As a new president takes office... MICOM workers offer their opinions on the economy

BY SKIP VAUGHN

The economy seems to be a central issue on the minds of federal workers as a new president takes the oath of office Friday.

Last week some Missile Command workers were asked to respond to the question: What do you want the new president to do? Each answer had something to do with the economy— such as balancing the budget or reconsidering the proposed 50 percent pay raise for top officials.

A presidential pay panel has recommended across-the-board raises of 47 percent to 56 percent for the government's approximately 3,000 top officials, including agency brass, federal judges and members of Congress.

So, what do you want the new president to do?

Jim Bowne, an historian in the MICOM Historical Division, said, "I'd like to see the president reduce the deficit. One way to do this would be to put a stop to the terrible waste of taxpayers' money. Speaking of taxes, I'd like to see the president remove the bulk of the tax burden from the shoulders of those in the low to mid-income ranges and redistribute it on a more equitable basis to include those in the high income ranges.

"Along those lines, I'd like the president to veto the proposed 52 percent increase for congressmen," Bowne added. "Given the numerous perks congressmen already receive, the proposed increase seems somewhat obscene. I want to see the president build a stronger national defense and stop worrying about opinion polls. I'd also like to see the current justice system changed to protect the victim rather than the criminal. Finally, I'd like the president to enact legislation that would stop the selling off of America."

Kaylene Hughes, senior historian in the historical division, said, "I think they need to do something about this budget deficit. They need to get a lot of these budget problems straightened out because I think there's going to be repercussions. Eventually you pay the piper on that kind of stuff."

She added that the president and Congress should come up with a long-term plan to address the problems of the elderly.

Melvin Summerhill, a management analyst in FUTURE PRESIDENT — Then-Vice President Bush is greeted in October 1987 at Redstone Army Airfield where he arrived for a visit to Huntsville. His activities included a speech at Marshall Space Flight Center.

Resource Management Directorate, said, "I want the new president to be fair and honest and open. I'd like to see him stimulate the economy, more so in the private sector than in the public sector. I'd like to see him balance the budget.

"It seems during the Reagan era, he (President Reagan) was mainly interested in defense whereas the private sector was somewhat neglected, in my opinion," Summerhill said. "For things to be achieved by the public sector, the private sector must generate enough revenue in order for the public sector to be financed."

Pam Rogers, a public affairs specialist in MICOM Public Affairs Office, said, "I would like for him to reconsider the budget that President Reagan has put before the Congress. I just think that (50 percent) raise is a little exorbitant."

Social Security card requests accepted at Redstone

For the second consecutive year, you can sign up for a new or replacement Social Security card right here on post this Friday.

The Legal Assistance Office here has again arranged for the Social Security Office to process applications for Social Security cards on Friday, Jan. 20 from 8-11:30 a.m. The location will be room G-31 of building 111 on Goss Road.

Applications will be accepted from anyone— including active and retired military personnel and their family members, and Army civilian workers. Applications for new or replacement cards should be picked up before Friday at the legal assistance office, building 111, room G-35; this is so they may be properly filled out and required evidence of age, citizenship and identity can be obtained and submitted with the form.

A public, hospital or religious birth record is generally sufficient as evidence of both date of birth and citizenship. A school record and certain other documents can be used for proof of identity. Uncertified copies or notarized photocopies will not be accepted. All documents submitted will be returned.

The Tax Reform Act of 1986 requires all taxpayers who claim an exemption for a dependent who is at least 5 years old by the end of the tax year, to list the dependent's Social Security number on Form 1040 or Form 1040A. This applies to tax returns due after Dec. 31, 1987, disregarding any extensions.

The Social Security number requirement applies to any dependent claimed on the tax return, including adults and children. If the dependent does not have a Social Security number, either the taxpayer or the dependent should apply for one as soon as possible, according to Helen Gammons, a paralegal specialist at legal assistance office.

For more information, call the legal assistance office at 876-9015.

VA insurance dividends set record

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — The Veterans Administration will pay more than $12 million in dividends to Alabama veterans who hold active VA life insurance policies. Nationwide, the total payout will exceed $1 billion—the largest amount in the 70-year history of the program.

The record payout will be sent automatically to 35,416 veterans in the state on the anniversary date of their policies. The payment will be in the form of dividend checks or one of five other payment options they selected. No application from individual policyholders is necessary.

Samuel Maraman, VA Regional Office director in Montgomery, said the dividend reflects both favorable claims experience and high yields on trust funds invested in U.S. Government securities.

Government life insurance policies were issued to veterans of World Wars I and II and the Korean Conflict from 1919 to 1966. Only those policies that have been kept in force receive annual dividend distributions.

Nationwide, nearly 3 million veterans will receive insurance dividends. In Alabama, more than 30,000 ( See VA, cont'd on page 12 )

King's legacy

Editor:

During his short lifetime, Martin Luther King Jr. had a great impact on black people, the American public, and the world. For millions of people he still has a very special meaning. He is remembered as a Christian, a minister, a friend, an eloquent speaker, a brave warrior, and an intellectual who never lost the common touch with reality. He was known as a witty man with a delightful sense of humor; yet he possessed the leadership to meet with presidents and kings. Also, he was a brother who marched with sharecroppers and sanitation workers as the catalyst for social change during a turbulent era. He became a martyr who lost his life fighting for the freedom of poor and disenfranchised people everywhere.

As we think about Dr. King and about the dreams he had—dreams of freedom and equality for all mankind, we see him marching, strong and fearless, inspiring not just a nation, but a world with his dreams. We see him combating, seemingly insurmountable odds to lead a people closer to the dream. For us, Dr. King's dreams have special significance because we too, believe in the power of dreams. We believe that if we all work hard and attempt to hurdle all obstacles set before us—we can realize our dreams.

Dr. King's philosophy of life provoked an entire nation to think. Men began to think of each other as men regardless of race, creed, sex or religion, but all as children of God with a purpose and dream in life.

Clear vision and sound leadership impacted upon the American generation and will continue to impact upon future generations. He is a symbol of hope to us and to our children. Americans have a long way to go to fully realize Dr. King's dream. However, we have made tremendous progress largely because of him. His dream lives on in all of us... his dream lives on in me.

Child care needs

Editor:

After seeing the entire front page of the Jan. 11 Redstone Rocket devoted to "providing for our children," I feel compelled to write a letter. There are still some of us who fit the traditional mold of a working father and a mother who remains at home caring for the children. The purpose of my letter is not to discuss the pros and cons of traditional child care versus public child care facilities. You and I made that decision when we chose the standard of living that we try to maintain.

I do not criticize those who choose to work and enroll their children in public facilities. I am disturbed, however, when I see attempts to sway public opinion in seeking answers to child care needs. My concern is that the public is asking for increased government participation in providing child care (i.e. tax credits, subsidized facilities/meals). Increased government participation will lead to increased government spending and ultimately make it more difficult for those of us who have chosen the traditional method of child care.

Caring for our children is a personal matter and is not the responsibility of the government or any employer. Let's all fulfill that responsibility and not invite unnecessary government intervention.

Seeks witnesses

Editor:

On Thursday, Dec. 29 an automobile accident occurred at the intersection of Golf Course Road and Goss Road at approximately 12:45 p.m. Anyone who witnessed this accident, especially the black gentleman who conferred with the black female driver of one of the vehicles, is requested to contact Mrs. Mary R. Parker, phone 881-5487. There is a major dispute as to how and where the accident actually occurred. Was the accident on Golf Course Road or in the intersection? Witnesses assistance is requested.

Nominations open for volunteers of the year

BY PAM ROGERS

The search is on for three outstanding people from the ranks of the Redstone community's volunteer workers.

Volunteers from 11 volunteer agencies, the chapels, private agencies and established committees put in thousands of hours of work on this post every month, according to Sue Paddock, installation volunteer coordinator.

She's looking for three who have put in extra effort, making outstanding contributions to the community in the past year.

"The Redstone Arsenal Volunteer of the Year Award Program was established last year by the Installation Volunteer Advisory Council, comprised of all agencies in the community which utilize volunteers," Paddock said.

Three categories for awards have been established, based on the composition of volunteer areas in the community. The first is the Youth Service Volunteer Award, which can be presented to anyone who works with the Youth Sports Program, the Youth Education Program, or any other youth activity or project on post.

The second category is the Sustained Service Award, for long-term commitment to any of the volunteer agencies on the installation.

The third category is the Community Service Involvement Award, for contributing significant service to a volunteer agency, community event or project.

Awards will be presented at the annual Redstone Arsenal Volunteer Recognition Luncheon as part of honors accorded to all on-post volunteers. The luncheon is scheduled for April 10 at the Officers Club.

In addition to the honor of being named Redstone Arsenal volunteers of the year, the recipients will also represent the arsenal in the annual Huntsville-Madison County Volunteers of the Year Awards Ceremony scheduled for the evening of April 10.

Although Paddock expects most nominations to come from the volunteer agencies themselves, anyone can suggest a person for nomination.

"If someone feels they know of an individual who deserves this honor, they should contact me.

"I want the community to know that they can honor deserving volunteers," Paddock said.

Deadline for nominations is Feb. 15. Forms can be picked up at the Army Community Service office in building 3212. For more information, call Paddock at 876-0446.

Inauguration events will have Army participation

BY J.C. MATHEWS

WASHINGTON — When George Bush becomes the president of the United States Jan. 20, the Army will be there, as it was when George Washington took his first oath of office on April 30, 1789, and as it has been for every inauguration since.

Army participation in events commemorating the new administration's ascent to the White House began in early 1988—before the election took place—and will continue into 1989.

The 1989 Armed Forces Inaugural Committee, a joint service agency chaired by Maj. Gen. Donald C. Hilbert, was formed in February 1988 to begin planning the military's assistance to the inauguration. Originally staffed by five military personnel from around the Washington, D.C., area, the AFIC has now ballooned to more than 1,500 for the job of coordinating the efforts of some 7,000 servicemembers involved in the inaugural spectacle.

Although the AFIC comprises members of five branches of service (including the Coast Guard), a third of its personnel are Total Army members—active and reserve component soldiers. And, according to AFIC spokeswoman 2nd Lt. Jayme Casgrain-Guido, soldiers take part in every facet of 1989 military inaugural support.

"It is difficult to highlight any one area where the Army is involved," said Casgrain-Guido, "because they're involved in all aspects of the AFIC, from setting up communications to escorting distinguished visitors. The Army is the executive agent for the committee and, therefore, has considerable representation in all its activities."

Casgrain-Guido said that most of AFIC's members are permanently assigned to units in the Washington, D.C. area. As a cost-saving measure, some were temporarily detailed to AFIC enroute from overseas to assignments in the continental U.S.

Army ceremonial participation in many of Jan. 18-22 Inauguration Week activities will be viewed by national television audiences, and is scheduled (pending final approval) to include:

- The Golden Knights skydiving team parachuting down to the Lincoln Memorial for the Jan. 18 inaugural opening celebration. The United States Army Herald Trumpets will also perform, as they will during many of the week's ceremonies.

- A 131-man, all-Army package of entertainment at the American Presidential Pageant in the D.A.R. Constitution Hall. Slated to perform are The United States Army Band (Pershing's Own), The United States Army Chorus, the 3rd U.S. Infantry (The Old Guard) and the Old Guard's Fife and Drum Corps. The entire contingent will take the stage for three shows Jan. 18 and 19.

- The U.S. Army Field Band leading all marching units in the Inauguration Day Parade. Other marching units will include elements of the Old Guard, featuring its Caisson Platoon, the Fort Sill Half Section horse-drawn artillery unit, the Alaska Army National Guard Eskimo Scouts (in arctic overwhites and beaver hats). In all, almost a quarter of the 2,156 military participants in the parade will be soldiers.

Casgrain-Guido emphasized that Army support to the inauguration is hardly limited to ceremonial participation. More than 1,000 military personnel are slated to work "behind the scenes" in various roles.

The AFIC is providing transportation services to VIPs and participants in inaugural events. More than 550 military drivers have been assembled to form the Inaugural Committee Motor Pool. From various military occupational specialties in all the services, the drivers underwent an "inspection" of sorts after reporting for AFIC duty. Those rated among the top 140 in military appearance, bearing, poise and alertness were selected to drive for the motor pool's Executive Support Section and its three branches—White House, Governors, and Production (which includes entertainers and band members).

A medical crew from AFIC will set up some 35 aid stations, complete with equipment and supplies, to handle emergencies during Inauguration Day activities. On hand near the swearing-in ceremony site will be 35 physicians and 12 two-man roving medical patrols armed with surgical instruments and supply sets. The AFIC medical personnel are primarily intended to treat servicemembers working during the festivities.

AFIC personnel will also manage the Inaugural Coordination and Information Center, a state-of-the-art communications and monitoring facility. Patterned after communications centers at the 1984 Olympics and the 1987 Pan American Games, some 36 agencies operating at the ICIC can monitor inaugural activities on a host of video screens and react swiftly if problems arise. Images from events are fed into the ICIC from network and cable television channels, as well as cameras monitoring the parade route.

The job of providing communications between the various inaugural sites—particularly during the parade—has been filled with 75 point-to-point telephone lines, 60 dial lines, and 69 radio nets (encompassing some 1,400 hand-held radios). This network will link points along the parade route to a command post.

Even larger is the job of furnishing necessities to the thousands of military personnel participating. Three dining facilities will supply meals, including some 4,500 box lunches, to military participants. Billeting and cold weather clothing is also being arranged for those who require it.

Participants in the parade, held in January's normally frigid weather, will be able to warm themselves in 53 AFIC warming tents offering heaters, hot beverages and soup.

"It's been a big job so far," said Casgrain-Guido, "and it's going to get increasingly hectic around here as we get closer to the big day. We'll be ready, though." (Editor's note: SSgt. Mathews writes for the Army News Service.)

Army assesses Gorbachev proposal on force reduction

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Army says Soviet General Secretary Gorbachev's unilateral conventional force reduction proposal is "significant" and "may bode well" for upcoming conventional force negotiations between NATO and the Warsaw Pact.

However, it is important to keep the reductions in perspective, the Army said in a Dec. 22 assessment message to its forces in the field. The assessment outlined the Soviet proposal, questions that remain, and a North Atlantic Council proposal for conventional force talks with the Warsaw Pact that begin early next year.

Although the Soviet proposal will reduce somewhat the overwhelming superiority the Warsaw Pact now enjoys, the Army assessment pointed out, "After the reductions have been taken, the Warsaw Pact will still retain an advantage over NATO of roughly 20,000 tanks and 21,000 artillery pieces."

On Dec. 7 Gorbachev proposed the following Soviet conventional force reductions:

- 500,000 men from the Soviet active armed forces (approximately 10 percent of their total active force).
- Reduction of 50,000 men and 5,000 tanks from East Germany, Czechoslovakia, and Hungary, to include removal of six tank divisions and withdrawal of some air assault forces and bridging (amounting to cuts of about nine percent in personnel and 47 percent in tanks in non-Soviet Warsaw Pact countries).

- Reduction of 10,000 tanks, 8,500 artillery pieces, and 800 combat aircraft from the European part of the Soviet Union (amounting to cuts in tanks, artillery, and combat aircraft of 28 percent, 27 percent and seven percent respectively).

The Army's assessment message indicated that several questions remain about the Soviet's announced reductions, to include:

- What did Gorbachev mean when he said the withdrawn forces would be "disbanded"?
- Where will the tanks being withdrawn from Eastern Europe come from since 5,000 are considerably more than the number normally found in six Soviet divisions?
- Where will the other announced equipment reductions occur (artillery pieces, combat aircraft, etc)?
- What will be done with the reduced equipment?
- What kind of "bridging unit reductions" will occur?
- Will reductions in divisions, tanks, and aircraft be accompanied by Soviet force structure reductions?
- Will support infrastructure reductions accompany the removal of six tank divisions?

"We will be watching carefully to assess the implementations of these reductions," the message said. It also stated, "We will pursue a better understanding of the details. The reductions...demonstrate that the Soviet leadership has recognized that its forces in Eastern Europe far exceed the requirements for a reasonable defense."

The day after Gorbachev's proposal, the North Atlantic Council proposed its own conventional force reduction framework for the conventional stability talks (CST) which are scheduled to begin early next year between NATO and the Warsaw Pact.

The council proposed reduction in the number of tanks on each side to roughly 20,000, limitation on the number of tanks in the forces of any one country to about 12,000, reduction to parity in artillery pieces and armored troop carriers, stability measures to enhance transparency and constrain deployments and readiness, and an effective verification regime.

Despite questions about Gorbachev's proposal, the U.S. Army assessment message said the Soviet initiative should be welcomed by the West as an indicator of Soviet willingness to negotiate seriously toward a posture where both sides will have conventional forces "sufficient for defense but insufficient for aggression." # 'Antiquated' military bases

Defense secretary accepts recommended base closings

BY JAMES GARAMONE

WASHINGTON — Secretary of Defense Frank C. Carlucci has accepted the report of the commission on base realignment and closure, which calls for closure of 86 bases, partial closure of five more and realignment of 54 others.

"After careful reading of the report and discussions with the secretaries of the services and the chairman of the joint chiefs, I have decided to approve in total the commission's recommendations," he said during a Jan. 5 news conference.

Carlucci also announced that DOD has requested $1 billion over two years in seed money to start the process. The commission recommended at least $300 million for start-up costs. "(The amount of money) reflects our belief that we can move even faster (on closures and realignments) than the commission envisioned," he said.

Carlucci called for relief from legislation so DOD can transfer funds into the closure and realignment account.

The environment and plight of civilian workers were also stressed. "There are environmental and personnel challenges. We will take care of them," Carlucci said. "We will not walk away from the bases we are closing without taking care of our environmental responsibilities."

For civilian workers, he said DOD would make every effort to find employment for those displaced and that they would have priority placement rights.

Carlucci called the base closings a unique opportunity to save tax dollars and improve military efficiency in the process. He praised the commission for placing the military value of the bases above other considerations. "When the force structure changes, we shouldn't be forced to keep antiquated bases," he said.

Adm. William J. Crowe Jr., chairman of the joint chiefs of staff, said that it made good sense to cut back on marginal installations. He said the closures and realignments would not adversely affect military operations and that the commission's recommendations had the support of the joint chiefs of staff.

Carlucci said that more bases would have been closed had it not been for the six-year payback rule. Under this, only bases that would pay back closing costs within six years could be closed.

However, Carlucci said he hopes the momentum generated by the commission will allow the Department of Defense to close marginal or outdated bases without resorting to the same procedure in the future.

Top drill sergeant a 'non-commissioned officer first'

BY MARIANNE CLINEDINST

Sgt. Lucky Robertson has been named the drill sergeant of the fourth quarter for fiscal 1988 at Ordnance Missile and Munitions Center and School.

Robertson, 27, is a drill sergeant in C Company, 832nd Ordnance Battalion.

The competition is based on how effectively drill sergeants conduct drill and ceremony, physical training, and soldier counseling. Competition is held once every quarter and usually takes about three days to complete. Four units are usually involved but this time only two competed.

"I had to prepare myself mentally more than anything," Robertson said, "because I was graded on the things I do daily."

Robertson believes competing for and winning this title will be very beneficial to him in the future. "It molds and enhances your leadership abilities, and because being a drill sergeant is a challenging job, it helps your military career," he said.

The job is challenging because of the amount of time it entails, according to Robertson. "I spend about 13 hours a day with soldiers," he said.

He and his wife, Karen, have three children. Robertson said his family and his chain of command were very supportive during the competition.

"Drill sergeant is just a title; I want people to look at me as a non-commissioned officer first, then as a drill sergeant," he said.

IN THE FIELD — Robertson instructs soldiers from C Company, 832nd Ordnance Battalion on field preparation at the field training exercise site.

Logistics center director believes in quality of workers

BY PAM ROGERS

The man who is responsible for making sure soldiers in the field receive the products of the Missile Command on time and in the right numbers doesn't believe the most important component of logistics is parts, or training, or any of the other tangible things sent from point A to point B.

For Jim Flinn, people are what make MICOM, logistically speaking, the best in the Army.

Flinn came home to Huntsville four years ago to serve as the assistant project manager for support in the Patriot Project Office. Huntsville is the latest stop in a career which included jobs in two countries, several states and a promotion to the ranks of the Senior Executive Service at the age of 36.

Now, at 43, he's the director of MICOM's Missile Logistics Center. In a way, he's following in the footsteps of his father, Jim Jr., who worked in the Pershing Project Office for 23 years. He's worked for other Army Materiel Command subordinate elements, at AMC Headquarters and at the Department of the Army, but he feels fortunate to be working for the command which he considers to have the best readiness posture in the Army.

"Having the opportunity to be the director of the Missile Logistics Center makes me extremely proud," he said.

Flinn has had the opportunity to view logistics from several different angles, thus giving him the chance to see the good job MICOM does for its customers.

His first job after graduating from the supply intern program at Red River Army Depot, Texas, was in Germany. When he returned to the United States, he worked at AMC headquarters and at the Pentagon. He has also held jobs at Rock Island Arsenal and with the Aviation Systems Command in St. Louis. While in St. Louis, he was promoted to SES and went back to Washington as a deputy to the DA deputy chief of staff for Logistics.

"And in those almost 20 years prior to this job, in every one of those positions, the reputation of MICOM and the logistics people of MICOM, was always noticeably on top of the AMC heap. MICOM has a reputation in Europe, Washington, Rock Island and St. Louis as the best in AMC," he said.

The reason MICOM is the best, he believes, is because the people who work here are so good. "Not because of the geographic location. Missile logistics is very high tech, compared to some of its counterparts. It demands a level of skill and professionalism that my predecessors have seemed to nurture. It's the people in the center that make its reputation."

Flinn believes that since logistics can be so complicated it's possible to lose sight of the relatively simple-sounding goal of the logistician: keeping soldiers ready to fight.

"Some people don't have an appreciation for what readiness means in the practical sense. For example, last week, two Navy fighter pilots were put into a difficult situation. If those aircraft had not been ready to perform their mission, the outcome could have been different. That's (the sort of thing) the Missile Logistics Center is responsible for. Missiles, missile parts, missile training. That's what readiness is. We have air defense weapons in Europe that have to be ready to operate on a second's notice."

Flinn sees his mission as two-fold. First, he wants to help MICOM maintain, and if possible, improve its reputation for excellence in readiness.

His other responsibility, as he sees it, is to provide, through matrix management, "total logistic support to the project managers, the program executive officers and the level two managers that run the system side of MICOM."

"We are just coming out of a two- to three-year period where this command has been sorting out what matrix management means. I intend to extend materiel management into all project offices, to provide the level of logistics support that they have a right to expect," he said.

Flinn is now in the process of restructuring the deputy director's position to include not only a hand in running the center, but also to include direction of the Project Management Support Directorate, encompassing the 200 people who work for the MLC but sit in the project offices.

He sees the matrix management concept as an opportunity to make a cohesive logistics community within the command.

"I think it gives us the opportunity to get away from a 'we-they' circumstance and gives us the opportunity to build a much tighter bond within the MICOM logistics family, and also within the logisticians that support the project managers," he said.

He also sees challenges ahead.

"The next decade is not going to be like the past decade. The resources won't be there. New systems won't be coming down the pike, but what we will have is modification of weapons in the field. The challenge will be to take weapons out of the hands of the troops in the field, and improve them without degrading the mission," he said.

One way the center is planning to meet the challenges of the future is by conducting its own in-house training program for entry-level logisticians, providing them with the knowledge possessed by people who have done the job and know what it's about.

"No other command that I know of has a program like that. I would hope that a future director of the Missile Logistics Center is sitting in that class right now," Flinn said.

Flinn also believes in the benefits of professional associations.

"Jack Isom (the previous MLC director) fostered the growth of the local chapter of the Society of Logistics Engineers. I believe that association with other government and non-government logisticians is important, especially as folks approach senior positions."

Flinn holds a bachelor's degree in finance from the University of Alabama and a master's degree in systems management from the University of Southern California.

Huntsville is home for Flinn and for his wife, Nancy. The couple has two children. Josh is 8 and Katie is 6. Both attend Weatherly Elementary School. The whole family is active in the YMCA's Indian Guides and Indian Princesses organization.

Redstone lawmen aid arrest of Florida fugitive

BY SKIP VAUGHN

Information provided by Redstone authorities led to the arrest of an area man wanted on a felony warrant from Florida.

Robert Harold Neeley, 28, was arrested Jan. 10 in Scottsboro on a 1985 warrant for attempted first-degree murder, aggravated battery and possession of a weapon in commission of a felony. The charges were in connection with a Feb. 20, 1985 disturbance at a bar in Orlando in which a man was allegedly beaten with a pipe.

An investigation leading to the afternoon arrest began that morning at a Redstone Arsenal gate. About 8 a.m., a concrete truck from the Alabama Concrete Company tried to get into Gate 3 at Redstone Road and stopped to get a visitor's pass, according to Capt. Wayne McGurk, chief of MP operations.

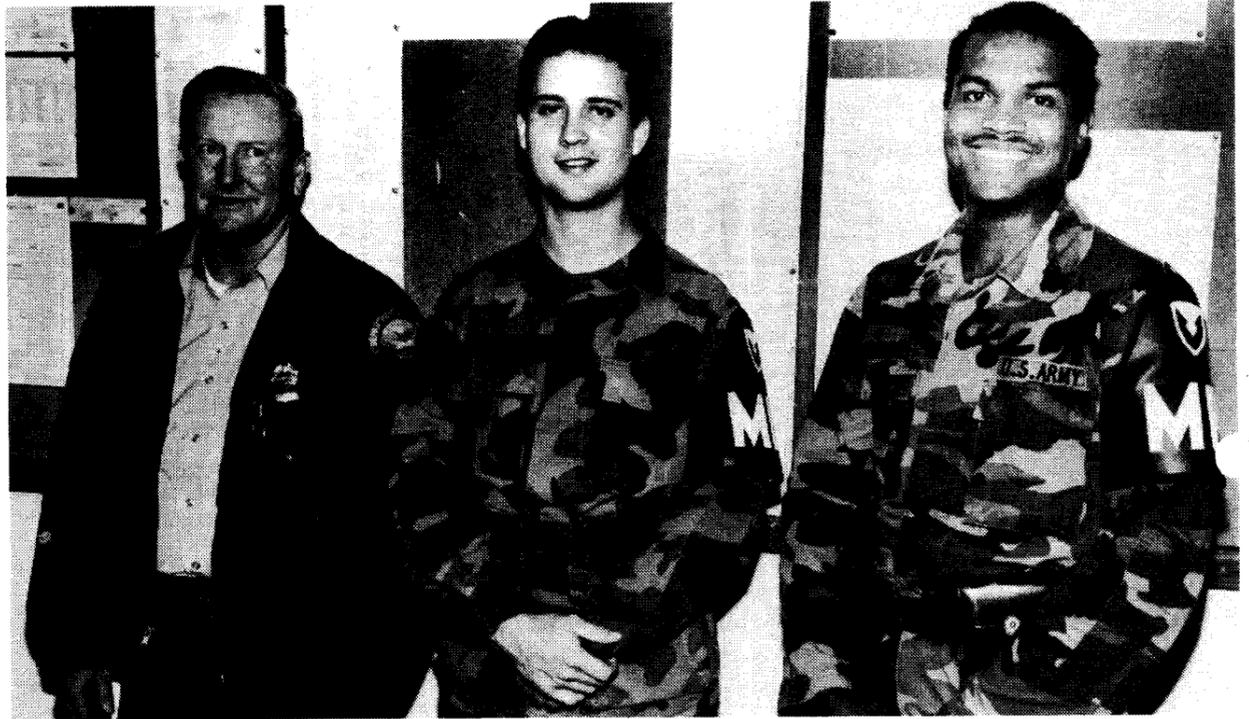

The driver was stopped by one of the guards, Everette Hyde, and asked for identification. "All the individual said was 'I don't have any because I left it at home, I don't need it at work,'" McGurk said.

"He said his name was Robert Neeley and he gave his date of birth as March 10, 1959." The information was run on the National Crime Information Center computer and turned up a felony warrant issued in Orange County, Fla., in 1985.

The man was placed under arrest by a military policeman, Sp4 Erick Frederickson. Also at the scene were guards Hyde, Capt. John Reeves and Lt. Jackie Martin; and another MP, Sgt. Grover Leigh.

Enroute to the MP station, the man said his name was really Coy Neeley. "On the way back to the MP station after we arrested him, he said 'My name's Coy, I'm just using my brother's ID because I don't have a drivers license,'" McGurk related.

The man was placed in a detention cell on the outstanding warrant and also for driving without a license. His fingerprints were taken to verify his identity. Later it was determined that he was in fact the brother, Coy.

HELPED INVESTIGATION — Among those involved in what led to the arrest of a fugitive in Scottsboro were, from left, guard Everette Hyde and military policemen Sp4 Erick Frederickson and Sgt. Grover Leigh.

"The one we got was Coy, the brother, but information we derived from his apprehension led to the apprehension of Robert," McGurk said. Coy, charged with operating a vehicle without a drivers license, was released.

Robert Neeley was arrested about 12:51 p.m. while driving a pickup truck at the intersection of Alabama 79 and Boxes Cove Road in Scottsboro, according to investigator George Tubbs of the Jackson County Sheriffs Department. Others at the scene from the sheriffs department included chief deputy Mike Wells, James Goolesby and Chuck Phillips; and Gregory Stephens of Scottsboro Police Department.

"I read the fugitive warrant to him and told him he was being arrested," Tubbs said. Neeley offered no resistance and confirmed his identity, according to the investigator.

He waived extradition and the Orange County (Fla.) Sheriffs Department made arrangements to travel to Scottsboro on Jan. 11.

Re-enlistees get boost from top

WASHINGTON — When 10 soldiers at Fort Sill, Okla., gathered Dec. 17, 1988, to take part in a group re-enlistment ceremony, they had some added anticipation — for the ceremony's leader was to be none other than Army Chief of Staff Gen. Carl E. Vuono.

"The general had come down here to observe the III Corps Artillery's semiannual combined-arms capabilities exercise," explained MSgt. David Hamilton, re-enlistment non-commissioned officer for III Corps. "Our commander, Brig. Gen. David Cole, had learned that Spec. Twyman of the 75th Field Artillery Brigade desired to have the chief of staff perform the swearing-in. So he, the commander, thought it would be especially memorable if several re-enlisting soldiers could be assembled for the occasion. We and the career counselors from the III Corps Artillery were able to find 10 such persons, ranging in rank from private first class to top sergeant."

Hamilton added that the ceremony took place in a field environment. There, Vuono expressed pride in having been invited to lead the ceremony, noting his awareness of Sill's exemplary record in re-enlistment.

Besides the re-enlistees themselves, at least one spouse made it a point to attend the ceremony, Hamilton said. "Her presence added all that much more to the team effort in bringing these people together for such an occasion."

He listed the re-enlistees as follows: Cpl. Howard C. Laury and Spec. Robert E. Twyman, HHB, 75th Field Artillery Brigade; 1st Sgt. Homer Jackson Jr., B Battery, 1st Battalion, 17th Field Artillery; Spec. Orlanda W. Gordon, C Battery, 1st Battalion, 17th Field Artillery; Sgt. Michael R. A. Edwards, C Battery, 3rd Battalion, 18th Field Artillery; PFC Floyd W. Iker, B Battery, 3rd Battalion, 18th Field Artillery; Spec. Fredrick Thompson, HHB, 3rd Battalion, 18th Field Artillery; Spec. Raymond D. Zellers, B Company, 4th Battalion, 31st Infantry; Cpl. William N. Barnes Jr., HMC, 47th Combat Support Battalion; and Sgt. David A. Knie, 225th Maintenance Company.

Hamilton said that he and his fellow unit members view the chief of staff's visit and personal involvement as particularly welcome in this "The Year of the NCO." (Arnews)

Dooley receives decoration for meritorious service

A MICOM worker has been presented with the Department of Army's Decoration for Meritorious Civilian Service, the highest award which can be bestowed upon a civilian by the Missile Command.

Jerry L. Dooley, the deputy project manager for the Non-Line of Sight Project Office, received the award from Maj. Gen. Gus Cianciolo, commander of the Missile Command and Redstone Arsenal, during a ceremony at the command headquarters Jan. 6.

Dooley was recognized for his work as acting deputy program executive officer for Close Combat Missiles, which managed the Army's Advanced Antitank Weapon Systems and the Hellfire and Tow missiles. The office has since been merged with another to form the Program Executive Office for Fire Support.

"His outstanding dedication, technical expertise, and unparalleled leadership were instrumental in resourcing and forming the organization from a zero base operation. This unsurpassed achievement has been of major significance in advancing the Close Combat Missile Systems and overall missiles of the United States Army Missile Command," stated the citation which accompanied the medal.

Dooley, the son of O. L. and Evelyn Dooley of Gadsden, received a bachelor's degree in electrical engineering from Auburn University in 1958, and a master's degree in electrical engineering from the University of Alabama in 1964. He has been employed by MICOM since 1962.

He and his wife, Martha, have two children. Their daughter, Terri, lives in Atlanta, Ga. and son, Glenn, lives in Melbourne, Fla.

DECORATED — Maj. Gen. Gus Cianciolo congratulates Jerry Dooley after presenting him with the Decoration for Meritorious Civilian Service.

Board competition proves worthwhile for soldier

BY MARIANNE CLINEDINST

Months of preparation paid off for a soldier at Ordnance Missile and Munitions Center and School.

Spec. Zenia Patrick, 22, an officer personnel management-clerk, won the title of post soldier of the month for December.

Patrick said she studied for two months before going to the first board which was the soldier of the month board for A Company, 73rd Ordnance Battalion.

After that board she competed at the 73rd Ordnance Battalion board, the 269th Ordnance Brigade board, and then the post board.

"I thought I would make it to the post soldier of the month board, because I was prepared," Patrick said.

"It took about one month to compete at all four boards," she said, "and I did a lot of reading prior to that."

To prepare herself, Patrick used a study guide that A Company provided and Army regulations found at the OMMCS Technical Library.

"My husband, Lewis, helped me the most," she said. "He studied with me and asked me questions about every other night."

Her chain of command and her supervisor also were a big help by giving her the help she needed and time off to prepare for the boards, she said.

Patrick believes going before the board is definitely worthwhile.

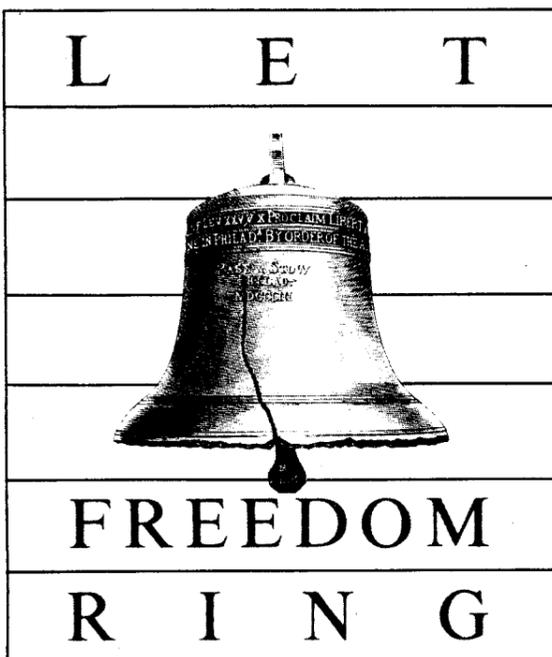

"I encourage everyone to compete at boards," she said. "It's beneficial whether you pursue a military or civilian career."

Victory has its spoils, and Patrick received $800 in cash and prizes, and two Army Achievement Medals for her accomplishment.

"The two biggest rewards I received were experience and confidence," she said.

COMMUNITY SERVICE — Capt. George Renison, Redstone's post veterinarian, looks on as members of Patti Simon's third grade class at Valley Fellowship Christian Academy examine slides of dog and cat parasites. Renison, along with Spec. Art Martinez and Spec. Kenneth Gaines, visited the school last Friday to give a lesson to the students on pet care.

SDC has its first King birthday observance

BY EARLA LOCKHART

More than 200 persons attended the first Martin Luther King Jr. birthday observance sponsored by the Equal Employment Opportunity offices at the Strategic Defense Command and the Huntsville Division, Corps of Engineers, last Thursday.

Dr. Carl H. Marbury, interim president of Alabama A&M University, spoke on the national theme "Living the Dream: Let Freedom Ring!" to the employees gathered in the SDC Complex cafeteria.

"Dr. King met the criteria of what it means to be a citizen of the world. He was an ordinary man, yet extraordinary in so many ways," said Marbury, who holds degrees from A&M, Oberlin College, Vanderbilt University and Harvard University.

Marbury, who once discussed his personal dreams with King, credited the fairness of the United States Constitution with helping to validate King's dream by affirming the rights of black Americans as full-fledged American citizens.

"This country has the oldest living Constitution in the world and the first Bill of Rights in the world. Our Constitution was the first in the history of the world to talk about moral and ethical values as it related to citizenship. There is not a single country in the world that has a Constitution quite like ours—a Constitution that is grounded in Judeo-Christian, ethical and moral values about what it is to be a human being and then what it is to be a citizen of the United States of America," Marbury said.

The university administrator emphasized the role of education in validating the dreams of King and challenged the standing-room-only audience to "look beyond selfish insights and develop a larger vision."

"At Alabama A&M University, we intend to be a university of excellence. We are going to be on the 'cutting edge' of technology, science, computers, mathematics, and education. You can't have a dream while living a nightmare. We have a nightmare anytime we have no concern for education," Marbury said.

"Today we are helping to validate Dr. King's dreams and visions. We are coming to grips with the future. We aren't going to allow business as usual when we think of Dr. King and remember what he did."

Marbury repeatedly challenged the audience not to take America for granted, but to honor our nation and our Constitution.

"If we are to realize the dream, I call all of you to leadership. Ask yourselves 'what do Dr. King's life and teachings really mean?' and then do something!" Marbury said.

The stage was set for Marbury by Theodis Acklin of the MICOM Security Assistance Management Directorate. Acklin's remarks included a stirring rendition of excerpts from King's "I Have a Dream" speech.

The Martin Luther King Jr. birthday tribute will be an annual observance at the SDC Complex, according to Melvin Kelley and John Brown, EEO officers for SDC and HND.

Other program participants included Col. Samuel N. Liberatore, SDC deputy for operations; Col. Charles T. Myers, commander of Corps of Engineers; and Mary Peoples, SDC Federal Women's Program manager.

Black colleges to get defense surplus property

WASHINGTON — Some 117 historically black colleges and universities throughout the United States have gained access to federal surplus personal property under control of defense logistics officials.

Having recently been designated through the Defense Department's certification process as a "service educational activity of special interest to the armed services," the National Association for Equal Opportunity in Higher Education entered into a "donation agreement" Jan. 6 with Defense Department officials.

The agreement, said association president Dr. Samuel L. Myers, entitles the Washington-based organization to receive such surplus personal property as tires, metal-working machinery, agricultural equipment, hand tools, lumber, photographic equipment, medical/dental/veterinary equipment and supplies, automatic data processing equipment, and office furniture.

"The list totals about 100 categories of property," Myers explained during the agreement's signing ceremony at the Pentagon. "As the items come into our possession, we'll funnel them to the appropriate black colleges and universities as part of our efforts to foster and encourage the institutions' educational purposes."

The new relationship is expected to be mutually beneficial, said John W. Shannon, the assistant secretary of the Army for installations and logistics. He echoed Myers' observation that "these institutions do play a pivotal role in the production of black military leaders. In fact, 75 percent of our black military officers are graduates of the historically black colleges and universities."

Shannon added, "By this first step, we'll be able to interest other agencies in taking part in such a worthwhile enterprise. We in the armed services know the importance of young people. We survive on youth. I hope this agreement will be a vehicle for opening doors to other military services and government agencies to take part in this type of program."

Both officials stressed that the program's success will hinge largely on how much support it receives from those local commanders who can identify and earmark for transfer the eligible items of surplus property.

"Our role as coordinator and facilitator of the property transfer offers both opportunity and challenge,"

Myers said. "By matching the right post commander's surplus assets with what's needed at the right school, we have the chance to expand the school's effectiveness. And by faithfully carrying out our stewardship over those transferred assets, we can assure the government's 'return on investment' from the program." (Arnews)

VA

World War II veterans with National Service Life Insurance (prefix "V") will each receive an average of $350.

World War I veterans holding U.S. Government Life Insurance (prefix "K") policies will receive an average of $257. There are currently 510 of these veterans in Alabama.

Dividends will average $310 for more than 3,000 Alabama veterans who have Veterans Special Life Insurances (prefixes "RS" and "W").

Holdings of "J," "JR" and "JS" policies—Veterans Reopened Insurance — will receive 1989 dividends averaging $284.

Individual payments under each of the seven programs paying dividends vary according to age, type of insurance and length of time a policy has been in force.

The VA also administers a special life insurance program for disabled veterans and another offering mortgage life insurance coverage, neither of which pays dividends. The VA supervises a contract with a private carrier who underwrites Servicemen's Group Life Insurance for active-duty service members and reservists.

Jail visit shows soldiers where drug abuse can lead

BY MARIANNE CLINEDINST

The door slammed, the guards were armed, and for some there was no way out.

Fortunately for 269th Ordnance Brigade soldiers, they were only visiting Limestone Correctional Facility.

Soldiers in the brigade recently visited the facility as part of a Drug and Alcohol Abuse Prevention Program.

The brigade sends soldiers annually to reinforce Army regulations on drug and alcohol. "We just want soldiers to see the other side of the fence," said Lauren Barone, commander of A Company, 73rd Ordnance Battalion.

Limestone Correctional Facility is a four-year-old, minimum to medium security prison. It houses 972 inmates; of those, 122 are diagnosed as having Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome.

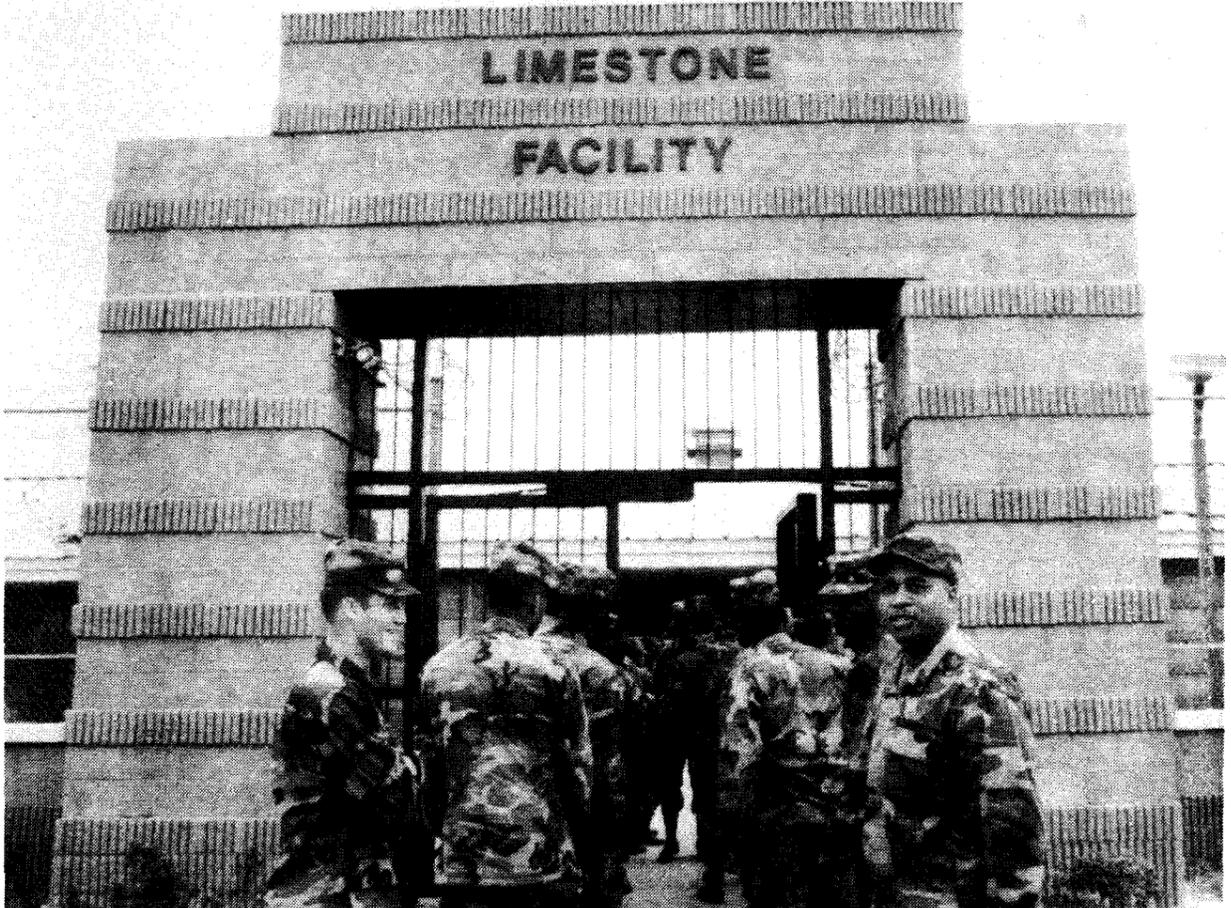

While the military offers a disciplined atmosphere, there are very few freedoms for inmates in a correctional facility. Inmates are told when to get up, make their beds, eat and when to go to sleep.

In solitary confinement at Limestone, inmates are only allowed out of their one-man cells for 45 minutes a day, and only shower once every other day for five minutes.

Inmates go into solitary confinement for their own safety—for such reasons as prior service as a policeman, judge or other jobs that might present a risk.

Although inmates don't have a lot of freedom, they are given the opportunity to take vocational education courses. These courses help inmates adapt better when they are released from prison and have to live on their own again.

The brigade wants to let soldiers know what abusing drugs and alcohol can lead to, Barone said.

JUST VISITING — Soldiers from the 269th Ordnance Brigade line up to tour the Limestone facility.
