Haunted house welcomes visitors this week

BY RUTH MECHAM

There's a full moon, and an eerie haze moves its way slowly over the ground. The silence is interrupted by the crackling of leaves as little ghosts and goblins run from door to door seeking the treats of the night.

Monday will be Oct. 31, Halloween, a fun time when young children dress up and parents enjoy handing out goodies to the little creatures of the night.

On the arsenal, many activities are planned to make this year's celebration a festive and fun event for everyone.

The newly-opened Youth Center will undergo a transformation and become a House of Horrors on Oct. 27 and 28. Those brave enough to enter the darkness and wander through the maze will find untold mysteries.

"Many surprises lurk around every corner," said SSgt. Charles Hobart, coordinator of the haunted house.

Hobart has experience with creating haunted houses. He has worked with volunteers for the past three years with the haunted house called "Nightmare on Nike Street." Moving to the youth center has allowed the group to expand their house of terror.

"We have had to use a tent in the past and it made it more difficult to create a scary effect. In the new gym we will be able to make our maze very dark, making it more scary," Hobart said.

This will be his last year to participate and he said he wants to go out in glory, making this haunted house the best yet. He will be retiring soon and moving to Rock Island, Ill.

"We want all the children to have fun this Halloween season and above all we want them safe," he said, adding, "there are those who get a kind of thrill out of being cruel."

Hobart has worked with various youth activities. "I feel if we had more parents taking time to help with various youth programs we wouldn't have so many kids getting in trouble," he said. "Kids look up to people who spend time with them; they talk to people who are willing to listen. I think some parents are under so much stress in their own lives they don't recognize their children are having problems till it's too late."

Volunteering at the youth center is really helping your own, he said. "When the kids are involved the parents should also be involved."

Last year more than 1,500 trick-or-treaters passed through the "Nightmare on Nike Street." Hobart said this year's event will be different because of the support from local merchants and the Jaycees. "Local merchants gave us masks, make-up and the Jaycees gave us suggestions on making ours better."

The haunted house, held from 7 to 9 p.m. Oct.

27-28, is open to all the Redstone community free of charge.

"We have included a casket," Hobart said, rubbing his hands together with a mischievous look on his face. "I'm not saying where we got it or what's inside. Just be prepared to be scared to death."

Building 4484 asbestos removal begins Monday

BY SKIP VAUGHN

Asbestos will be removed from building 4484 beginning Oct. 31 but the work will be done in phases so the building will remain open.

Building 4484 is shared by Redstone Scientific Information Center and the Pershing Project Office. The asbestos removal is expected to be finished in March 1989, according to Jerry Holton, an environmental protection specialist who is Redstone's asbestos program manager.

Targeted are equipment rooms and pipe insulation which will be replaced with non-asbestos insulation. The three-story, 50,000 square foot building was built in 1959.

"The whole idea is to get the asbestos out of that building, it's one of our first major projects," Holton said.

A $238,000 contract was let Sept. 27 to North American Construction Corporation of San Antonio, Texas, to remove asbestos and re-insulate pipes in building 4484, according to contract specialist Sue Cardwell.

Sections being worked on are to be blocked off with signs and barriers, the workers will keep everything wetted down, and the air will be monitored.

"Basically it's the health of the occupants that we have in mind," Holton said.

"The building will not be closed," he said, "parts of it will be closed while it's being worked on."

Asbestos removals have been done in equipment rooms at buildings 5435 and 5201, and there have been "other small jobs here and there but nothing of this scale," according to Holton. "Of course, NASA has done some major removals like this."

Sybil Bullock, director of Redstone Scientific Information Center, assures users of the technical library that "we're going to try to keep the disruption as little as possible." She said she understands the work will begin on the second floor, then the third and end up on the first floor. The second floor is shared by the RSIC translations department and the Pershing Project Office. The third floor has classified and unclassified technical report literature, and the first floor has unclassified monographs, books and journals.

"As soon as we know the schedule, how long it will take, we will let our users know," Bullock said. She said there will be some noise involved during the removal, and heating and air conditioning will be off on the floor being worked on.

"I would like to assure the users that we're going to try to be as least disruptive as we can till we get this (asbestos) material out of the building," Bullock said.

Dr. Gene Paro, deputy project manager at Pershing, said "we will be able to continue the march by doubling up (offices)."

Safety advice given to ensure a happy Halloween for all

BY RUTH MECHAM

Halloween should be a festive and fun time for the young and old. However, it can become a nightmare if parents and children do not follow certain safety tips.

Years ago parents could send their children out trick or treating and not worry about them getting candy laced with poison or apples full of razor blades. The phrase, "trick or treat," once considered a cute way for youngsters to ask for goodies, has become a demand on the part of some kids who will deliver a costly trick if they don't get their treat. To help ensure a safe time for all, many volunteers have been working hard planning activities for the week. A haunted house will be open at the new Youth Center on Oct 27 and 28 from 7 to 9 p.m. A costume party is planned for ages 6 through 12 on Halloween at the new center from 6 to 8 p.m. Judges will give a prize for the best girl and boy in costume. Refreshments will be served and the children can leave from the center and go trick-or-treating. Hours of trick or treating on the arsenal are from 6 to 8 p.m. Oct. 31.

McGruff, the crime prevention dog, offers the following list of 10 things parents and children can do to protect themselves and make Halloween a safer and happier time for everyone:

- ☞ Make sure children are accompanied by an adult or responsible teen-ager when they go door-to-door. Go with them yourself if you can.
- ☞ Instruct children never to eat anything until they are home and the treats have been examined. Cut and wash fruit before eating. Throw away anything unwrapped.
- ☞ Check the wrappers of commercial treats for signs of tampering.

☞ Call the police if there are any suspicious treats.
☞ Make sure children's costumes fit and they can see well.

☞ Tell your children to trick or treat in their own neighborhood and in well-lighted streets. Daylight hours are best.

☞ If children are going to be out after dark, make sure they carry a flashlight.

☞ Teach your children to use the sidewalks if they can. If there are no sidewalks, walk on the left side of the street facing cars.

☞ Know which friends your children will be with and which route they are taking.

☞ Leave your porch light on so children will know it's OK to visit your home.

Authorities say man tried to send missile parts to Iran

An apparent attempt to illegally export Hawk missile parts to Iran has been foiled in South Carolina following a four-month investigation.

Ali Reza Foyuzi Yousefi, 45, an Iranian in this country illegally, was arrested by agents of the U.S. Customs Service last Wednesday and jailed and denied bond after he was caught trying to send a cathode tube for a Hawk missile radar out of the country.

Yousefi was charged under the Federal Arms Exportation Act after agents said he attempted to ship the radar component in a shoebox-size parcel from a Federal Express terminal at Charlotte/Douglas International Airport to Zurich, Switzerland for presumed diversion to Iran.

The Charlotte, N.C. office of the Immigration and Naturalization Service began deportation proceedings for Yousefi on Thursday because he had remained in the U.S. illegally following expiration of a six-month visa in August 1986.

According to The Charlotte Observer, a California defense contractor alerted authorities after being contacted by Yousefi who claimed he wanted the missile part for radar communications use in West Germany.

The newspaper said that an export manager with Barian Associates Inc. of Palo Alto became suspicious after receiving a call from Yousefi using a fake southern accent and an assumed name and business affiliation.

Yousefi subsequently negotiated with a customs agent posing as an independent electronics broker to purchase 100 cathode tubes from Barian for $89,000 and pressed for quick delivery.

In the course of the investigation, Yousefi was photographed and tailed and agents kept his home in Rock Hill, S.C. under surveillance and also got his co-workers to spy on him. They searched his garbage and found a package wrapper addressed to Yousefi with a Tehran return address. Local Rock Hill police and the sheriff's office assisted customs in the investigation.

According to the Observer, Yousefi attended college in the U.S. from 1965 to 1967 and held jobs in the Charlotte area until he returned to Iran in 1972. He came back to the U.S. in 1986 and remained in the country illegally after a temporary visa expired.

An electrical engineer for the city of Rock Hill, Yousefi's illegal alien status was unknown to his employer who hired him in September 1986.

CFC campaign halfway there

The local Combined Federal Campaign had a good second week, collecting more than $22,745 to bring the total to $479,730.

"We're at 56 percent of goal and 27.5 percent of the population has participated at this point," said Carol Ille, the campaign coordinator.

Only two weeks remain in the charity drive scheduled to end Nov. 4. Ille encourages everyone who intends to give to do so now.

The second week collection total was slightly ahead of last year's pace although less people contributed. "We've collected more money from less people," Ille said.

The slogan for this year's Huntsville area campaign is "The Difference is You," meaning that each contributor can make a difference. The goal is $855,001.

By definition

Editor:

This is in response to the anonymous letter in the Oct. 12 issue which objected to the phrase "we have often served as the bellwether for the nation" in an Army policy statement. I am surprised at how much effort some people will go to intentionally misunderstand a simple word. This person quoted two definitions of "bellwether" from a dictionary: (1) a castrated male sheep and (2) a leader. This person then used the arcane first definition as a reason to be shocked about the "distasteful implications" of castration. Get real! Everyone knows that many words in the English language have more than one definition, and that the reader is supposed to understand the intended meaning from the context in which the word is used. In fact, depending upon which dictionary one uses, the second definition may be the only definition listed. For example, the Merriam Webster Dictionary defines "bellwether" as "one that takes the lead or initiative." There is nothing wrong with the use of "bellwether" in the Army policy. The Army does enough things wrong that we do not need to criticize them when they do something right. Only a stupid person could confuse a "leader" with "a castrated male sheep." (Stupid, adj.: 1. Slow to apprehend; dull; obtuse. 2. Showing a lack of sense or intelligence.)

Pay increase

Editor:

It is official now, the GS employees will get a 4.1 percent increase beginning Jan. 1, 1989. The wage board employee only received a 1.94 increase effective in September 1988. The kicker is the health insurance increase of 28 percent will eat up an average of 40 percent of the 4.1 percent pay increase and the wage board employee will do well to break even with their 1.94 percent pay increase, with a 26 percent kick in their insurance.

There is a new wrinkle in contracting-out. By using the back door approach, OPM Personnel Chief Constance Horner has published in the Federal Register to allow federal agencies to pay the going rate without regulatory limits for its temporary personnel. The new rule may go into effect in December 1988. Under the proposal, the government would have the authority to contract with any agency to provide temporaries to fill in for federal employees from the lowest ranking file clerk to the highest ranking member of the Executive Service where qualified federal employees are not otherwise available.

Friend, this proposal is just another form of contracting out federal jobs to the private sector. AFGE National office is fighting the battle along with the help of other government unions. This is the Reagan Administration's last slate at reducing the number of federal workers by coming through the back door. Temporaries might be appropriate in certain cases but we are vehemently opposed to paying such employees more money than federal workers, plus a big fee to a contractor.

Training day helps to keep flight operations safe

Soldiers and civilian workers of the Redstone Arsenal Support Activity's Directorate of Flight Operations had a day of intensive training during the directorate's semiannual safety day last week.

Course participants received training at five stations, which included safety equipment identification, grid map reading, cardio-pulmonary resuscitation, emergency exiting from aircraft, and winter vehicle safety.

The Redstone Fire Department helped out with two demonstrations. One was designed to teach safe, effective use of fire extinguishers; during the other demonstration, an emergency extrication of a person from a helicopter was explained.

"This is recurring training that we do twice a year. We take a day and don't do any flying. We dedicate a day to safety-oriented training and discussions," said Lt. Col. Bill Kincaid, director of the Directorate of Flight Operations.

The training day was conducted in coordination with the Airborne Systems Laboratory, which is part of the Research, Development and Engineering Center's Test and Evaluation Directorate, Kincaid said.

Mayor and city councilman

Redstone workers serve as New Hope city officials

BY PAM ROGERS

Every weekday, Nolan Hill goes to work at RASA's Directorate of Engineering and Housing. He has a fairly normal job as an engineering technician. He looks about like any other federal employee.

Every day, after work, he goes to the town where he lives, enters the city hall, and sits behind another desk for at least an hour. He's not leading a double life or moonlighting. Hill is the mayor of New Hope, Ala., population 3,000.

Larry Dowdy is also a frequent visitor to the New Hope City Hall. He also works for DEH as a firefighter, and he holds Place One on the New Hope City Council.

Ask either man why he has chosen to participate in city government in addition working full-time at a place almost 20 miles away and you get the same answer.

They love their town.

New Hope is a little town that's pretty easy to miss unless you intend to go there. The main part of New Hope is just off Highway 431, and about the only people who go through the town, other than those who live there, are commuters taking a shortcut to Highway 72 and Scottsboro.

Both men are natives of the area. Hill grew up on a farm near New Hope. Dowdy spent a few early years in the town, but his father was in the military, so he spent 16 years away before he came back to live in New Hope.

Dowdy and Hill would like to see the town grow—not too much, but to the point that it can sustain its citizens with goods and services, and generate revenue for the city coffers.

"Our revenues are limited, because we don't have too many commercial activities," Hill said, adding that the two major sources of revenue for the town right now are beverage taxes and sales taxes, and the only big sources of taxes are a grocery store and a small discount store.

"We need to encourage some commercial growth to build New Hope. My dream is that someday we could have 431 through the city limits lined with commercial activities. Now there's practically nothing," he said.

Some residents don't believe Hill's dream will ever come true. In fact, some have even branded him a radical for his innovative ideas for expansion, restoration and commercial growth. And, he says, he's definitely one of the youngest mayors the town has ever had. He's 45.

Hill proudly pointed out the town's advantages—it's small, so small that when people have problems they don't just get upset. They call the mayor. And he listens. Even if it's 4:15 in the morning and somebody has a broken water line.

"I don't mind that, because we need to know about these things so they can be fixed," he said.

The area surrounding the town is beautiful— hills with little coves running in between.

"We have a good transit route, a good water system, natural gas— I'm excited about the potential for New Hope," he said.

On the other hand, he's just as quick to point out the things that need work. Things like an unenforced zoning ordinance and a run-down downtown area.

"We'd like to see the day when people living in Huntsville would like to live in New Hope, but we can't attract them without a zoning ordinance. We have a zoning ordinance that was adopted in 1980, but it's not enforced, and we have every intention of enforcing it," he said.

Dowdy agrees with Hill's ideas for making the town better, adding that it's a good place to live already. Many of the advantages are intangible— things like having neighbors you can rely on if you have a problem, and being able to lend a hand when they need help.

"A lot of the benefits of New Hope aren't visual. People who have never been to New Hope could drive through and see things that aren't too attractive," he said. But the good things are there, and Dowdy can't imagine living anywhere else.

"It's like walking into your own home when you drive into town," he said.

Hill and Dowdy both wish their children could live in New Hope when they grow up. Hill and his wife, Linda, have two sons. Craig is a student at Freed-Hardeman College in Henderson, Tenn. Harrel is in the eighth grade at New Hope School.

Dowdy and his wife, Stella, also have two sons. Jimmy just graduated from high school and Donnie is in the 11th grade at New Hope.

But like most small towns, there's nothing to keep young people home. Most are forced to go to bigger towns to make a living.

"We would like to see New Hope grow to not a large city, but to a size that would furnish the necessities we rely on other cities for.

"Our dream will be realized when our children come back to New Hope," Hill said.

TOWN BUSINESS — Dowdy discusses the day's business with City Clerk Sarah Goggans.

CITY OFFICIALS — Dowdy (left) and Hill stand outside the New Hope City Hall, which is becoming too small to handle the town's current government operations.

MICOM has best year ever for contract competition

BY SKIP VAUGHN

Fiscal 1988 was a record-setting year for competition at the Missile Command.

More than 28 percent of MICOM's contract awards involved competition among potential sources. It was the most since the numbers started being tracked in fiscal 1982.

The 28.5 percent figure was up from the previous year's 22.9, and the forecast is even better for this year. "For FY 89, we're projecting 35.5 percent," said Robert Chalmers of the Competition Management Office.

Competition means buying from more than one or two companies, as opposed to sole source or limited source.

"And the purpose of that is to reduce the cost while maintaining the readiness posture of the command, and I think that's probably key," Chalmers said. "We don't want to compete just for the sake of competition. We want to buy best value for the Army."

"We want industry to tell us what their capability is so we can make prudent decisions on whether we want to compete or not, and we do this through our market surveys," he said.

The competition advocate, Lt. Col. Robert Gaddi, reviews the justification and approval document for purchases ranging from $100,000 to $1 million. Those above $1 million are reviewed by the competition advocate and then approved by the deputy for procurement and readiness. Rationale for non-competitive buys is scrutinized to ensure MICOM is getting the best value for the Army.

Competition enhancement programs include reverse engineering in which the command tries to determine how an item is manufactured so it can construct technical specifications for that item. The replenishment parts purchase or borrow program is aimed at increasing the number of potential sources for spare parts; items that are purchased from only one or two companies are displayed to give other businesses a chance to compete for future contracts. Under the qualification testing program, a new effort, companies can "come to us and be qualified to become an alternate source of supply for an item that was previously restricted (to one or two sources)," Chalmers said.

There are other enhancement programs such as the competition advocate's shopping list. In this program, the advocate informs industry about future purchases of items.

Gaddi, who became the competition advocate in August, leads a 12-member office. Gayle Walker is team chief of the major items section, and Chalmers is team chief of the secondary items section.

"Competition involves everyone—from the program manager all the way through the acquisition cycle," Chalmers said. "Everyone needs to be aware of competition."

The Competition in Contracting Act, a 1984 law implemented in April 1985, ensures that every procurement Defense Departmentwide be given a fair opportunity to be competed.

The Chaparral guidance section is just one example of a competition success story. The old price was $91,830 each. After the item was opened to competition, the price dropped to $52,017. Estimated savings for the fourth quarter of fiscal 1988 for this item was $28,705,826.

In another case, the AN/UAS-12A nightsight equipment set formerly cost $51,215. After competition, the new price was $37,990. Estimated savings for the fourth quarter of fiscal 1988 for this item was $1,838,962.

"I think competition and readiness have got to go hand in hand," Chalmers said.

Volunteers honored for valuable service to ACS

People who donate their time and efforts to Army Community Services were recognized with an awards luncheon last Thursday.

"I've seen the figures— some 6500 hours of work that has been put in by you in the past year," Col. Perry Butler, deputy post commander, told the group. "I don't know what it would cost to buy that, probably in the vicinity of a quarter of a million dollars. We don't have those kind of funds.

"We're certainly grateful of your efforts," he said.

ACS volunteers will be relied on even more in the future because of dwindling funds, according to Butler. "We have done well in our funding in FY 89," he said. There was laughter when he added jokingly:

"What I'm going to do as a result of that— for all you volunteers—I'm going to double your salaries."

The volunteers were recognized with certificates and other awards for their hours and years of service. "The entire ACS staff and myself sincerely give our heartfelt thanks to you as volunteers," said Bill Resha, chief of Army Community Services. "You really are a meaningful part of our program."

ACS has been a part of the Family Support Division of the Directorate of Community and Family Activities since October 1986.

Cathy Ryan, the ACS volunteer supervisor, received an award from Resha and the Army Community Services staff. She in turn made a special presentation to Ann Hurst, the honorary volunteer supervisor who will be leaving for Washington, D.C. Mary Stewart will become the new honorary volunteer supervisor.

A 50 hour pin was presented to each of the following: June Baker, James Boschma, Judy Boschma, Stephanie Cole, Denita Jones, Kathy Southern, Greg Taylor and Angelia Wilson. A 100 hour pin went to Baker, Cole, Jones, Irene Lang, Dorothea Madry, Linda Moberg and Janie Thomas. A 250 hour pin was presented to Ann Drolet, Rosemary Finley and Stewart. Ryan received a 1250 hour pin.

Debbie Windhorn received a one year guard. Kathy Cook, Judy Link, Carolyn Presley and Thomas each received a two year guard. Suzanne Garnett and Hurst were each presented a four year guard. Lillian Kawano received a nine year guard.

Certificates went to Evelyn Boysen, Sharon Cantrell, Milagros Cruz, Virginia Dempsey, Barbara Goldsby, Betsy Green, Tim Hastings, Marge Kunhart, Mary Elizabeth Marr, Blanche Moore, Gisela Mullek, Michong Rayborn, Mary Jo Reidt and GiGi Todd.

Anti-tank systems pass flight tests

Contractors in the Army's Advanced Antitank Weapon System-Medium (AAWS-M) competition have demonstrated successfully their respective systems during flight tests here and are eligible to be considered for full scale development.

Ford Aerospace, Hughes Aircraft and Texas Instruments have met minimum requirements by successfully engaging six of 10 mandatory targets during proof-of-principle flight tests. The tests are continuing.

Based on proposals the companies are expected to submit early next month and test data, the Army will select one contractor team in early 1989 for full scale development of AAWS-M. Ford is teamed with General Dynamics, Hughes with Honeywell and Texas Instruments with Martin.

AAWS-M is intended as a one-man-portable, medium range, anti-tank weapon that will replace the Dragon and will give the soldier substantially greater capabilities than Dragon provides.

Col. Earl Finley is AAWS-M project manager and James Hughes is his civilian deputy.

Energy awareness week good time for conservation plans

BY PAM ROGERS

How well-lighted is your office? Don't get the wrong idea. Well-lighted doesn't mean having every overhead light blazing. As far as energy conservation goes, it means having enough light, in the right place, to do your job.

Since this is the Missile Command's Energy Awareness Week, now might be a good time to take a look around the office.

There are several methods of making office lighting more efficient, but first, look at what overhead, fluorescent lighting costs the Army.

According to Kevin Meyer, the acting manager of MICOM's Energy Conservation Program, if all our lights were on, they would consume 5,867 kilowatts of electricity. Efforts to turn off selected fixtures have resulted in an actual usage rate of about 3,000 kilowatts, at a cost of about $360,000 per year.

To make sure that lights are used only where they are needed, Meyer advocates the use of task lighting, dispensing with overhead lights except where they are absolutely necessary.

Task lighting means that only workspaces are lighted, and would use only about 1,080 kilowatts, saving the Army about $240,000 per year, Meyer said.

Task lighting can be achieved either through modular work stations with built-in lights or with desk lamps, Meyer said.

In places where workers don't have assigned workspaces, like warehouses, lighting should be placed over aisles between stacks, and not directly over stacks.

Energy costs more to buy every year. In 1985

MICOM paid a little over $7 million for electricity alone. The cost for 1988 will be more than $9 million, so every effort must be made to save energy in the work place. In fact Maj. Gen. Gus Cianciolo, MICOM and Redstone commander, has designated the theme for Energy Awareness Week as "Everyone Conserving Energy at Work."

The Tennessee Valley Authority doesn't charge MICOM for its electricity the same way it charges you for what you use at home. MICOM, along with most other large industrial users, is billed with what's known as a peak demand charge in addition to the basic usage charge. Right now that's $12 for each kilowatt hour used during the peak period each month. The peak period is the 15-minute period when energy use is highest.

As Meyer explained it, if the peak usage period is at 2 p.m. on a Friday afternoon, and your coffeepot is on, that coffeepot is costing the Army $12, since the average coffeepot uses about one kilowatt of electricity.

"That's a pretty expensive cup of coffee," he said.

Meyer went on to stress that everyone must be aware of the energy he or she is consuming.

Computer terminals and personal computers are big users of office electricity. People tend to turn them on when they arrive for work in the mornings, and only turn them off when they leave in the afternoon.

Meyer suggests turning off your computer when you're not using it, especially if you will be away from your desk for an hour or more.

"What we have to get across is people do make a difference," he said.

MICOM's Energy Advisory group, which is chaired by Cianciolo, will meet Nov. 3 to review the command's energy consumption for fiscal year 1988, and plan conservation measures for FY 1989.

Set clocks back an hour Oct. 30

"Fall-back" time this year is Sunday, Oct. 30. That's when you set your clocks back one hour and standard time resumes—officially, at 2 a.m.

You won't have to do this, however, if you live in Arizona, Hawaii, the Eastern time-zone portion of Indiana, American Samoa, Puerto Rico or the Virgin Islands. These places are exempt by law from observing daylight-saving time and, therefore, remain on standard time.

Under standard time, it gets dark one hour earlier in the evening; thus, an "extra" hour of daylight in the morning. This suits some and is opposed by others.

Farmers, for example, like more daylight in the morning to do their chores. Others like more daylight in the evening—to get home from work and school and to run errands in the evening. The controversy has continued over the years.

Last year, a bill was passed that affects the time daylight-savings time resumes in the spring. It is now the first Sunday in April instead of the last. Standard time, however, still resumes the last Sunday in October.

Hatch Act limits political activities of federal workers

Editor's note: The following article about the Hatch Act is from Perspective, a publication of the Total Army Personnel Agency.

Another Presidential election is upon us!

Since the campaign season is in full swing, federal employees should take a few minutes to review the basic provisions of the Hatch Act.

The Hatch Act places limitations on the degree to which federal employees can be personally involved in partisan political activities.

The key word is "partisan."

A federal employee may not run for an elective office on a party ticket. On the other hand, an employee is free to run for elective office when the issue of party affiliation is not raised, i.e., when no candidate claims partisan affiliation.

Typically included in this category are school board positions, and many elective positions in communities.

In addition, federal employees may not:

- Campaign for or against candidates in partisan elections.
- Make campaign speeches or engage in other campaign activities to elect partisan candidates.
- Collect contributions or sell tickets to political fund-raising functions.
- Distribute campaign material in partisan elections.
- Organize or manage political rallies or meetings.
- Hold office in political clubs or parties.
- Circulate nominating petitions.
- Work to register voters for one party only.

This does not mean, however, that federal employees are discouraged from participating in the electoral process.

What you can do

Department of Defense and Army policies specifically encourage all military and civilian members to register and vote as they choose.

In addition, members may:

- Assist in voter registration drives.
- Express opinions about candidates and issues.
- Participate in campaigns where none of the candidates represent a political party.
- Contribute money to political organizations or attend political fund-raising functions.
- Wear or display political badges, buttons, or stickers (except on uniforms).
- Attend political rallies and meetings as spectators.
- Join political clubs or parties.
- Sign nominating petitions.
- Campaign for or against referendum questions, constitutional amendments, and municipal ordinances.

In recent months there has been press coverage of proposed changes to the Hatch Act pending in Congress.

These proposals have not been enacted, and probably won't be prior to the fall elections. The Hatch Act remains the law.

The Hatch Act allows considerable scope to military and civilian members to express their political beliefs and concerns, and to participate in the electoral process.

However, as indicated by the examples noted, there are restrictions.

Hellfire gets new computer software

An improvement to the Army's Hellfire missile has resulted in the Army's first use of the Ada computer language in a tactical application.

Ada is a specialized defense computer language which the Department of Defense and the Army have directed will be used for all new developments of tactical applications, according to Mary Claire Woodliff, an electronic engineer for the Hellfire Project Office.

The Ada software was incorporated into a new autopilot for the missile which will make it possible to change the missile's flight path without making changes to the missile hardware itself, Woodliff said.

"We're not stuck with a given trajectory. We can make changes without taking the missile apart. Before, we had to make a whole new autopilot, because it was not a programmable device," she said.

The autopilot was developed by Rockwell International Corporation under contract to the Army. The software used by the autopilot can be used by different missile configurations, and is currently being adapted by the Air Force for its Millimeter Wave Seeker Project.

Hellfire is an anti-armor weapon guided by a laser seeker and is the main armament of the Army's Apache attack helicopter. The missile homes in on a laser spot that can be projected on the target by ground observers, other aircraft or the launching aircraft's own designators. Hellfire project manager is Col. Robert Huston.

Drug-free America goal of campaign

BY EVELYN D. HARRIS
American Forces Information Service

The Department of Defense is joining other government agencies, Congress and private organizations to observe National Drug-Free America Week, Oct. 24-30. The campaign theme is "What Works— Next Steps."

In a memorandum urging top military and DoD civilian officials to support the campaign, Secretary of Defense Frank Carlucci noted, "Drug abuse has reached epidemic proportions in our country. The effects of this abuse on our families, communities and society are devastating in terms of the loss of human lives, the fear of unsafe streets and the decline in productivity. The Department of Defense has been a leader in the fight against drug abuse."

Carlucci mentioned the dramatic decline in the rate of drug abuse in the military and DoD initiatives to require contractors to establish a drug-free work force. He also noted DoD's assistance to law enforcement agencies "To help prevent drugs from entering our country and to eradicate them at their source."

The campaign will run along with National Red Ribbon Week, organized to mobilize family and community drug prevention programs. President Ronald Reagan and Nancy Reagan are honorary chairmen for that week.

The primary goals of the campaign are to strengthen existing education programs and to stimulate new, community-based activities through nationwide mobilization of concerned parents, business leaders and civic, social and youth groups.

Drug-Free Facts

- Twenty-three million Americans age 12 and over currently use illicit drugs.
- A recent nationwide survey conducted by Weekly Reader of 68,000 fourth graders found that 34 percent report peer pressure to try wine coolers, 41 percent to smoke and 24 percent to use crack or cocaine.
- The 15- to 24-year-old age group is dying at a faster rate than any other. Accidents, homicides and suicides— many of them related to illegal drug and alcohol use— are the leading causes of death among these young Americans.
- The intravenous drug-user population accounts for 25 percent of all AIDS patients.
- There are more known cancer-causing agents in marijuana than in tobacco. The tar in one marijuana cigarette has the same damage potential as four tobacco cigarettes.
- Marijuana interferes with the body's immune response to various infections and diseases. This may have special implications for those infected with the AIDS virus.
- Women who smoke marijuana during pregnancy may give birth to babies with defects similar to those seen in infants born with Fetal Alcohol Syndrome, such as mental retardation, low birth weight, small head size and abnormal limbs.

Payne wins ladies golf championship

Virginia Payne showed consistency in winning the Redstone ladies golf championship by one stroke last week.

Payne shot a 90 on the first day and a 90 on the second day to win the 11th annual Redstone Arsenal Ladies Golf Championship. Twenty-two women competed in the tournament held Oct. 18-19, including defending champion Billie Shuput.

Jacki Lane finished second in the championship flight with an 89 and 92 for a two-day total of 181. Marie Maksimowski was third in that flight with 89-96-185. Bev Payne was low net winner with 73-77-150.

In the first flight, Myrna Gardner was tops with 93-92-185 followed by Elke Napier 100-95-195 and Florence Teir 96-101-197. Mary Kilpatrick was low net with 78-76-154.

Second flight winners were Pam Bucey 100-99-199, Margaret Bennett 101-102-203 and Lucille Johnson 103-105-208. Betty Davis was low net with 77-85-162.

Special prize winners included Marie Melochick, Bennett and Virginia Payne for closest-to-the-pin on the first day. For the second day, Shuput won two closest-to-the-pin prizes and Davis won one.

Awards were presented by golf pro Chip Enlow at a luncheon at the golf course snack bar.

"It was a good tournament," Enlow said. "I would like to have had more participation; but due to some scheduling problems, we had it later this year than we had in the past and that probably hurt our participation somewhat. As the scores indicate, it was very close, very competitive for the championship— Mrs. Payne winning by only one stroke."
