Energy week a time to conserve

Electrical appliances pegged as MICOM's biggest consumption problem

BY PAM ROGERS

Don't touch that light switch! That is, don't touch it until you've decided whether or not you really need to have the lights on. Next week is Energy Awareness Week—a time for all of us to think about the ways we use energy at work and try to save what we can.

Kevin Meyer, the acting manager of the Missile Command's Energy Conservation Program, has come up with some interesting estimates on what particular types of energy consumption cost.

"Our biggest problem is electrical use— electrical appliances. It's surprising how much a coffee pot uses," he said. Meyer estimates that, to meet the needs of all coffee drinkers on post (his figure is one out of three people), office coffee pots should not cost more than $3,750 per year. The actual cost, he said, is probably closer to $60,000 per year, because people leave coffee pots on all day.

The way to streamline coffee pot use, Meyer says, is to operate them during peak coffee-drinking hours, then turn them off.

Radios are another big energy user. Meyer estimates that personal radios played in the work place cost the government about $18,000 per year.

"If we had a music system to supply everybody, the cost would be about $2,500," he said.

Another area of energy use which workers have control over is office equipment.

"The automation trend is giving a rise in what's dedicated to facility costs," Meyer said. Facility costs include heating, cooling and electrical consumption for office equipment operation.

He has several suggestions for reducing the costs of running an office, including shutting off copiers at lunchtime, using dot-matrix printers instead of letter-quality printers whenever possible, and replacing overhead lighting with "task lighting," either through lights incorporated into modular workspaces or by the use of desk lamps.

Electrical use in the office environment may not be down as much as it could be, but in other areas, MICOM is a wise energy user.

"We're looking real good," Meyers said, indicating printouts which track energy consumption for both facility and process (rocket fuel production at the Morton-Thiokol facility) areas.

The facility energy use reduction goal for MICOM for this fiscal year as compared to FY 1985 was 2.4 percent; the actual reduction was 2.92 percent. The process energy use reduction goal was 10 percent. Actual reduction was 42.2 percent.

One reason energy savings are becoming apparent, according to Meyer, is because of the completion of (See Energy, cont'd on Page 2)

Family action symposium leads to quality of life plan

Delegates who participated in Redstone's first Family Action Symposium in August are invited to attend an update briefing next week to hear what has been done about issues raised.

Ramona Lindsey, project officer for the symposium, said a total of 141 issues have been incorporated to form Redstone's Family Action Plan. Copies of the plan will be passed out to attendees of the briefing.

According to Lindsey, 14 actions raised at the symposium have already been implemented, including moving the Family Member Employment Program from the Civilian Personnel Office to the Army Community Service building. Other implementations include a GED program for soldiers and family members at the Education Center and the addition of a family practice physician at Fox Army Community Hospital, with recruiting efforts going on to hire another.

Implementations under way include the installation of a traffic light with pedestrian signals at the intersection of Goss and Hughes roads, installation of pedestrian signals at the intersection of Goss Road and Vincent Drive, and the implementation of customer appointments for contractor work done in the family housing units.

Eight issues are the subjects of feasibility studies, including an idea for a one stop in- and out-processing center, and provisions for on- and off-post transportation.

"Twenty-five percent of the issues are having some kind of action taken, and 75 percent called for programs which are either already in place or in the process of being established, or for which resource constraints preclude implementation," Lindsey said.

"We have a big communication problem," she said, alluding to the fact that so many people asked for services which already exist.

"Soldiers are not telling their family members about these programs.

"We are providing quality support services for the total Army family, but a lot of the things people indicated they wanted are already in existence. They just didn't know it."

The update briefing will be held at the Recreation Center, building 3711, at 1 p.m. Oct. 27. Those who served as delegates for the Family Action Symposium are urged to attend. For more information call 876-4505.

Yorktown day '88

Editor's note: The following is an open letter from the secretary of the Army and the Army's chief of staff.

On October 19th, our nation will proudly celebrate the 207th anniversary of America's victory over British forces at Yorktown, Virginia. That triumph ensured that America's bold declaration of freedom, made five years earlier in 1776, would in fact become a reality. The United States Army, despite tremendous odds, defeated the greatest military power of its time. In so doing, our Army secured the blessings of liberty as well as the future of our country.

Our very existence as a nation resulted from the triumph achieved by our soldiers at Yorktown. We would not be celebrating the bicentennial of the ratification of our Constitution this year, if not for the sacrifices of those courageous patriots. The victory at Yorktown served as the bridge between the ideals expressed in the Declaration of Independence and the freedoms later realized in the United States Constitution. What a legacy of freedom and courage they left us!

Today, each of us is called upon to uphold the legacy of Yorktown wherever we serve. Through our training, our dedication to excellence and our professionalism, we too must be determined to keep America free. The commitment stands before us. The challenges lie ahead. Let us move forward with the same patriotic spirit of self-sacrifice and courage that carried the day at Yorktown more than two centuries ago.

Gen. E. Vuono, Army chief of staff; and, John O. Marsh Jr., secretary of the Army

A family's thanks

Editor:

This is an open letter of thanks to the many wonderful people at HHD, 73rd Ordnance Battalion, 269th Ordnance Brigade whose prayers, love, cards and contributions helped my family and me make it through a very traumatic experience. Our baby died at five and a half months of pregnancy which caused a great deal of depression on my family. But with the ability from God and your love, we were able to go on with our lives. There's no way I will ever be able to adequately express my gratitude to each and every one of you, so I will begin by saying may God bless each and every one of you and our prayers are with you also.

Gloria D. Dorsey

Bug problem

Editor:

I would like to bring to your attention a chronic roach and other vermin infestation in our government quarters. Obviously other units of our sixplex must be suffering the same problem. In addition to roaches we have observed wasp nests and termites.

We have repeatedly used several commercial pest control preparations without any luck.

Raising a 20-month-old child under these conditions is not only unhealthy but dangerous. The latter is true for the numerous children and all adults that live in these units.

Why can't post housing ensure the premises be regularly fumigated? Perhaps monthly treatments can remedy this problem.

The decision to live in post quarters is undoubtedly voluntary. Nevertheless it is common knowledge how long it takes to get a letter of non-availability in order to move out.

We ask that someone take a serious look at this problem. Please help us eliminate our unhealthy living conditions.

Here are a few names of people concerned:

CFC campaign starts slow

Collections for the first week of the area 1989 Combined Federal Campaign totaled $256,636 prior to processing by the MICOM computer.

The total is $9,022 less than the first week of last year's campaign with 523 fewer persons participating, according to Carol Ille, campaign coordinator. "The Columbus Day holiday may have adversely impacted both MICOM and outside agency collections," she said.

Missile Command reported $77,078 which was $14,165 less than the first week last year. However, both the Information Systems Command and the Missile and Space Intelligence Center did not report.

"We're expecting a real blockbuster of a second week," Ille said.

"People are donating more per person. Agencies that did get it together well enough to report are doing quite well."

An increase in the per-person gift from last year to this year from $65 to $73 was noted in the first report. Fourteen of the 29 area federal agencies reported with 3,523 persons participating.

The charity campaign began Oct. 3 and is scheduled to end Nov. 4.

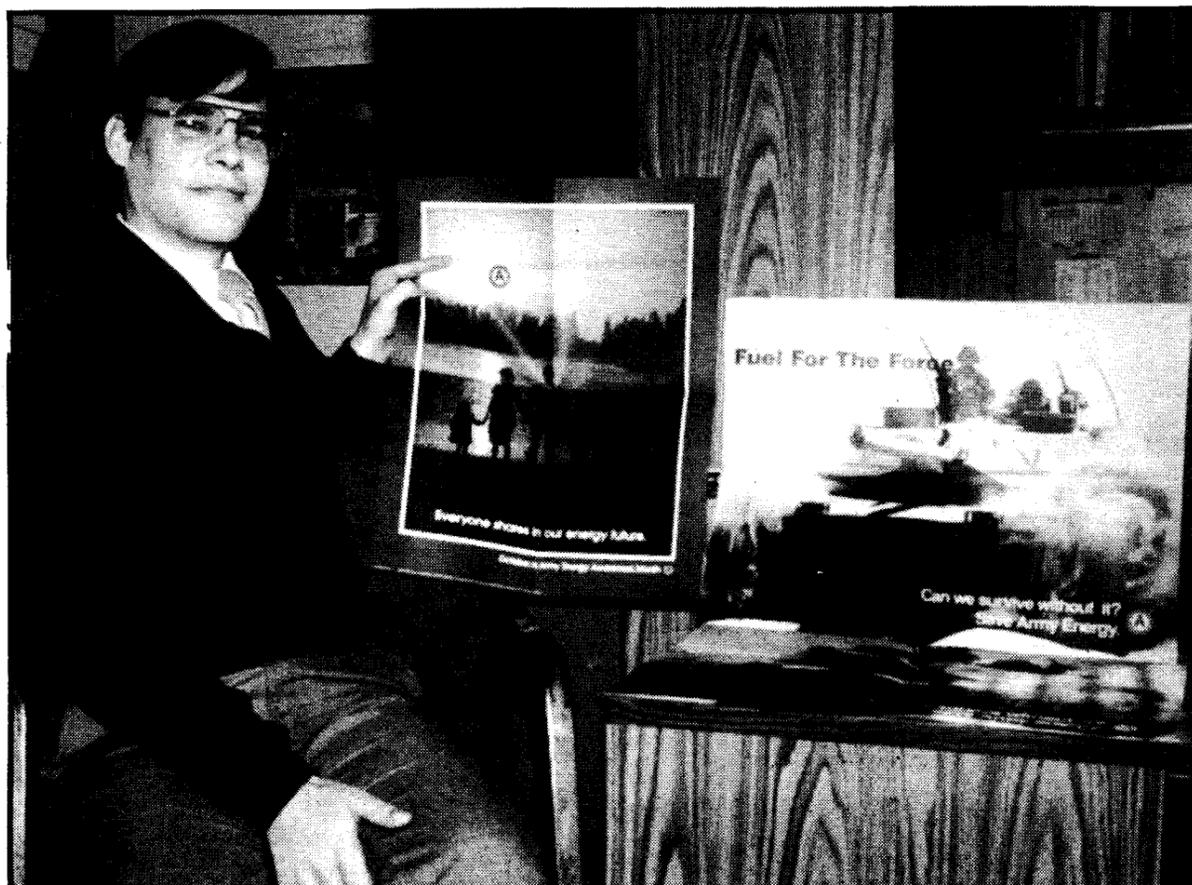

"The Difference is You," meaning that each contributor can make a difference, is the slogan for this year's Huntsville area campaign. The goal is $855,001.

Redstone is also participating in Huntsville's steam-from-garbage refuse plant. The city is leasing the land for the facility (now under construction) from the Army. The Army will, in turn, buy steam produced from the plant.

Health care for military families

Champus and supplemental insurance can help meet a family's needs

You're nearing the end of your Army career. In a year or two, you'll retire and begin a second career, or take some time off to do all those things that you've wanted but never had time to do. It's nice to know that Uncle Sam has all the bases covered as far as your health-care needs go from here on out. But wait—are you sure about that?

Whatever health care you've needed for the past 20 or 30 years has been on the government's tab. And many retiring soldiers believe that as part of their entitlement for a lifetime of service, the government will go on providing for their health-care needs. To a great extent, that is true. But keep some things in mind as you retire.

Service hospitals and troop medical clinics exist primarily for active duty troops, secondly for their dependent family members and the family members of deceased servicemembers, and lastly, for retired military folks and their families as resources permit. So even if your town has a military hospital, you are not absolutely guaranteed service there. You may have to use a civilian facility, and that's where Champus comes in.

Champus

Champus covers most of the cost for inpatient and outpatient care of retired military persons in civilian medical facilities through cost-sharing formulas. Retirees pay a deductible, in addition to 25 percent of Champus allowable charges, for outpatient services at civilian health-care facilities. Right now the cost to a retiree for inpatient hospital stay is $175 per day or 25 percent of billed charges, whichever is less. The retiree pays this cost, either out of pocket or with a supplemental insurance policy, and Champus pays the remainder, up to the allowable amount that Champus will pay. When the health care provider accepts this amount, it is called "accepting assignment." Hospitals are required to accept this allowable amount.

In October of 1987, Champus adopted the Diagnosis Related Group payment system for inpatient care. Each hospital stay is assigned a DRG based on the patient's principle diagnosis and procedures required. The DRG determines the allowable charge for that service. Champus will share the cost of the DRG rate, paying the difference between the patient's cost share and this predetermined amount.

Let's say you're in the hospital for 10 days and have surgery. Just for the sake of illustration, let's say the hospital bills $30,000 for your care. But say Champus only allows $10,000 for your specific diagnosis under the DRG system. Since hospitals must accept Champus assignment of payment, no matter how much that comes to, the cost to you is still $175 per day, so you would have to come up with $1,750, as that is less than 25 percent of the billed charges ($7,500).

Presently, professional service charges allowed by Champus don't follow the DRG system. Each professional that provides inpatient treatment will send you a bill for services rendered. Champus will pay 75 percent of the Champus allowable cost for each of these separately billed inpatient services.

Let's say that each of those specialists billed you for $1,000. That's an anesthesiologist, pathologist, radiologist, a surgeon, and your attending physician, all bills totaling $5,000. For these billed services, Champus pays 75 percent of the allowable charges. If we say that the allowable charges in your area for services rendered to you are $800 for the anesthesia, $700 for the lab work, $500 for X-rays, $900 for the surgeon, and $400 for the attending physician, the total allowable charge for professional services would be $3,300. Seventy-five percent of that amount is $2,475, which is what Champus will pay. Your cost share would be $825, 25 percent of the allowable charges.

Although hospitals must accept Champus assignment of DRG payments, individual practitioners aren't necessarily bound to accept Champus assignment. If the providers accept assignment, then you owe only your cost share—$825, 25 percent of the Champus allowable amount. If a provider doesn't accept assignment, then you are responsible for the difference between the billed amount and Champus assignment besides your cost share.

In this case, the amount left over after Champus assignment for professional services would be $2,525—$825 for your cost share and $1,700 for the difference between billed charges and Champus assignment. If none of your providers accept Champus assignment, you'd have to add that $2,525 to the charge for the hospital stay, and you'd wind up with a pretty hefty hunk of change. Whenever possible, check with each individual doctor to see if the Champus assignment is acceptable.

Supplemental insurance

A supplemental insurance policy pays your cost share in return for a premium. Some policies pay for your outpatient deductible and some pay the difference between what is billed by the provider and what is allowed by Champus. Read a prospective supplemental health insurance policy carefully, to determine if it will cover all of your cost share for inpatient, outpatient, and professional services.

Again, for the sake of illustration, let's say the hospital charge comes to $6,200 for 10 days, and the DRG allowable charge is $4,200, which Champus will pay. Then, the 25 percent of billed charges rule would apply, because 25 percent of $6,200 is $1,550, as opposed to the $1,750 for the daily rate. If you have a supplemental health insurance policy that covers 25 percent of the allowable charge rather than the billed charge, it's only going to pay the difference between 25 percent of the billed charges ($1,550), and 25 percent of the allowable charges. You pay $500! Read any supplemental health-care policy very carefully before you purchase it.

Generally speaking, the more benefits a policy offers you, such as whether it pays the Champus deductible, how large a percentage of billed costs it will pay, etc., the higher the premium will be. Be sure to read the fine print, and consider purchasing a supplemental health insurance policy about one year (depending on the policy) before retirement.

Why one year before retirement? Depending on the supplement, there usually is a 'pre-existing condition' clause that requires a certain amount of time to lapse (usually from six to 18 months) before the insurance will be effective for coverages of care for a condition that developed before the purchase of the policy. This protects the insurer from having to pay for care resulting from a condition that began before the policy's effective date. You will pay out of pocket for these conditions if you have no other coverage. If you purchase the supplemental policy before you leave the military, your active duty status will cover you while you satisfy the requirements of the new policy.

Insurance shopping

You are cared for as long as you are on active duty, of course, but the Champus beneficiaries in your family have a cost share for civilian medical care. There is a daily fee of $7.85, or $25 per admission, whichever is more, for civilian provider inpatient services to beneficiary family members. This cost share includes physician and the hospital charges, as long as the physician accepts assignment. For civilian provider outpatient services, a deductible of $50 a person, up to $100 a family per year and 20 percent of allowable charges must be paid by a source other than Champus for family beneficiaries. There is a small daily fee for inpatient care of family members at uniformed services hospitals, and no charge for outpatient services while the sponsor is on active duty.

When you're considering these costs against the cost of supplemental health insurance, remember the annual $1,000 cap on cost share to active duty families. Depending on the health of your family, your proximity and access to a uniformed services hospital, and how much you can afford to pay for health insurance, a supplemental policy may or may not be what you need right now.

When you are shopping for supplemental health insurance, remember to read the whole policy and to ask questions. If you don't understand something completely, don't buy the policy. Ask if you can take the policy to Brenda Cagle (phone 876-2960), the health benefits adviser at Fox Army Community Hospital. She may be able to give you some guidance on it. If the insurance company representative tries to pressure you into signing something before you completely understand what you're purchasing, the policy probably isn't what you're looking for. Cagle will be able to assist you, and provide more detailed information on Champus. Knowledge is power, but if you don't ask, you won't know.

Plan for your retirement with the confidence that no matter what is around the corner as far as your health needs go, you're covered. All those things you've been looking forward to will be sweeter for the security you'll enjoy with that confidence. (Editor's note: This news release was provided by the Health Services Command.)

Volksmarch here draws more than 900 walkers

BY RUTH MECHAM

More than 900 eager souls got up extra early last Saturday and headed for the starting line. Some had cameras, some had walking sticks; they were all ready for a day walking in the woods at the annual Redstone Stompers Volksmarch.

Participants chose a 10-kilometer (6.2 mile) or a 20-kilometer (12.4 mile) course. The course started and ended at the NCO Club with the NCO Wives Club selling refreshments at the halfway point.

"Even though a volksmarch is considered a walk we had some competition among the soldiers," said Joe Hopkins, chief of community recreation division.

"There were 12 units with five-men teams who ran the course and this is the third year in a row that the Marines have won the competition so this year we retired the trophy to them."

Col. Perry Butler, the deputy post commander, presented awards at 11 a.m. based on pre-registration.

Awards went to the following:

Running Teams— Marines number 1 team, time 50:34; D Company 832nd Ordnance Battalion, 53:50; Marines number 2 team, 55:15.

Oldest Walker— Erlene Span, an 80-year-old member of the Lewis County Volksmarch Club from Lewisburg, Tenn.

Largest Civilian Group— Grissom High School Reserve Officer Training Corps; and the Lewis County Volksmarch Club came in second.

Largest Military Group— 832nd Ordnance Battalion with the 73rd Ordnance Battalion following second.

Farthest Distance— Mary and Al Battles, from Thousand Oaks, Calif., traveled the farthest distance to participate.

Groups with 20 or more participants— A Company, 832nd Ordnance Battalion; Grissom High School ROTC; Lewis County Volksmarch Club; B Company, 832nd Ordnance Battalion; C Company, 832nd Ordnance Battalion; D Company 832nd Ordnance Battalion; and 73rd Ordnance Battalion.

RESTING — Soldiers assigned to the Ordnance Missile and Munitions Center and School rest after completing the volksmarch.

WALKING WITH MAN'S BEST FRIEND — Peqqv Frazier and her pet D.D. enjoy their morning walk in the hills on the arsenal.

MICOM finance officials close books on fiscal year

BY SKIP VAUGHN

Local Army activities have generally paid their contractors on time, according to fiscal year-end reports for FY 1988.

"On $98 million, we paid out $6,000 in interest. That's a pretty low percentage," said Myra Cox, an operating accountant at Finance and Accounting Division.

A report on payments made under the Prompt Payment Act was among the year-end reports certified here last week. Under the Prompt Payment Act, the Office of Management and Budget is required to gather information from all federal agencies on their payment performance under the Act.

"You have to pay the vendors in so many days," Cox explained.

The remainder of the documents signed last week by Maj. Gen. Gus Cianciolo, commander of the Missile Command and Redstone Arsenal, included MICOM installation reports. They indicate how much of the money received has been obligated, how much has not been obligated, and how much has been spent so far.

Appropriations or fund activities covered by the yearly reports include Army procurement appropriations, research and development, operations and maintenance, Army industrial fund, Army stock fund, and customer order control point (foreign military sales).

The Finance and Accounting Division doesn't just prepare year-end reports pertaining to the Missile Command. It also prepares reports for tenant activities and the Strategic Defense Command. The MICOM reports go from here to Army Materiel Command accounts offices in Pennsylvania where they are consolidated with other command reports before going to the Army Finance and Accounting Center.

Disbursements for MICOM during the fiscal year totaled $2.333 billion while obligations amounted to $2.279 billion.

"This year we had a much easier time" compiling the reports, said Cox. She attributed this to an improved computer system. The various sections of F&A division put the figures into the system each day, compile monthly reports, then put together year-end reports which must be certified by the commanding general. Before the general signs, the figures are verified by the various program managers; Lt. Col. Lawrence Massman, the finance officer; and Col. C. Graham Johnson, the director of resource management.

"It's a relief when they get these reports out," Cox said, referring to feelings of the F&A workers. "It's a tremendous effort to get them out on time."

West Virginia, Alabama among predicted winners

BY SKIP VAUGHN

West Virginia has quietly rolled to six wins and no losses while most of the national attention has been focused on powers like Notre-Dame and UCLA.

It's true their schedule hasn't been imposing—home games against Bowling Green, Fullerton State and Maryland, and road tests at Virginia Tech and East Carolina. But a win is a win and they did beat Pittsburgh 31-10 on the road.

The Mountaineers feature an explosive offense led by quarterback Major Harris. This week they face the Boston College Eagles who dropped to 2-4 with a home loss last week to Rutgers. Look for West Virginia to roll past BC in preparation for next week's visit by Penn State.

Speaking of Penn State, the Nittany Lions will have their hands full at Birmingham against Alabama. It won't be easy but Bama gets the nod here.

Last week's 27-6-1 record, on the heels of a 28-5-1 week, brought the season totals to 163-51-4 for 76 percent. Here are Skip's Picks for selected games this weekend in major college football:

- Penn State at Alabama— Bama by 3.

Plans being made for local Veterans Day observance

Preparations are under way locally for a parade and updating of Hall of Heroes in observance of Veterans Day, Nov. 11.

The Madison County Veterans Day Committee is now accepting parade units for that day's parade. Hal Meeker, the parade marshal, says that floats, marching units, bands and any display of interest to the parade-goers is welcome. In the past some floats and displays have been sponsored by commercial, political, or social organizations that took the opportunity to let the public know about their purpose, while they rendered a salute to the veterans of this county.

For information about the parade, set for 11 a.m. Nov. 11 in Huntsville, call 852-6334 or 883-5051.

Nominations for the Hall of Heroes are being accepted by the Madison County Military Heritage Commission. Located in the lobby of the Madison County Courthouse, the Hall of Heroes is a permanent display of the names of county residents who have received one or more of the nation's valor awards.

In addition to the valor roster, the names of persons who were killed in action are also kept on a special roster.

Nominees need not be natives of Madison County, but must have resided in the county for at least five years prior to being considered for the Hall of Heroes. Application forms for the nominations are available at the information desk in the lobby of the courthouse.

All nominations must be accompanied by substantiating information in the form of a copy of a DD-214 (separation form), or the citation that was given with the valor award. The committee wants copies rather than the original documents.

The induction ceremony for new members of the Hall of Heroes will be held at 10 a.m. Nov. 11 at the courthouse. For information call Floyd "Tut" Fann 852-2803.

Arraignment held in contract case

Two defendants in a 67-count indictment against Navatex Laboratories Inc., Marietta, Ga., entered not guilty pleas last Thursday at their arraignment in Birmingham.

Calvin Cheatham, 60, of Marietta, the company's operations manager, and Wayne Milton Campbell Sr., 43, of Huntsville, the company's project manager, both pleaded not guilty. "They were put on a non-secured bond, basically their own recognizance," said John Ott, the assistant U.S. attorney who handled the arraignment before U.S. magistrate T. Michael Putnam.

Arraignment for Navatex Laboratories, which was not represented at last week's proceedings, was rescheduled for 9:30 a.m. Thursday, Oct. 20.

The indictment charges that Cheatham and Campbell conspired to defraud the United States by submitting false documents and records. Navatex was a subcontractor of Holmes & Narver, and was responsible for the maintenance and repair of all the portable radios here on post, according to Redstone Arsenal officials. The company ran the radio shop.

If convicted on all counts, Navatex Laboratories Inc. faces fines of $33,500,000. Cheatham and Campbell, if convicted, face prison terms of 335 years and fines of $16,750,000.

Trial is scheduled before U.S. District Judge J. Foy Guin on Dec. 5 in Birmingham.

The investigation of the case was conducted by the U.S. Army Criminal Investigation Command. The case will be prosecuted by assistant U.S. attorney Michael Whisonant.

Science symposium scheduled on post

A symposium featuring noted scientist, Dr. Edward Teller, will be held at Redstone Arsenal on Oct. 28.

Teller will take part in the "Perspectives on Defense and Technology" symposium sponsored by the Research, Development and Engineering Center. The event will be held from 1:30-2:30 p.m. Friday, Oct. 28 at the Rocket Auditorium.

An 80-year-old native of Hungary, Teller is a member of the White House Science Council and a senior research fellow with the Hoover Institution on War, Revolution and Peace at Stanford University.

His latest book, "Better a Shield Than a Sword," was published in 1987.

He was an early researcher in studies of thermonuclear reactions—the processes by which stars like the sun generate energy. Teller has helped develop national programs to explore peaceful uses of nuclear explosives and to harness thermonuclear energy by both magnetic confinement and laser techniques.

Advance registration is not required in order to attend the symposium. For more information call Dr. Katie Blanding of Research Directorate, RD&E center, at 876-9296.

MSIC took third with a win over the Shooters in a third place playoff.

Redstone's new Youth Activities Center set to open

The grand opening of the newly-constructed Youth Activities Center will be held on Friday at 10:30 a.m.

Construction of the 18,500 square foot facility started in July 1987. The cost of the facility, according to Jim Rhodes, chief of youth activities, was $1.8 million which was funded by locally-generated nonappropriated funds.

The facility is four times larger than the old one, which was located in building 114.

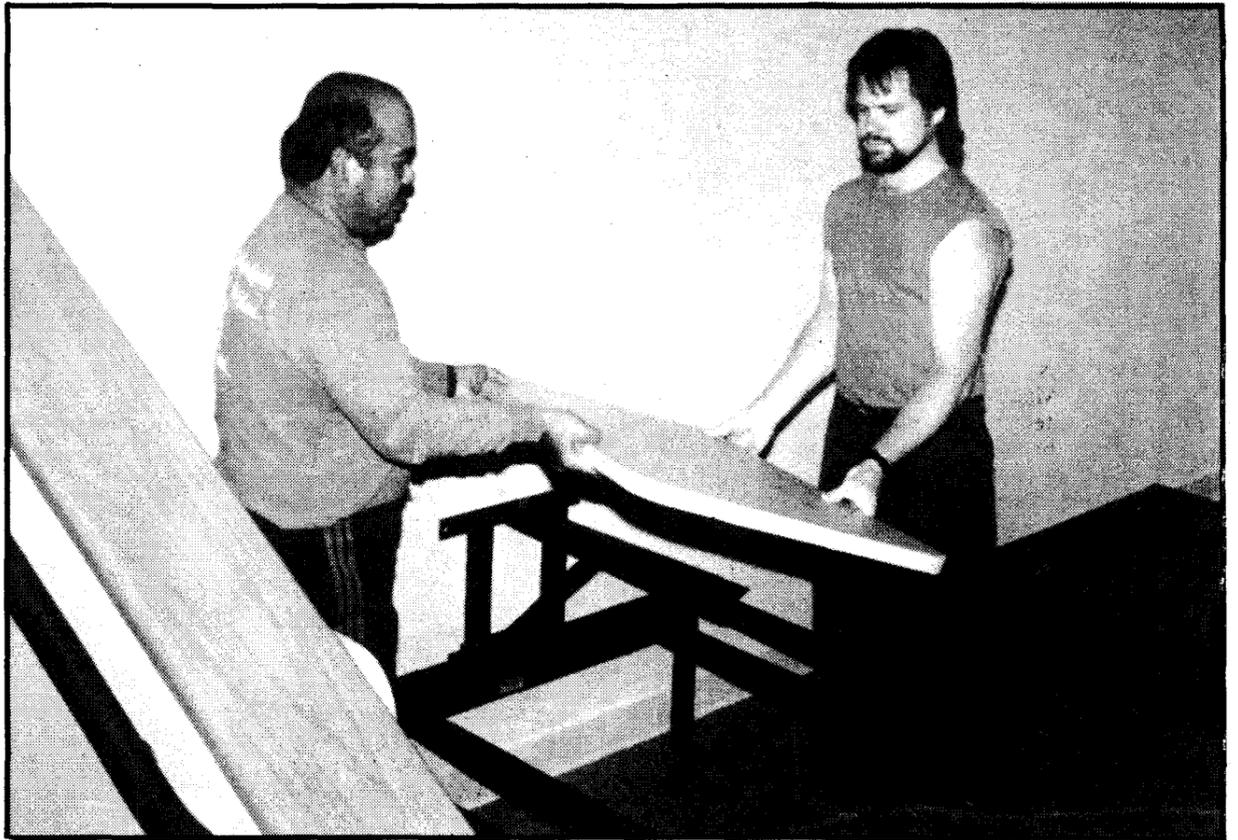

Included in the center is a gymnasium with equipment, stage, game and crafts room along with meeting rooms. A snack bar and social area are located near a large patio with basketball and volleyball areas.

Located on Goss Road near the housing area, the center will offer a safe place for the youth of the arsenal to meet and participate in a variety of activities, according to Rhodes.

"We are looking forward to the new facility and we will be able to expand activities to include ballet lessons, volleyball, teen socials, plays and stage shows, arts and crafts," he said.

The Child Development Center, located next to the center, will also be using the center for a basic movement program for the younger children attending the child development center.

A tour of the center will be offered following the ribbon-cutting ceremony.

Officers wives find space-age adventure at rocket center

BY RUTH MECHAM

Some were younger and some were older. Some wore jeans and some wore sweat pants, and they all had on their Reeboks. With determined looks on their faces, more than 90 members of the Officers Wives Club set out "In Search of Adventure" and ended up at the Space and Rocket Center.

The group found their adventure, an adventure they will put in their book of memories, a day at Space Camp.

OWC is a major contributor to the space camp scholarship program sponsored by Army Community Service and according to Judy Link, first vice-president of the club, the hands-on experience gave the group an idea of what their efforts supported.

The day started off with coffee at the Officers Club then it was off to the Space and Rocket Center by car-pool. At the center the group was divided. Half toured the museum and watched a movie in the Spacedome; the other group tackled all the simulators before the groups traded places.

The group reunited for lunch at the center, and the room was filled with laughter as the women talked about their experiences.

Following the meal Brig. Gen. Robert Stewart, deputy commander of the Strategic Defense Command and a former astronaut, was introduced and talked about his experiences in space.

"I felt he brought humor to a highly technical business," Link said.

"He also took time to answer questions regarding his experiences in space and all the training involved to become an astronaut."

She went on to say many OWC members send their children to Space Camp and work very hard during the year to raise funds for the Space Camp scholarship program sponsored by Army Community Service and the Education Committee.

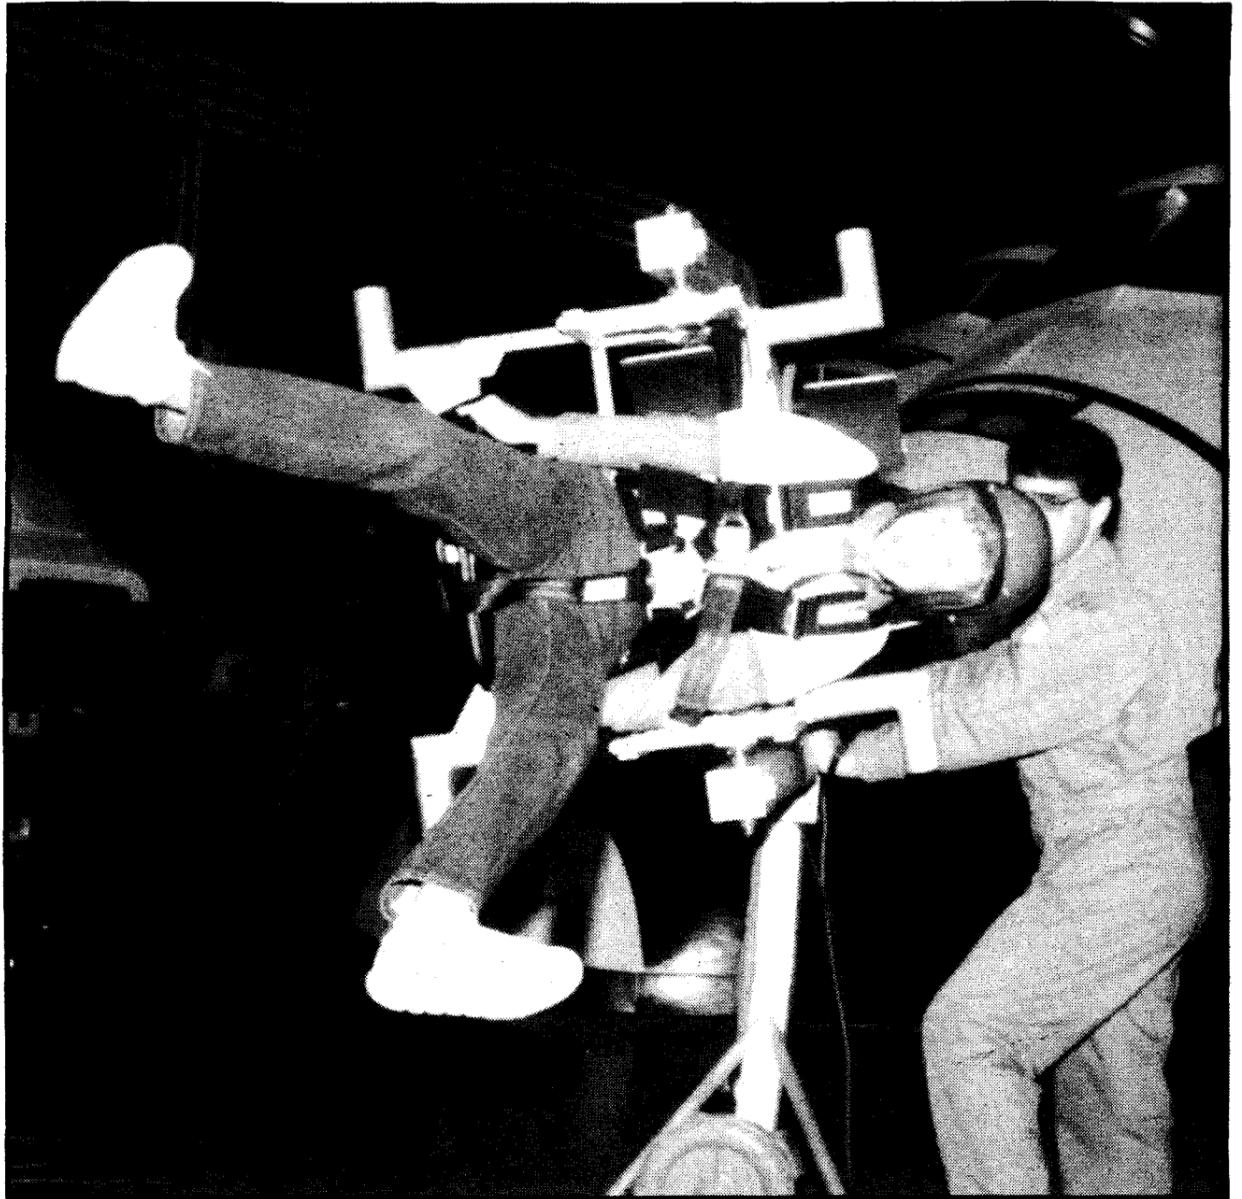

"This gave us the opportunity to experience the same things the children feel," Link said.

"Many hours were spent working with the staff of the Space and Rocket Center on this event," she said.

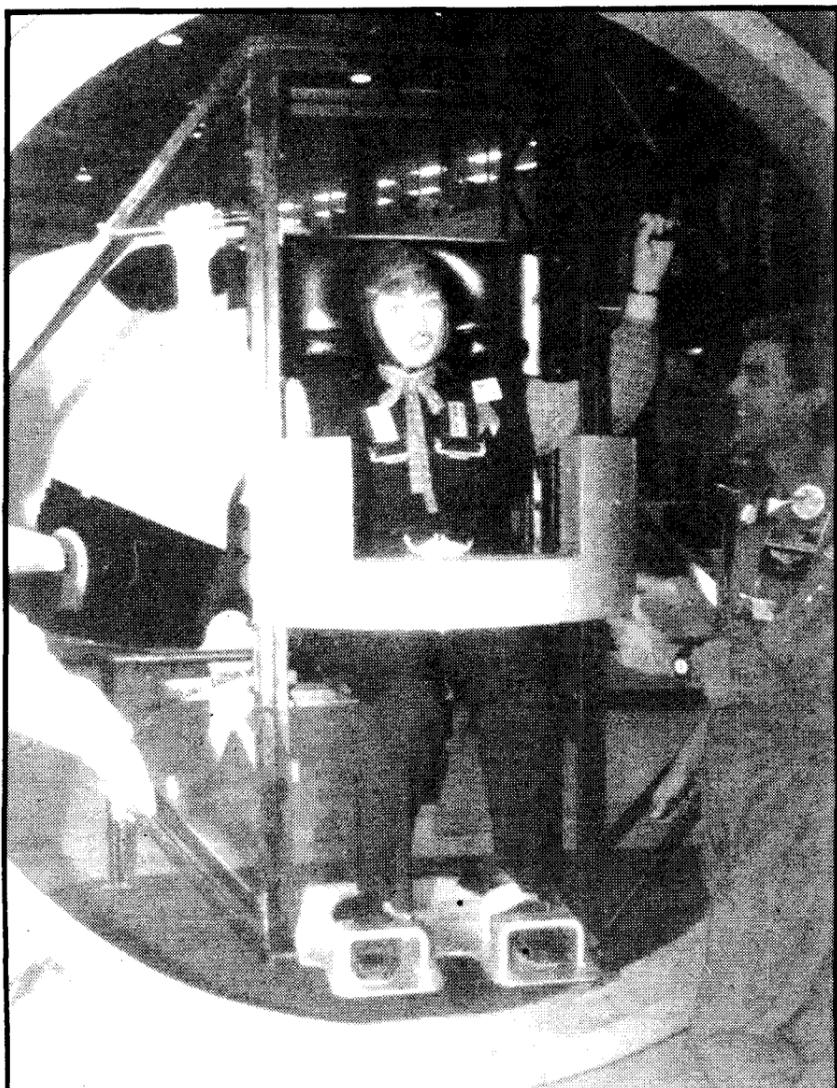

"It was very apparent to me the center has close ties with the arsenal. The staff was super."

New friendships were developed as a result of the day, according to Link. She realized it was a big success by the number of phone calls she had that evening.

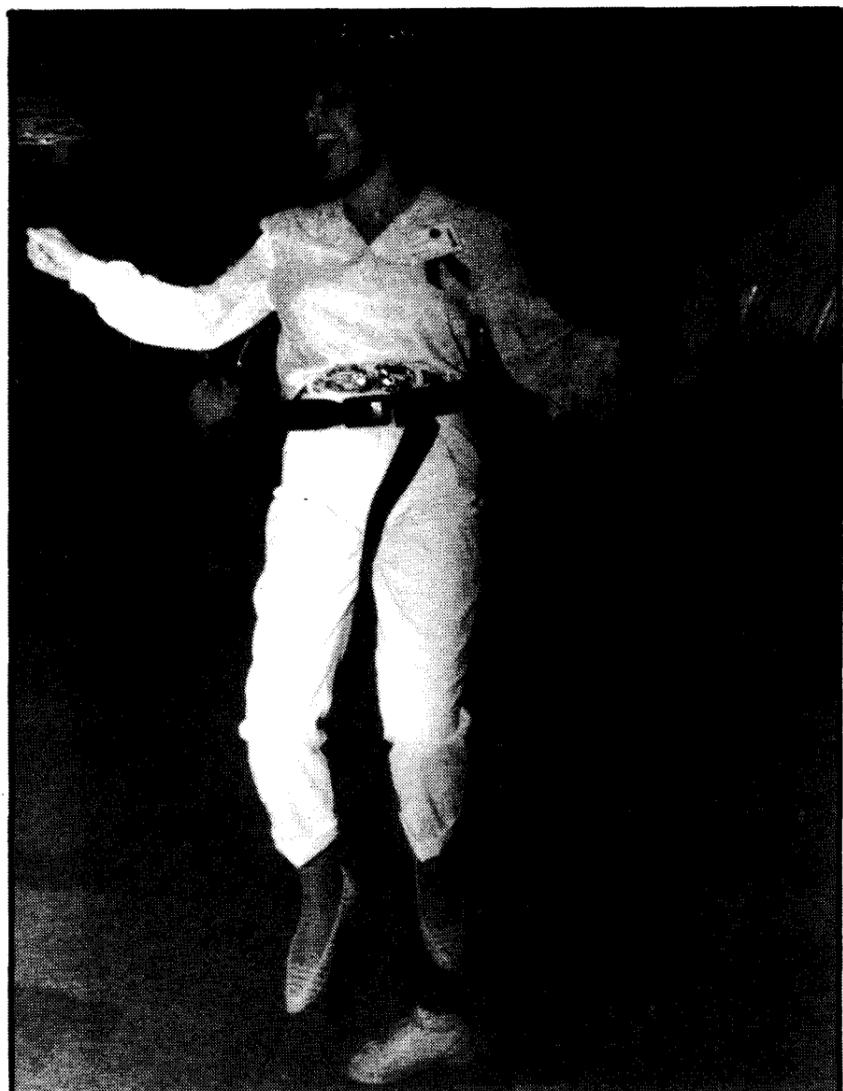

"In keeping with our theme this year," Link said, "we set out to find an adventure and we certainly did at the Space and Rocket Center."

WHAT HAVE YOU GOTTEN ME INTO NOW?— Ann Lewis, president of the Officers Wives Club, prepares for a spin in the multi-axial training chair.

Service project helps Scout work toward Eagle badge

BY RUTH MECHAM

A book about Lassie and scouting motivated Kreiton Kawano to get involved in the Boy Scouts of America. He read the book when he was 5 years old but it wasn't till his dad got stationed at Redstone that he was able to become involved in scouting.

"I didn't have the opportunity to become active in scouting until I was 12 because Dad was stationed first in Japan and later in Colorado and there wasn't a troop on the base," Kawano said.

The story he read and the fact his dad was a Scout both contributed to his desire to become a Scout.

In just three short years Kawano has progressed to the point that he is working toward Eagle Scout. To be eligible, a Scout must complete a total of 22 merit badges: 12 required by the National Council and 10 others of his choice. A Scout also had to serve in various leadership and logistical positions.

"The leaders meet and have bull sessions with other patrol leaders and toss around different ideas, projects and activities that the troop could do," Kawano said. "We plan about six months in advance and present our ideas to the troops."

Kawano chose to coordinate support for the annual Volksmarch as his service project for his Eagle badge.

"Eagle projects have to demonstrate leadership skills along with the ability to manage and coordinate," he said. "Once the project is completed a report has to be filed with the National Council, which reviews the report. If the report is accepted by the council, the Scout then goes before a board and must answer fact and skill questions. It usually takes about four to six weeks for the results."

If all the requirements are met, the Scout is presented with an Eagle badge by his parents during a ceremony.

Boy Scouts is an organization which teaches leadership and responsibility, according to SSgt. Rick Menden, assistant Scoutmaster of Troop 308.

"The founders of the organization wanted it to be run by boys and with adults providing advice and guidance," Menden said. "The position Krieton has is that of senior patrol leader and he was elected to that position by members of the troop. He receives guidance and help from the Scoutmaster and myself but he is in charge of the troop."

PLANNING— Paul Schuppener and Jamie Duncan discuss checkpoints with Kawano as they make plans for the annual Volksmarch.

"My responsibilities for the Volksmarch were to coordinate all the members of the troop, to clear and mark the trails and to post checkpoints along the trail," Kawano said.

He said obtaining his Eagle badge will help him with his future plans. "When I become a junior in high school, I want to apply for an appointment to West Point. I know they look for leadership skills; a boy who went to my school last year was selected to attend West Point and he was told later the fact he was an Eagle Scout gave him the edge over other candidates."

Kawano, 15, attends Grissom High School and said he is an average student. He enjoys biking and wilderness survival camping. About a year and a half ago, he began taking Taekwondo lessons and recently tested for a first degree, senior black belt. He also finds time to play the drums and listen to music.

"I feel lucky because both my parents support me in everything I do. They aren't too overprotective or under-protective like some parents; they just encourage me," he said.

After he earns his Eagle badge, he said, he wants to continue with the troop till he is 18 and then get into Military Science Explorers Post 545.

Government pursues 'affirmative claims' for negligence

Editor's note: Capt. Ramsbotham is the claims judge advocate in the office of the staff judge advocate.

BY PAULA RAMSBOTHAM

The U.S. government could use your help in recovering money through its affirmative claims program.

An affirmative claim is a type of claim which is initiated by the government to collect money for reimbursement for medical services or for property damage because of another's wrongdoing. For example, if a soldier or one otherwise entitled to use the facilities of Fox Army Community Hospital, is injured in an automobile accident and is brought to FACH or federal monies are expended to treat that party elsewhere, then the government has the legal right to collect the money expended in medical care from the party who caused the accident. A settlement with the insurance company and the injured party is not binding on the government.

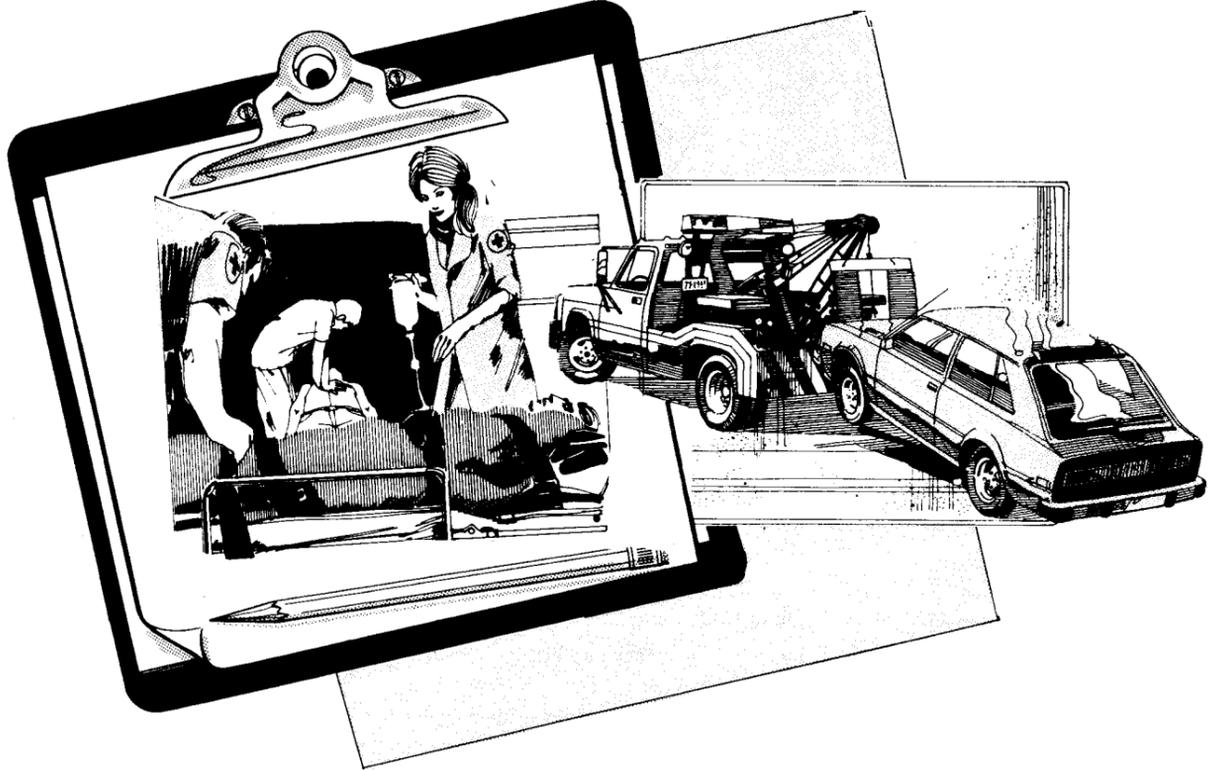

The government can also collect if its property is damaged or destroyed by another's negligence. For instance, if someone drives off the road and hits a government fence, the government can collect money from the negligent party. Parties who are victimized are sent questionnaire forms by this office. Once the questionnaires are completed and returned to the Claims Office, the questionnaire is reviewed and the claim may be asserted. The government needs your help in returning the questionnaires it sends out. Many times, claims do not get pursued because injured parties fail to respond to their questionnaires. If you receive a questionnaire from this office, please fill it out and return it. If you have questions, contact this office (876-9911) and someone will be happy to assist you. The questionnaire asks questions such as the identity of the parties involved, the details of the accident, the extent of the injuries and whether or not the negligent party has insurance.

The government can collect money under a number of different laws. The Medical Care Recovery Act permits the government to maintain collection under a negligence theory. The government can also collect under uninsured motorist's theories and workmen's compensation coverage.

Claims are never initiated against soldiers individually unless the wrongdoer exhibited gross negligence, willful misconduct or has insurance. The amount of the claim asserted depends upon the extent of the damage or injury. Rates for medical reimbursement are set by the Office of Management and Budget.

Estimates for property damage are provided locally. A claim is initiated by a demand letter which is sent to the party or entity from which recovery is sought. Demands which are ignored can be sent to the U.S. Attorney's Office in Birmingham for collection action through federal court. Monies collected from the affirmative claims program are deposited in the U.S. Treasury. In the last fiscal year, the Redstone Claims Office was able to collect almost $36,000 from affirmative claims.

the national children's advocacy center

106 Lincoln Street • Huntsville, AL 35801
(205) 533-5437

Our Mission and Philosophy

The mission of the Children's Advocacy Center is to provide timely assistance to the victims of child sexual, physical or mental abuse. Our goals are:

- To provide the child victim with needed services in one comfortable, home-like setting.
- To prevent trauma to the child caused by multiple contacts with responding professionals.
- To provide the family with needed services and assist them in regaining maximum functioning.
- To hold more offenders accountable through improved prosecution of child abuse cases.

The Magnitude Of The Local Problem

The number of reported cases of child abuse in Huntsville and Madison County, Alabama, has risen from 405 in 1983 to 918 in 1987. It is believed that the actual number of children being abused annually could be as much as 2 or 3 times the 1987 figure.

Our Accomplishments

Since its recent creation in 1985, the Center has had some notable accomplishments. Some of these are listed below.

- The Children's Advocacy Center now serves about 400 children annually.
- More offenders are being brought to trial and convicted.
- Both District Attorney Robert Cramer, Jr. and the Center have been recognized nationally on numerous occasions. For example:
  - ✓ In 1988 the Center was chosen as the first and only "National Resource Center on Child Sexual Abuse."
  - ✓ In 1987 the Center received the "President's Child Safety Partnership Award."
  - ✓ In 1986 District Attorney Robert E. Cramer, Jr. received the "Vincent DeFrancis Award."
  - ✓ In 1984 District Attorney Robert E. Cramer, Jr. was named NASW "National Public Citizen of the Year."
- The Center's outreach program has resulted in the establishment of over 20 similar centers throughout the U.S. It is to reflect the impact of our program nation-wide that we recently changed our name to the National Children's Advocacy Center.

New master menu promotes fitness

FORT LEE, Va.— Changes to the Army's fiscal year 1989 Master Menu have been announced by officials at the U.S. Army Troop Support Agency.

The new menu promotes foods which are rich in complex carbohydrates and fiber, and reduces total fat, saturated fat and cholesterol.

In FY 89, soldiers can expect to see more breakfast fitness bars first offered in 1988. The fitness bar is designed to offer high fiber, low sodium, low fat and low cholesterol alternatives to the traditional breakfast fare.

Some of the items on these "islands of fitness" are hot and cold whole grain cereals; fresh, frozen, dried and canned fruit; unsweetened fruit juices; lowfat yogurt and cheeses; two-percent lowfat milk; and whole grain bread products.

Servings of eggs to order for breakfast have been decreased to six days a week to assist soldiers in moderation their overall fat and cholesterol intake. On these days, the menu includes such food as pancakes or French toast as the main entree.

Soldiers will also see the introduction of new lower fat sources of protein for breakfast this year. A steak biscuit, turkey and cheese sandwich or tuna and cheese sandwich are served one day each week as the major protein component at breakfast.

A fitness meal pattern from the 1989 menu includes a baked or roasted entree, one served without gravy, salad bar with low calorie salad dressing, fruit, low calorie dessert, lowfat milk and margarine.

The 1989 menu complies with the Surgeon General's guideline of 1,400 to 1,700 milligrams of sodium per 1,000 calories.

Longtime officer of local union dies

Everett Brouillette, a former officer of AFGE Local 1858, died Oct. 10.

Brouillette served as president of Local 1858 from 1964-71. He came out of retirement to run for executive vice president in April 1987 and served in that position until Sept. 15, 1988 without any compensation, according to Dennis Garrison, president of Local 1858.

"Everett helped to organize AFGE Local 1858 in 1957 and he was a dedicated servant until his death. Everett represented thousands of government employees during his life and he loved every minute of it," Garrison said. "Mr. Brouillette is going to be greatly missed."

Brouillette was born in New Orleans and raised in upstate New York. He was a resident of Huntsville since 1956. At the time of his retirement in 1972, Brouillette was a GS-12 coordinator for the manned flight awareness program at Marshall Space Flight Center.

During his time as president, Brouillette was instrumental in getting a court injunction against the reduction-in-force at MSFC which involved 688 jobs. Also, during his tenure, Local 1858 was the largest local in the American Federation of Government Employees with about 5,500 members, Garrison recalled.
