has approved a plan to offset a one-time cut in the variable housing allowance in September, according to officials in the office of the assistant secretary of defense for force management and personnel.

Rates will be reduced for the last two weeks of September to keep fiscal 1988 VHA spending within limits set by Congress. At the same time, if FY 89 appropriations are available, servicemembers will be advanced the exact amount of the reduction from the FY 89 fund, so that the actual effect is one of no change at all in any servicemember's net pay due.

Reductions will be made by pay grade and dependency status, not by location, officials say, but in no case will the reduction be greater than the amount of VHA to which a servicemember is entitled for the last two weeks of September. Reductions will be in the range from $28 for an E-5 to $80 for an O-4.

The situation arose from several factors. Congress set a ceiling of $1.115 billion on VHA for this fiscal year, and rates were reduced in January to meet that ceiling. However, changes in the number of servicemembers drawing VHA and their locations, will cause spending to exceed the ceiling by $27 million unless the rates are reduced in September.

The Defense Department is still working with Congress to get relief from the VHA ceiling, and officials are hopeful that a solution will be found. Carlucci has sent letters to key members of Congress asking for help to resolve the VHA issue.

If Congress doesn't act to relieve the VHA shortfall, servicemembers will have to pay back the advance—but that won't begin before next January.

Officials say January was chosen to begin the payback for two reasons: it gives the Defense Department four months to work with Congress, and the expected 4.1 percent pay raise will offset the reduction in VHA. The pay raise, if it stands, takes effect on Jan. 1.

Officials stress that this is a one-time only reduction, and that DOD is modifying its procedures for projecting the cost of VHA so that future funding requests will be based on the best available data. (Arnews)

Thanks, chaperons

Editor:

Again, as in past years, the soldiers of Redstone Arsenal did an outstanding job of chaperoning our special children at the Fair (on Sept. 7).

Thank you for making this day a happy one for them. We appreciate you all, and a special thanks to MSgt. Jimmy L. Brown, C Company, 73rd Ordnance Battalion, PAC, for taking such good care of our son, Shane.

Military life

Editor:

I am responding to an article in The Huntsville Times, Wednesday, Sept. 7. The article written by Rick Davis, "Coach happy to be home in USA," maligns the military life, the school programs, the American families, and German society. Davis' source is David Sutton, former coach of Heidelberg High's defensive line, now assistant at Hazel Green High School.

My father was stationed in Schwabisch Gmuend from June 1984 to June 1987. I attended Stuttgart American High School— same size as Heidelberg High —for three years and graduated from there. I had participated in a varsity sport for two of those three years. I represent everything that this article made a mockery of.

I was appalled by the article, the reporter, and David Sutton. If you have ever lived in West Germany, the picture Sutton conjured up would enflame you and leave you feeling empty.

First, Sutton states that military dependents have been treated differently "depending in part on what their parents' rank is." He uses the argument that if the colonel wanted his son to be quarterback, he was given the position. Sutton, may I inform you that DODDS (Department of Defense Dependents Schools) schools are government funded. No private nor colonel has a say on who is to get a position. This may shock Sutton, but everyone tries out for the team; and can you believe, some kids do not make the team. Any DODDS coach has the ability to choose his own players without any military interference.

Second of all, Sutton complains that the high school football season was too short, only eight to 10 games.

That, Sutton, is the sacrifice we military kids have to endure while our fathers and/or mothers are protecting America. Who cares if you do not get to play 20 games, at least there was a football team. There were no school-oriented baseball teams. Yes, America's great pastime was not played competitively between the DODDS schools. Yet, can you believe military families have been able to stand solid to such a crushing blow. Be thankful for what is supplied.

Then Sutton begins to question the German standards of life to that of America. As a teacher, isn't one always to be open-minded to a new environment, Sutton? It is true that in Europe nightclubs do not enforce the drinking age. Yet, America is having tremendous difficulties with alcohol and teen-agers. Having observed both environments as a teen-ager, I have witnessed much more abuse of drugs and alcohol here in the United States than in West Germany.

The issue of sex is more public in Europe because the people are more open-minded. It is America which is the leading nation with more teen-age pregnancies, not West Germany. Schools in America are still debating on whether or not to discuss the issue of AIDS. In Germany, schools have already had forums and classes two years ago about AIDS. America as a society must start taking a more in-depth look at these problems. It is the close mindedness of men such as Sutton that continually stagnates the American society.

Finally, Sutton remarked that by putting American kids in that "kind of loose atmosphere" that the game of football is not the same. He declares, "Football is a game that requires dedication and discipline, and it's very hard to get that out of the kids..." Apparently Sutton was not aware of the student who has to wake up at 5:30 in the morning to catch a bus to school that leaves at 6. The athlete arrives at home 14 hours later at 8 that evening. That is 14 hours of busing, school, and practice. This does not include homework or any games. I wonder if Sutton ever stayed in a DODDS locker room and watched the kids, the true athletes, cry because they could not give their school a victory. Or if he ever had a player, a student, a military dependent, lying in a hospital bed from a bad tackle not knowing if the kid would walk again— all just because what the kid wanted to do was to play his heart out for eight games. Well, if that isn't dedication or discipline I hope David Sutton or Rick Davis could tell me what is.

There is a lot to say about military life, good and bad. Davis' article was an injustice to all those who have lived and are living overseas. Sutton's comments not only reflected his ignorance about military life, DODDS programs, and German society but the true meaning of the word dedication eludes him. A southern football coach— that's a first.

OMB's good and neutral name by eliminating many of the agency's politically-appointed posts and replacing them with civil service staff.

OMB and its predecessors once had a reputation as more of a budget cruncher than manager, but over the last two decades the agency's role has expanded to the point where many believe it essentially has veto power over other agency budgets.

"The price for having OMB so politically sensitive is that it and the president lose credibility," concluded an NAPA panel headed up by former Comptroller General Elmer Staats. He also sits on the National Commission on Public Service, or "Volcker Commission," as it has come to be called.

The good news is AFGE won a firefighters suit. Firefighters were being charged too much annual leave over the years due to their hours of work and the national policy. Therefore, each employee will get anywhere from $4,000 to $9,000 as a result of our suit. I am proud to be a part of AFGE.

Kind support

Editor:

I would like to take this opportunity to thank all my friends in the AUAV Project Office and in various other organizations for their kindness and generosity during the recent loss of my home. Everyone has been so helpful.

I would especially like to thank Larry Myres, Sherry Foley, Sue Parker and Peggy Laymon for all their extra efforts and support. I really don't know what I would have done without their understanding and help.

Thanks again for being there when I needed you. You are all so very special to me and my family. May God bless each and every one of you.

Insurance rates

Editor:

The health insurance rates will be increased an average of 26 percent for all federal workers and 41 percent for federal retirees, beginning January 1989. That is an average of $73 a month for federal employees and $108 per month for retirees. In 1988 we had an average of 31 percent. So, I say enough is enough.

I have a petition asking Senator Heflin, Senator Shelby and Congressman Flipppo to investigate all insurance companies. If you want to help out, come by the AFGE office and pick up a petition. We need to flood our Congressional people with about 8,000 names— everyone can sign a petition.

Post NCO, soldier of the year receive gifts from local community

BY RUTH MECHAM

Redstone's NCO of the year and soldier of the year were honored last week at a luncheon held at the NCO Club.

During the luncheon, SSgt. Paul Whitten and Spec. Shannon Tennant were presented with a host of gifts from local businesses and various clubs on the arsenal.

A color guard, provided by the I Company, 19th Alabama, 5th Infantry Regiment, officially began the ceremony in honor of the two soldiers.

Approximately 470 guests were in attendance, both military and local leaders in the community, to enjoy the noon meal and entertainment which was provided by the Whitesburg Baptist Church Brass Ensemble and the Soldiers' Chorus.

During the ceremony Huntsville Mayor Joe Davis was presented with a memento in thanks for his support to the arsenal. Upon accepting the medallion, he commented on what a good relationship the city of Huntsville and Redstone Arsenal enjoy.

Also honored during the ceremony were 31 local businesses and civic organizations which sponsor the soldier and NCO of the year program.

"We wanted to recognize the sponsors for what they have done," said CSM Billy Prysock, post command sergeant major. "The sponsors provide the grassroots and bond the arsenal to the city of Huntsville."

He went on to say the competition for the honors was extremely keen within the units on the installation and that today's soldiers meet the challenge of the selection board.

"I'm very proud of the soldiers, but more importantly I think they should be proud of themselves," Prysock said.

Tennant, 22, a native of Claremore, Okla., is a Whitten is an operating room specialist at Fox Army Community Hospital. A 29-year-old native of San Diego, he is the son of Paul Whitten of San Diego and Katsina Gibson of Neptune, Fla. Whitten and his wife, Lori, have one son, Sean.

"The ceremony is a nice way of showing our appreciation to both the soldiers honored and to those who have made contributions in support of the program," said Prysock. "Perhaps General Omar Bradley expressed it best when he said, 'Battles are won by the infantry, the armor, the artillery, and air teams, by soldiers living in the rains and huddling in the snow; but wars are won by the great strength of a nation—the soldier and the civilian working together.'"

Commentary

Work on U.S. Constitution didn't end in 1787

Editor's note: Sept. 17-24 is recognized as Constitution Week. The following commentary is printed courtesy of Dr. Joan R. Challinor, research associate, National Museum of American History, Smithsonian Institution.

We had no Constitution on Sept. 18, 1787—a document was all we possessed. And this document was as dry as the parchment on which it was written. What was needed to give it life was the people's assent—their imprimatur. The convention having concluded its work, the new untried, as yet unknown Constitution was, on Sept. 18th, presented to the country for ratification by special ratifying conventions. This was to be no easy task, but it was to be the greatest democratic exercise of our country's founding. The ratifying conventions, as historian Linda Kerber pointed out, were far more democratic than the state legislatures and far more democratic than the Convention itself, most of whose delegates would have qualified for the "gentry" class.

We do a grave disservice to our country if we overlook the ratification process and declare the Constitution a reality in September 1787. Some people, surfeited by the Statue of Liberty celebration and the observance of the bicentennial of the framing of the Constitution, may think we are on historical "overload" and suggest that we not commemorate the bicentennial of the ratification debates. I beg to differ: I welcome the opportunity to explore the deep and searching discussions of political science which followed the signing of the Constitution in Philadelphia. These debates which followed the presentation of a new Constitution to the American public were the most penetrating and widespread since those of the English Civil War in the 1640's.

Compared to the debates during the English Civil War and during the French Revolution to come, however, the Federalist - Anti-Federalist debates were mannerly, polite, and managed within the existing political structures. The arguments took place both in the ratifying conventions and in the newspapers. The most famous writings in favor of the Constitution appeared under the pseudonym, "Publius," and are now known as The Federalist Papers, yet there were many Anti-Federalist articles embracing positions against the Constitution which were both trenchant and pointed.

During the debates, no blood was shed, no guillotine erected, no armies clashed on a battlefield. Yet the differences between the Federalists and the Anti-Federalists were real and the engagement hard fought. The importance of the encounter gives substance to the words of John Quincy Adams: The American Revolution, he wrote, "was a work of thirteen years... The Declaration of Independence and the Constitution of the United States are part of one consistent whole, founded upon one and the same theory of government." If we count 13 years from 1776, we arrive at 1789, when our new government was fully established, not 1787, when the Constitution was written.

As the country turns its attention to the aftermath of the Constitutional Convention—the ratification process—my hope is that Americans will once again listen attentively to both sides of the argument. We should try to understand both the Federalist and the Anti-Federalist view. This historical balance is one of the great advantages which can accrue from historical celebrations.

At the time of victory, the winners trumpet their advantage; the losers' views are lost in the hurrahs. Shortly after a war or a great political upheaval, there is little time and less inclination for a calm, judicious evaluation of the event. For the winner, all roads lead to victory and paths not taken—discarded options, opportunities missed—are firmly put aside. Hopefully, over centuries, passions can cool; discussions can produce more light than heat; a balance between opposing views, impossible at the time of the event, can be restored, and time can do its healing work. The "losers" have their chance to be heard with attention and with scholarly regard. The "winners" can admit to failings and errors of judgment which in the heat of the event were never brought to light.

To respect and pay attention to the arguments put forward by the Anti-Federalists is not always easy. We know the outcome from our vantage point, 200 years after the event. We know that the Constitution fashioned in Philadelphia has endured, that it has been and is durable yet resilient, energetic yet restrained. But if we think ourselves back into the year 1788 when the battle of ratification was waged, we know nothing of the future. We know only that a convention established "for the sole and express purpose of revising the Articles of Confederation" and delivered to the people for their acceptance or rejection a radically new Constitution, establishing a greatly strengthened central government with revolutionary principles untried in the United States: separation of powers, checks and balances, and federalism.

It was in the end a very close call for ratification, and those who warned, hesitated, and cautioned were men of stature, of experience, and of substance: Patrick Henry, George Mason, Elbridge Gerry, George Clinton, and others. These men were not cowardly, they were not nay-sayers; theirs was not a constricted view which prevented them from seeing the value of the proposed Constitution. Patrick Henry thundered in the Virginia debates, "Who authorizes gentlemen to speak the language of We, the people, instead of We, the states?... The people gave them no power to use their name." To the Anti-Federalists, the states and the powers vested in them were of overriding importance. In the end, when the arguments were fully understood, theirs proved to be the weaker position. Further, because they were politically fragmented, were unable to put forward a single coherent view, were lacking the organization of the Federalists, and presented arguments which were less persuasive, they lost the battle against ratification of the new Constitution.

But the Anti-Federalists fought for aspects of government which we still hold dear today: states' rights, identification with localities, and a very healthy fear of unrestrained power in the national government. Ultimately it was the warnings, their hesitations, and their unwillingness to vote an unambiguous "yes" for the Constitution which produced our Bill of Rights. Although the Bill of Rights, as we know it today, turned more on the individuals' rights than on the states' rights as the Anti-Federalists wished, it was their insistence that forced Madison to author and push through our Bill of Rights. To the Anti-Federalists we owe the enumeration of our basic rights without which, I think we today would all admit, our Constitution and our lives would be very much the poorer. In the end they forced the Bill of Rights on unreceptive Federalists—on towering figures like James Madison and James Wilson. A Bill of Rights was unnecessary, the Federalists claimed, because the Constitution gave the central government only delegated powers and left all other powers to the states. Why not then, asked Patrick Henry, make these rights specific—"would it," he asked, "have taken too much paper?"

The Federalists may have given us the Constitution, but the Anti-Federalists gave us our Bill of Rights. Both sides deserve our attention and our gratitude. I hope that throughout this bicentennial of ratification, discussions will clarify the position of the Anti-Federalists for millions of citizens and create a new respect for the value of opposition. Certainly George Washington—well understood the importance of his Anti-Federalist adversaries. He wrote: "Upon the whole, I doubt whether the opposition to the Constitution will not ultimately be productive of more good than evil; it has called forth, in its defence, abilities which would not perhaps have been otherwise exerted, that have thrown new light upon the science of Government, they have given the rights of man a full and fair discussion, and explained them in so clear and forcible a manner as cannot fail to make a lasting impression..."

Respect for opposition is as important now as it was in 1788. If we give full attention to the great ratification debates, we will undoubtedly sharpen our own skills in political science. It is a happy coincidence that 1988 is also an election year. We need our political skills not only to choose worthy candidates, but to hold the nominees to the highest standards of character, devotion to duty, love of country, and statesmanship. We are called upon to do this by the very form of government the Founders gave us—a republic.

Asked by a citizen what kind of government the Convention had proposed for the country, Franklin replied, "A republic—if you can keep it." His reply should give us pause, because Franklin was speaking metaphorically to us in 1988 as well as to the United States in 1788. To paraphrase Marshall McLuhan, we are not passengers on this voyage of the United States republic, we are the crew. You and I. On Dec. 7, 1787, when Delaware's delegates ratified the Constitution, they stated that they did so "fully, freely & entirely." As members of the crew we must, in the same spirit as Delaware's delegates, enter into and understand the ratification debates of 1788 and the political debates of 1988 (no matter from which side), and thereby be worthy of the republic we inherited. From those to whom much is given, much is expected.

1988 provides us all with the opportunity to affirm and assent to what was done on our behalf in 1788. We cannot go back 200 years and sit in the ratifying conventions ourselves, but we can ally ourselves with what was done for us. We can cast our "aye" for the Constitution of 1787 and for the Constitution of 1988. I suggest there is no more important task and none more worthy of the great bicentennial in which we have been fortunate to participate than for us to hold, cherish, understand, and, in Franklin's phrase, to "keep" the great republic of the United States.

Workers in this branch rewarded for saving sick leave

BY SKIP VAUGHN

A branch at the Missile Logistics Center recognizes its workers for staying healthy.

The supply publications branch has started a monthly competition in which its four sections try to see who can use the least amount of sick leave. The winning section gets its office symbol put on a plaque that will hang outside the section for that particular month.

"It's just to promote a little competition among the sections on use of sick leave," said Roy Hewlett, chief of the 39-member branch in the technical publications division of Maintenance Engineering Directorate.

"Sick leave usage has been really good for the last few months. This is a way of expressing thanks and appreciation for the way they've been conserving sick leave."

The branch compiles a monthly sick leave summary report. Each section's sick leave total is divided by the number of people in that section. The section with the lowest average use per person wins.

Wendell Morgan, chief of the short-range land combat section, asked the publications illustration branch to design a plaque for the competition and illustrator John Norris did one. "We put (on the plaque) the office symbol and the average hours of usage in the month that they won it, and then we're going to hang the plaque outside that section's doorway for the month," Morgan said.

In July, the short-range land combat and high-altitude air defense sections tied for top honors with an average of 1.2 hours of sick leave use per person. The short-range land combat section won in August with zero use.

"I think it's been a pretty good response in my section," Morgan said. "We tied in July and won it in August, and they're pretty enthusiastic about it."

"A positive attitude in one area has a tendency to carry over to others," added Hewlett, the supply publications branch chief. Besides the short-range land combat section and the high-altitude air defense section, the other sections in the branch include long-range land combat and low-altitude air defense.

Hewlett knows firsthand the value of conserving sick leave. "It's important, to begin with, for emergencies," he said. "I've had surgery twice and it's good to know your paycheck comes right along. It helps on retirement. It's certainly good to fall back on when you have to have it, I know that."

AIDS policy remains same for DoD personnel shipping out

American Forces Information Service

A DoD task force established to look at whether there should be a policy of mandatory AIDS screening for DoD-sponsored personnel prior to overseas duty has been unable to reach consensus. Therefore, Assistant Secretary of Defense for Force Management and Personnel Grant S. Green Jr. issued a memorandum stating that DoD will continue its current policy: "Mandatory HIV screening of DoD-sponsored civilian personnel should be limited to those situations where it is requested by a host nation in connection with DoD employees performing official duties in an overseas location."

The policy applies only to DoD civilians. Contractors are responsible for their employees.

Oklahoma Sooners should outlast Southern Cal

BY SKIP VAUGHN

Two titans will clash when Oklahoma travels to Southern California this weekend.

Both teams are 2-0. The Oklahoma Sooners have beaten North Carolina and Arizona while the Southern Cal Trojans whipped Boston College and Stanford.

The Sooners have a high-powered offense led by quarterback Jamelle Holieway, and a stingy defense. USC matches them with an offense led by quarterback Rodney Peete, and a tough defensive unit.

It won't be easy but the Sooners would be favored against some pro teams. The pick here is...Oklahoma.

Last week's predictions resulted in a 22-7 record, bringing the season totals to 66-22 for 75 percent. Here are Skip's Picks for selected games this weekend in major college football:

- Oklahoma at Southern Cal— Okla. by 7.
- Tennessee at Auburn— Auburn by 10.
- Vanderbilt at Alabama— Bama by 6.
- Miss. State at Florida— Fla. by 13.
- Georgia at South Carolina— Ga. by 4.
- Kent State at Kentucky— Ky. by 21.

- Boston College at TCU— BC by 7.
- Cincinnati at Miami (Ohio)— Cincy by 6.

SEE WHAT'S UP AT HOME.

AT&T Public Phones make it easy to stay close.

Being on base may put you far away from home, but take comfort. With the AT&T Public Phones here on base, staying in touch is easy...

just dial "0" plus the area code and phone number, wait for the tone and

- if using your AT&T Card—enter your AT&T Card number;
- if calling collect or third party—an AT&T Operator will come on line to help you;

...and in moments, you'll be connected to the voices you're longing to hear. And you'll sound as close as you feel.

You'll be surprised, too, at how reasonable the pricing is. Let's say, for example, that you want to brighten a Saturday afternoon with a call to the family. If you dial direct using your AT&T Card you could call coast to coast, talk for 20 minutes, and it won't cost you more than $3.65. That's only $3.65 to spend 20 minutes back home, visiting the special someones who mean so much to you.

Think about it. It's quick and easy. It's economical. It's the next best thing to being there. So call the family and your old pals.

And see what's up at home.

Chorus for soldiers performs at various functions here

BY RUTH MECHAM

Soldiers can share their singing talents and represent Redstone as members of a newly-formed Soldiers' Chorus.

The group, consisting of three men and three women soldiers, is sponsored by the Staff Chaplain's office and is under the direction of Dr. Delbert Bailey.

The chorus will sing patriotic, sacred and seasonal music at various functions on and around Redstone Arsenal, according to Chaplain Billy Whiteside.

"It's not a Chaplain's Choir; it is a Soldiers' Chorus which I would like to see represent Redstone Arsenal," Whiteside said. "I'm very proud of everything that goes on the arsenal and I'm especially proud of our young soldiers. I can't think of a better way of showing off our young soldiers than to have them present a professional performance."

PFC Jerry Holden, a member of the chorus, has been singing 'nonprofessionally' for the past 22 years. "I have been singing in church choirs for a total of 10 years," said Holden.

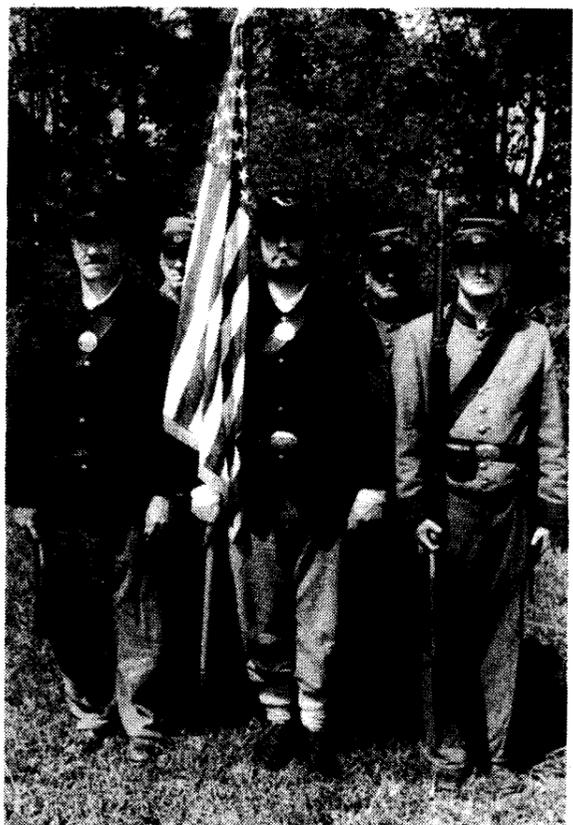

He said the chorus adds a lot to being in the military and provided a different prospective to the military. "It can certainly enhance a person's spiritual life," Holden said.

Holden is on temporary assignment and recently graduated from the Ordnance Missile and Munitions Center and School. He was given the temporary assignment in the chapel pending the birth of his first child.

"I joined the Soldiers' Chorus in order to enjoy a common interest with other soldiers and to share my faith with others," he said. "I feel it is important for soldiers to be willing to participate in these types of programs. I also think it is important for the companies to support and participate with programs like this; it builds esprit de corps."

"We would like to expand our group to include members of all companies: both permanent party and students on temporary duty at the school."

For more information regarding the chorus, call the Staff Chaplain's office, 876-2409/2337.

ARMY SAFETY. FOR A GREAT WAY OF LIFE.

Local anglers bring home winnings from championship

BY SKIP VAUGHN

Two North Alabama anglers made some prize catches at the Military Bass Anglers Association's national championship Sept. 5-10 at Kerr Lake in Henderson, N.C.

Sgt. Stephen McConnell was named MBAA rookie of the year, finished ninth in the tournament, and made the All-Army service bass team. T.C. Nettles made the All-Army bass team, placed 12th in the tournament, and led a team to third place in the team competition.

"We've got between 15 and 20 title holders in the North Alabama club since 1984," said Don Larimore, director of North Alabama MBAA.

"They really did a good job representing North Alabama this year, too."

There were 367 participants representing 46 states in the national tournament. Eleven were from North Alabama.

McConnell, a member of A Company, 73rd Ordnance Battalion, caught 16 pounds, 9 ounces of fish during the three days of competition. Nettles, a retired Army master sergeant, was only 9 ounces behind. "The tournament was a very, very tough close competition caused mostly by very unstable weather conditions most of the week," Nettles said.

"The first two days were great as far as fishingwise," McConnell said, "and the last day was a 'bluebird sky' and it was just tough fishing conditions." He explained that this means the final day had a completely blue sky with no cloud cover, conditions which are bad for fishing. Such conditions tend to make clear water fish go very deep and turn off, Nettles added.

McConnell and Nettles were among the top 25 anglers after the first two days of competition. This was considered an honor because the top 25 had the opportunity to fish the final day on brand new, fully-rigged Ranger boats. They were also paraded to the weigh-in site at the conclusion of the tournament.

"It was a well-run tournament with a minimum amount of problems and maximum amount of sportsmanship," Nettles said. He teamed with fellow North Alabama anglers Mike Adams, Morris Sheehan and PRIZE CATCHES— Nettles and McConnell show plaques they won at the military bass anglers' national championship.

Mark Beutijer in winning the third place team prize. Prize money was awarded to individuals and teams. Nettles took home $940 and McConnell won $930. Others from North Alabama who finished in the money included Sheehan in 42nd place, Gary Woods in 45th and John Thomas in 49th place.

The entire North Alabama squad included Nettles, McConnell, Sheehan, Woods, Thomas, Adams, Beutijer, John Brannen, Ray Beverly, Chuck Eberle and Joe Powell.

"I had a pleasure fishing with everybody," McConnell said. "I'd like to thank all my partners that I had, because I went no-boat. And they were friendly and courteous."

"The people from North Alabama represented us extremely well and did a good job like I expected them to," said Larimore, the North Alabama director. "It's a pleasure to be associated with the North Alabama club. And I think we've got the best of all and our past record shows for itself. I'd like to thank everybody for their support and participation over the last year in the club, and I'm looking forward to their support this year."

The North Alabama MBAA meets at 7 tonight (Sept. 21) at the NCO Club to start planning a new season. For more information, call Larimore at 876-4138.

ty to also take into account the seemliness of every action.

He expressed concern about recent news stories "alleging criminal wrongdoing in the way my command and its contractors conduct business."

"As the investigations and attendant news coverage run their course," he said, "some good people may well find their good names taking a beating" because they acted without looking beyond the 'legal' question and did not pause to consider the simple corollary question of how the action "looks" and "smells" from a layman's perspective.

"Unfortunately," he remarked, "we sometimes do perfectly legal things in our business that do not play well in Peoria simply because we didn't apply an easy test before we acted, and that test is, simply, "How does this look...and how does it smell?"

"When we do right we very seldom even get asked why we did what we did. And we for sure never have any trouble explaining why," he concluded.

We're closing in on a killer.

Survey shows most service members educated on AIDS

EVELYN D. HARRIS
American Forces Information Service

Most military people know that AIDS is transmitted by having sexual relations or sharing needles with someone infected with HIV. Most of them also know that using condoms can help prevent AIDS. But one-fourth mistakenly believe you can get it by eating in the same dining facility with someone who has the disease.

Those are the preliminary findings from DoD's 1988 Worldwide Survey of Substance Abuse and Health Behaviors Among Military Personnel. According to Air Force Lt. Col. Michael Peterson, senior policy analyst for preventive medicine and health promotion in DoD's Office of Health Affairs, DoD has not yet compared its survey to data from a similar civilian survey conducted this year. This means members' knowledge of the subject cannot be compared with that of the general public yet.

He also speculated that some of the questions may not have been worded as clearly as possible, leading to some "wrong" answers. But on the whole, the survey results show that "people seem to have learned the most important points we've been stressing on how to prevent AIDS," Peterson said.

According to the survey, most military members know the HIV virus (which causes AIDS) is transmitted by sharing needles with an infected person — (96.4 percent). They also know it is transmitted by sexual contact with infected persons (96.8 percent); that latex condoms (77.1 percent) and sexual abstinence (91.8 percent) can help prevent transmission. In addition, they know that monogamous sex (having sexual relations with only one person) can help prevent transmission (87.3 percent).

As for misconceptions, 25.7 percent thought sharing a dining facility with an AIDS patient could transmit AIDS— 27.9 percent of enlisted members and 12.4 percent of officers. Also, 19.9 percent believed AIDS could be transmitted by giving blood (22.3 percent of enlisted members and 5.4 percent of officers). But only 9.5 percent thought AIDS could be transmitted by working near an infected person— 10.7 percent of enlisted members and 3.2 percent of officers.

Defense Department recruits nurses for Reserve duty

American Forces Information Service

The response to a recent letter sent by Assistant Secretary of Defense (Health Affairs) William E. Mayer to recruit nurses for Reserve duty has been excellent.

As of July 1, 5,410 nurses, or more than 5 percent of the 106,333 who received the letter, had indicated an interest in joining the Reserve forces, according to Army Maj. Donna Owen, deputy director for Reserve affairs in the health affairs office.

"According to marketing specialists, a response rate of .7 to 1 percent is considered average, while 2 percent is excellent," she said. Mayer's letter outlined benefits of joining the Reserve force as a nurse, such as training, travel and "the opportunity to work in some of the best hospitals in the world." The letter was sent to nurses specializing in critical care and emergency and operating room nursing and to nurse anesthetists.

Depending on several variables, it can take anywhere from a month to a year for the nurse to become part of the Reserve force, although the average time will be four to eight months.

DoD is actively recruiting nurses for all branches of the Guard and Reserve. Some nurses recruited for the Individual Ready Reserve may fill vacant active duty positions for as long as a year, but the prime purpose of the Reserve recruitment program is to address DoD's wartime shortage of Reserve nurses—31,000. The Reserves will supply most of the nurses in the event of mobilization.

DoD is not alone in suffering a shortage: A panel appointed by Secretary of Health and Human Services Otis R. Bowen called the problem "real, widespread and of significant magnitude." Nationwide, hospitals are short 117,000 nurses, while nursing homes have 21,000 vacant jobs for registered nurses. Experts attribute the nursing shortage as much to increased demand for trained nurses as to decreases in the number of new nurses.

THE X-30 IS KID STUFF.

To soar with ease on swift, strong wings—farther, higher and faster than ever before. For a kid, that's the stuff dreams are made of.

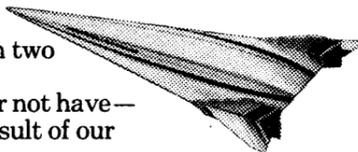

Kid stuff, because it's your kids, and ours, who will benefit most from the advances in computational fluid dynamics required to build the X-30 National AeroSpace Plane (NASP).

With supercomputers, we're simulating the effects of air pressure, speed and heat on proposed X-30 airframes. This wind-tunnel-in-a-computer technology allows us to test-fly numerous airfoil shapes and configurations—rapidly, and without building models.

The X-30 is kid stuff, because it is our children who will move from Earth to space and back at far less cost than we do today. And one day fly from Los Angeles to Tokyo in two hours aboard an Orient Express.

And it is they who will have—or not have—world leadership in aerospace as a result of our nation's resolve now.

Let's not let them down.

"I liked the rain," said Yancura, 35. "It cooled it off."
