Meteorologist sees right climate for his retirement

BY SKIP VAUGHN

In 1958 a German-born meteorologist was asked by an original member of Dr. Wernher von Braun's team to help the Army solve missile problems related to climate.

At the time, Dr. Oskar Essenwanger was working at the National Weather Records Center in Asheville, N.C. He was contacted by Dr. Gerhard Reisig, then director of the Army's Research Directorate at Redstone and an original member of von Braun's team of German rocket scientists. He helped the Army during the rest of his years in Asheville before coming to work here in January 1961 as chief of aerophysics for research directorate.

Essenwanger has worked in the research directorate ever since, providing the Army data on long-range atmospheric conditions that could affect missiles. Now, he has determined that the climate is right for him to retire. He wants to spend more time with his family while continuing to teach at the University of Alabama in Huntsville and continuing to write about climatology.

Another milestone this year has been his election as a Fellow of the American Meteorological Society. There are only about 380 Fellows in that professional group's more than 10,000 members. Those eligible for election have made "outstanding contributions to the atmospheric or related oceanic or hydrologic sciences or their applications during a substantial period of years," according to the group's bylaws.

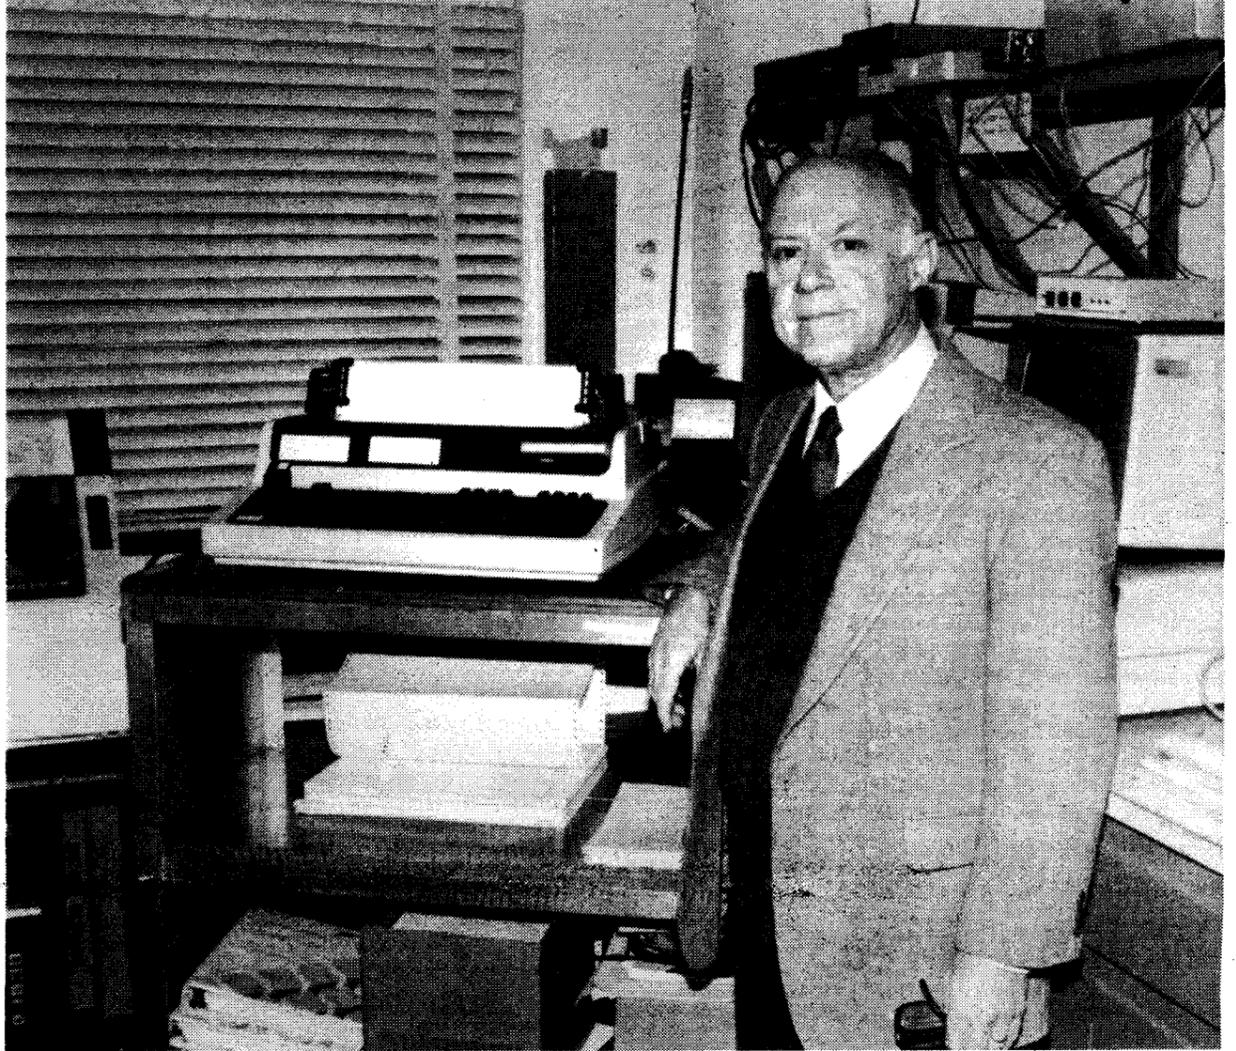

"I'm really honored about it because it's recognition by the peers of accomplishment of the scientific work," Essenwanger said.

He has also been recognized by the international community. The Marquis Who's Who Publications Board certified him as a subject of biographical record in Who's Who in the World, seventh edition, 1984-85. According to the certificate, inclusion is limited to "those individuals who have demonstrated outstanding achievement in their own fields of endeavor and who have, thereby, contributed significantly to the betterment of contemporary society."

A supervisory research physicist in the Research Directorate, Essenwanger is chief of the aerophysics group. The group consists of three other meteorologists, a mathematician and a secretary.

Essenwanger, 68, was born in Munich. He was one of five children. His father was vice president of a glass manufacturing plant, and his mother had a degree in home economics. He was drafted into the German Air Force in 1939 and was wounded in the Battle of the Bulge. His brother was killed in Czechoslovakia during the last days of the war.

After the war, Essenwanger worked for the German Weather Service, doing mostly statistical analysis. He had received a master's degree in environmental science in 1943 in Vienna, Austria, and went on to get a doctorate in 1950 from the University of Wuerzburg which is east of Frankfurt. He came to the U.S. in March 1956 to spend a year as a project associate at the University of Wisconsin.

"I had published a number of articles in Germany, and the atmospheric science department at the University of Wisconsin could not translate it because they didn't know enough German. I have to admit my style wasn't the easiest to read," he recalled. "And the German department couldn't translate it because they didn't know enough math. So they (the University of Wisconsin) sent me an invitation to show them what I had done because they wanted to put my method on computer."

It developed that Dr. Helmut Landsberg, then chief of climatology in the U.S. Weather Bureau, invited him to work in Asheville. He spent 1957-61 there as a research meteorologist before coming to Redstone Arsenal.

He and his wife, Katharina, whom he married in Germany in 1947, adopted two girls in 1967. They are now the "proud" grandparents of three children. Essenwanger's hobbies include playing the piano and organ and listening to classical music.

On March 3, he will retire from civil service but not from all of his work. "I can't be lazy, twiddling my thumbs," he said. "I still want to stay in research and teaching."

Building renovated

Former youth center reopens as Officers Club annex

The former Youth Center, building 114, will reopen Thursday as an annex to the Officers Club.

A grand opening ceremony is set for 5 p.m. Thursday at the facility which will be named later. "Once we get opened we're going to have a contest to name the club," said Lee Hicks, general manager of the Officers Club.

"It is an annex to the Officers Club for a younger clientele," he said. "Anyone that is a member of the Officers Club is more than welcome to go down there, but it's just a more casual type atmosphere than what they're used to at this club."

About a $50,000 renovation project has been completed on the building. The project started around mid-November and ended Feb. 23. The work was coordinated by Jim Mullen, chief of services division in the Directorate of Community and Family Activities, and his division. Bob Brown, director of DCFA, was the overall project leader, Hicks said.

Features of the newly-renovated building include a kitchen and charbroiler grill where people can cook their own steak, ribs and chicken; and a large game room with a pool table, four dartboards and assorted video games. The lounge area, which seats about 100 people, has a 50-inch big screen television, a bandstand and a dance floor. "It's got a nice plush lounge area— regular nice couches and easy chairs, a very relaxed atmosphere," Hicks said.

"We're hoping that the annex will cater to a segment of my membership that is not using the club on a regular basis— in particular, the young junior officer," he said.

Building 114 is located about a half mile from the Officers Club. It served as the Youth Center until a new facility opened last October.

Scheduled speakers at Thursday's opening ceremony include Maj. Gen. Gus Cianciolo, the post commander, and Col. Perry Butler, deputy post commander.

The Officers Club annex will be open Thursday through Monday. Hours include Thursday, 4:30-11 p.m.; Friday, 4:30 p.m. to midnight; Saturday, 11 a.m. to midnight; Sunday, noon to 7 p.m.; and Monday, 4:30-11 p.m.

"There's no reservations; it's just first come, first serve," Hicks said.

George Washington

Editor:

I would like to take this opportunity to commend you and your staff for the good job that you have done in covering Black History Month and other historical events of American history, but I must admit that I am disappointed in not seeing any writing in the Rocket concerning President George Washington's birthday and a few words about the Father of our great country.

Many people have not been taught what a tremendous role that President Washington performed in the starting of this great Republic, and I feel that your paper and the Huntsville News missed a great opportunity in not using your publications to promote the birthday of President Washington.

After all, very few Americans realized what a heroic venture President Washington and others performed when they signed their names to the Constitution of the United States. In so doing, they put their all on the altar of sacrifice.

Please, in the future, use your paper to enlighten those who may be living behind a dark curtain of incomprehensibility concerning one of America's greatest men.

In closing, let me also say that local banks are showing a particular favoritism in the closing of their banks on certain noble American heroes' birthdays and staying open on other statesmen's birthdays. This could cause banks and other businesses trouble in the future.

Waiting wives

Editor:

As a member of the Waiting Wives' Group, I would like to express my sincere gratitude to the command and staff at Redstone Arsenal for the outstanding support you have rendered to us whose husbands are on unaccompanied tours throughout the world.

Many of us are young and not knowledgeable of all the military terms and procedures; however, all of you have gone out of your way to be at our meetings and respond to our questions and needs. In addition to the commander and senior NCO's at all levels, we would like to thank Army Community Service, the Provost Marshal and Military Police, the Directorate of Community and Family Activities, particularly the Auto Craft Shop, for teaching us how to check the vital signs of our automobiles, and others too numerous to mention. A special word of thanks is extended to the Chapel staff and community whose untiring support makes it possible for our group to exist. Finally a special word of thanks to Col. Perry Butler, our coordinator, for all of his time, support and concern.

For all wives whose husbands are currently, or anticipating, unaccompanied tours, we invite and encourage you to become a member of our organization. The programs and activities are definitely enjoyable, entertaining, exciting, beneficial and supportive. For more information call Laura Briones 830-1478 or the Post Chapel 876-2409.

Grateful retiree

Editor:

Upon my retirement yesterday, Feb. 28, I would like to express my deepest appreciation to the Missile Command for the assistance given me in the past 18 months I've been assigned to Redstone Arsenal.

My thanks go out to the following personnel here at Redstone and the surrounding community; graphics—Lori and Earl, you honored my speedy request with beautiful and accurate graphics, thank you. Mr. Davis of Field Reproduction, you and your entire staff made things happen with such a "can do" attitude which seemed impossible but it met the deadline—thank you. Milton Stover of Forms Management, thank you for your many days of guidance in acquiring the right forms. Martha Smith of MILPO, your assistance in getting essential supplies into the ADAPCP Program was most helpful when there was no one else to ask, thank you. Angela Brown and staff of the installation Transportation Office, building 112, thank you for many years of friendship and assistance. Col. Valmor Girard, I say thanks for allowing me the privilege to serve with the Community Counseling Center, especially at a time in my career when it was so very important. The knowledge I've gained from the experience has richly enhanced my quality of life, thank you sir! Ruby Turner and staff, I thank you also for the patience you've shown and the relationship I've been afforded by working there and with you. This I could not have gotten anywhere else other than Redstone Arsenal—thank you.

Like my Army family, I thank my immediate family, my wife, children and grandchildren—beautiful and sweet little Cleo and April for their patience with granddaddy. I say thank you.

In ending one career and hopefully gaining another, I am most grateful to God.

Taking shortcut

Editor:

I read with great delight in the Rocket about the woman who was fined $100 for cutting through the arsenal after telling the guard she was going to Fox Army Community Hospital. I'm afraid you have only scratched the tip of an iceberg, though.

I come in Redstone Road (gate 3) every morning, drop off my wife at building 7770 (first building inside arsenal) and continue through the arsenal to my office in the SDC annex in Research Park. Every morning I follow or lead cars displaying contractor decals. They just come in gate 3 and go out gate 9 (Rideout Road) to their offices scattered around Research Park. They are not traveling on the arsenal to do business with government offices at that time of the morning, but rather taking a shortcut.

I know of another individual who cuts through the arsenal every day, who has a green civilian decal on his truck, yet does not work for the government. His mother works on the arsenal and took his vehicle and a letter of permission to use that vehicle to the vehicle registration office and obtained a green sticker. Now he can drive through the arsenal every day without legal authorization.

I suspect that half of the arsenal traffic is comprised of the two above categories. An occasional spot check at the gate of entry for civilian ID cards for vehicles with green decals and taking the name of the contractor and the office he is going to visit at 7 a.m., then calling that office to verify his visit will result in reducing arsenal traffic considerably.

Women's History Month observed in March

In 1647, Margaret Brent demanded a "place and voice" in the Maryland Assembly. Her request was denied. It wasn't until Aug. 18, 1920, that women finally won the right to vote when Tennessee became the 36th state to ratify the 19th Amendment to the United States Constitution.

The progress women made to achieve equality between 1647 and 1920 was slow and hard fought; progress has been steady since then and just as hard fought.

March is Women's History Month—a month intended to recognize the diverse contributions to American culture of women of all races, ages, ethnic groups and cultural backgrounds.

Anne Firon Scott, a novelist and women's historian, has noted that "Poets and novelists rarely overlook women. Historians almost always do."

Victor N. Ogilvie, an Air Force Reserve lieutenant colonel, agrees. "Eight years ago," he writes, "there was so little information available on women's history that some teachers wondered if there was enough material to cover (events for) an entire (women's history) week."

Today, military personnel and civilians tend to focus on "firsts"—the first women appointed to the Supreme Court; the first to become a vice presidential candidate; the first to be admitted to a formerly all-male country club.

"We can all take pride in the many and varied contributions of women to our nation's greatness," writes Ogilvie in a report on the contributions made by women throughout history. "Perhaps in the future, the history of women will not focus so much on first as on the lasting contributions of womankind to the history of all Americans."

Probably nowhere else does women's history in the United States tend to focus more on lasting contributions than in its armed forces.

The American armed forces are recognized around the world as being the leader in providing opportunities for women to excel—even though law bars them from combat roles.

Symbolic of that recognition: The Department of Defense's Women's History Month Observance, scheduled for March 8 at the Pentagon. It will focus on the history women in the military service, and highlights will be taped for distribution worldwide.

Guest speaker is retired Air Force Brig. Gen. Wilma Vaught, head of the Women in Military Service for America Memorial Foundation spearheading the construction of a memorial at Arlington Cemetery. It will honor women who have served or are now serving in the nation's armed forces.

Those women now serving, incidentally, had more than 24,000 positions opened to them throughout the services during 1988, enabling them to make further contributions in many fields to the nation's defense. Many experts agree that their role will continue to grow in the future—up to and including combat duty.

It is well-known that women made major contributions as early as the Revolutionary War.

Margaret Corbin took her husband's place at a cannon after he was killed at the Battle of Fort Washington. Other women disguised themselves as males and fought as soldiers. Others worked as cooks, nurses and laundry workers.

Officially, the history of women in the armed forces began with the formation of the Army Nurse Corps in 1901.

The Navy allowed women to enlist in fields other than nursing as early as 1917, but it wasn't until World War II that opportunities for women expanded.

The Women's Army Corps, established on Sept. 1,

1943, brought significant numbers of women into each service and they performed a wide range of duties, including work on the Manhattan (atomic bomb development) project.

After World War II, a 1948 law established a ceiling on women in the military (2 percent), and each service was limited to only one senior field grade, an O-6.

Women made significant contributions during the Korean War and in Vietnam. In 1967, Public Law 90-130 repealed the 2 percent ceiling on women and also allowed women to be appointed to flag and general officer rank.

In the 1970's, women were fully intergrated into the armed services as the last of the separate women's branches, the Women's Army Corps, became a part of history. "Since then," notes Ogilvie, "women have been known as soldiers, not WACs; sailors, not WAVES; Marines, not WMs; airmen, not WAFs; and Coast Guardsmen, not SPARS."

Today, women in the military contribute in all capacities except those prohibited by legislation or associated service policies. In 1972, women comprised less than 2 percent of active duty personnel and less than 5 percent of the National Guard and Reserve; today, they make up more than 10 percent of the active component and more than 11 percent of the National Guard and Reserve. And they are making major contributions in career fields historically staffed by men.

Job skills open to women range from about 98 percent in the Air Force to 80 percent in the Marine Corps. (The differences reflect the impact of combat-exclusion restrictions and component missions.) In the Department of Defense as a whole, almost 88 percent of the skills and more than 61 percent of the positions are open to women.

Woman general to address luncheon

The top-ranking black female general in the U.S. armed forces will be the featured speaker March 15 at the Federal Women's Program luncheon commemorating Women's History Month.

Brig. Gen. Sherian Grace Cadoria is the deputy commanding general and director of mobilization and operations at the Total Army Personnel Command in Alexandria, Va. Her speech will focus on this year's Women's History Month theme, "Heritage of Strength and Vision."

The luncheon, sponsored by the Strategic Defense Command and open to everyone, begins at 11:30 a.m. at the Officers Club.

Tickets are $7.50 per person and will be on sale March 1-10. For tickets call Mary Peoples, SDC, 895-4275; Cathy Gant, Missile Command, 876-3436; Ann Westendorff, Marshall Space Flight Center, 544-0086; or John Brown, Corps of Engineers Huntsville Division, 895-5741.

Better armed forces celebration planned

This year's Huntsville-Madison County Armed Forces Celebration promises to be better than ever, with lots of activities designed for soldiers and their families.

This will be the fifth annual celebration of the decades-long good relationship between the military and civilian communities of Huntsville and Madison County.

As far as activities go, there will be several traditional events, as well as some new attractions.

The week will begin with a Proclamation Luncheon and official opening of the industry and military exhibits on Wednesday, June 14. The exhibits will remain open through Friday. Thursday night will be family night at the exhibits.

On Friday, June 16, everyone is invited to a military parade on the arsenal, which will include music from the 14th Army Band from Fort McClellan; the Silver Wings, a parachute team from Fort Benning; and the Alabama National Guard 20th Special Forces.

Saturday will be a day of fun for everybody, no matter what their tastes. The annual Armed Forces Celebration Volksmarch will start early that morning, with one big change. Instead of a downtown route, the course will be through wooded areas on the arsenal. The NCO Club will be serving German food, and there will be unit sports activities and family activities.

If getting up early to walk isn't your style, but listening to music is, a rock band will be giving an outdoor concert Saturday night.

The week will end with coordinated church activities at the chapels.

Plans are still being made for the week, and times and locations will be firmed up later. Keep watching the Rocket for more information about the celebration.

Longtime Redstone worker leaves with memories

BY SKIP VAUGHN

Thirty-seven years is a long time to spend in the same building.

Joe D. Davis did just that. He worked in building 7861 in Test Area 2 for 37 years before retiring last Friday.

A mechanical engineering technician, Davis spent most of those years with the government before going to work for a contractor here in 1980. "Went out on a Friday and came back on a Monday," he recalled. He acknowledged that wouldn't be the case this time. "This is it," he said on his last day at Redstone.

Davis' work included assembling and disassembling missiles. Through the years, he worked on a variety of missiles.

"You know, you have a lot of memories of Redstone," he said. "I spent more than half of my life here. I've enjoyed my work, enjoyed the people I've worked with."

Davis, a 67-year-old Huntsville resident, is a native of Marshall County. He came to work at Redstone in 1950, on an ammunition line. In 1952 he was transferred to Test and Evaluation, to building 7861 where he would spend the rest of his career. He became an employee of Technical Micronics Control in 1980.

"I'll miss the guys I work with, they've all been good to me," Davis said.

"I'm going to plan on probably traveling some. I cattle farm, I have a little farm out there in the country (in Marshall County)," he said. "I'll do some traveling, me and my wife; and kind of take it easy."

He and his wife, Thelma, have a son and daughter and three grandchildren. Their son, David, 38, resides in Marshall County; and their daughter, Sandra Faughender, 34, lives in Birmingham.

"I've enjoyed the work, but the time comes a man's got to make a decision to retire," Davis said. "You're looking forward to that retirement."

Commentary: suggestive talk at dining hall lacks taste

BY PFC MARIANNE CLINEDINST

Certain males have noticed a new kind of "meat" in the Dining Facility.

"Do fries go with that shake," and, "I wish they would put that 'meat' on the menu," are some of the comments I have heard recently while eating in the dining facility.

What some may think is flattery, is often sexual harassment, especially when the comments are not requested or appropriate.

Dining facilities and places of duty are definitely improper locales for such comments.

I like to receive compliments when they are appropriate, but the comments that I have been receiving in the dining facility are degrading and embarrassing.

I have received as many as four comments that I believed were sexually harassing at one meal in the Dining Facility.

Talking to someone to ask them out is a much better way of letting someone know you're interested in them, than by hurling rude, crude and socially unacceptable remarks at people.

I suppose that fear of rejection plays a part in avoiding a face-to-face conversation, but if a person isn't worth running that risk, then nothing should be said to them at all.

Making crude comments shows a great lack of intelligence and taste on the part of whoever is making the comments.

Not only does this kind of behavior lower someone in the eyes of the person they are directing these comments to, but also to those who are watching or listening. It lowers the character of the victim in the eyes of those watching also; whether it is intentional or not, others may hold a bad opinion of that person from then on.

People who take chances by saying these things need to be aware of the consequences they could receive for such actions. Army Regulation 600-21 states, "Many of the acts and neglects that constitute sexual harassment are prohibited and punishable under civil and military law as criminal acts of a sexual nature, and should be treated as such."

I wouldn't take the chance of being punished under civil and military law for making crude comments to someone at the spur of the moment.

And you don't have to say or physically do something for your actions to be considered sexual harassment. Army Regulation 600-21 states, "Any military or civilian employee is engaging in sexual harassment who makes deliberate or repeated verbal comments or gestures of a sexual nature that are offensive to the person to whom addressed."

Save the comments/compliments for the right place, time, and person.

If you want "meat" that isn't on the menu in the dining facility, don't go there to get it.

Defense IG updates fraud probes

A joint investigation by the Defense Criminal Investigative Service and the Internal Revenue Service results in guilty pleas by a corporation and its two principals. They knowingly provided helicopter windows and missile launching canopies that did not meet contract specification requirements and submitted false claims. The defendants must repay $125,000 and are debarred for life from doing business with the government.

A company is sentenced for submitting "collusive, non-competitive, and rigged bids" and for making and submitting false statements in connection with a dredging project. The company is ordered to pay a criminal fine of $1 million for conspiring to rig bids and another $10,000 for making false statements to the government.

A defense contractor president provides the Defense Contract Audit Agency with false invoices during a contract review. The information covered up false cost data that caused an overpricing of $90,000. The president is convicted and receives two concurrent three-year jail terms, must pay a $20,000 fine and must perform 400 hours of community service.

These are just some of the significant investigations detailed in the most recent Department of Defense Inspector General's semiannual report to Congress.

During fiscal 1988, says the report, Inspector General auditors identified actions that could result in $2.1 billion in potential monetary benefits, $700 million higher than in any previous year. Criminal investigators developed evidence used by the Department of Justice to obtain 319 indictments that resulted in 299 convictions or pleas. And more than $297 million in judgments, fines, forfeitures, restitution and other monetary recoveries was obtained.

During the reporting period—the six-month period ending Sept. 30, 1988—internal audits and reviews produced more than 9,000 reports recommending ways managers could cut costs and function more effectively. The reports identified $2.4 billion in potential savings.

The Defense Contract Audit Agency issued 35,189 reports questioning the validity of $12.7 billion in costs, mainly those associated with proposed contracts. More than 16,000 of the reports were closed, resulting in savings of $6.5 billion. The Army Corps of Engineers issued 161 reports of its own, and net savings from its closed audit reports totaled $19.7 million.

Criminal investigative agencies opened more than 4,000 cases and resolved another 3,850 during the reporting period.

• During this time, the DoD Hotline received 5,381 calls and letters to report fraud, waste or abuse. More than 2,000 of them warranted investigation or referral for action by defense components.

The report to Congress summarizes significant audit and inspection recommendations designed to save money and improve the management of DoD operations.

Study to determine defense contract consulting costs

The Defense Contract Audit Agency has completed a review of consultant costs being charged to the Department of Defense and forwarded its report to the undersecretary of defense for acquisition.

The secretary of defense ordered the special audit to determine the nature and extent of consulting costs charged to defense contracts. The information gathered in the special audit will support other ongoing efforts by the DoD Task Force on Procurement, including strengthening the federal acquisition regulations governing consultant costs.

Between July and November 1988, 12 of the largest defense contractors, representing 32 percent of DoD prime contract awards in fiscal 1987, were asked to provide information on consulting costs charged to DoD contracts. They were: Boeing Company Inc.; General Dynamics Corp.; Hughes Aircraft Co.; International Business Machines Corp.; Litton Industries, Inc.; Lockheed Corp.; Martin Marietta Corp.; McDonnell Douglas Corp.; Northrop Corp.; Raytheon Co.; UNISYS Corp.; and United Technologies Corp.

Corporations hire consultants to provide technical and professional advice not available within the organization. These services can include management services, legal advice, engineering services or accounting expertise. However, the agency's audit indicated that some companies obtained consultant services that were available in-house. In other cases, consultant services charged to DoD were not adequately documented.

The Defense Contract Audit Agency "found that many of the defense contractors reviewed couldn't provide adequate evidence to support the nature and extent of the consultant services received," said Phillip E. Rogers, executive officer for the audit agency. "For instance, in some cases the services to be provided were not clear," he said. "In other cases, the final work product to be delivered was not stated. In these situations, the (Defense Contract Audit Agency) auditor is not able to determine the allowability, allocability or reasonableness of the consulting costs charged to DoD contracts."

Rogers said contractors internal control weaknesses associated with obtaining, documenting, monitoring performance and paying consultants posed the single largest problem identified in the audit.

Of the professional fees and consultant costs reviewed, $43 million were considered questionable, primarily due to the absence of adequate consulting and service agreements and evidence of services rendered.

Of the $43 million, DoD is requesting $19 million be paid back during final settlement of the contracts.

The audit's most important recommendation, said Rogers, was the need to strengthen the federal acquisition regulation governing professional and consultant service costs.

"We have recommended that it be revised to strengthen unallowability criteria, clarify the documentation required to support claimed costs and better define professional fees and consultant costs," noted Rogers.

"With a revision, contractors and (Defense Contract Audit Agency) auditors will be able to better determine the allowability, allocability and reasonableness of professional and consultant service costs charged to DoD contracts," said Rodger.

In his report to the undersecretary of defense for acquisition, the director of the Defense Contract Audit Agency, William H. Reed, noted that "action already started by the Acquisition Task Force will generally address conditions found in our review."

Redstone military police to help with fund-raising effort

BY PAM ROGERS

Members of Redstone's 291st Military Police Company, along with other people from the Redstone community, will help raise money for this year's Special Olympics by participating in the Alabama Law Enforcement Torch Run.

Officer Ben Jennings of the Huntsville Police Department, area coordinator for the run, explained how it works.

"The Torch Run has a three-fold purpose—to generate public awareness within the community of the Special Olympics movement, to demonstrate to the local community that law enforcement is in support of the Special Olympians and to generate much-needed funds so that these very special people have the opportunity to compete," he said.

The Huntsville Police Department is sponsoring this year's Law Enforcement Torch Run, but they will get help from nine other local agencies. In addition to the 291st, they are the Madison Police Department, the local FBI office, the U.S. Marshal's office, the Madison County Sheriff's Department, the Alabama State Troopers, Huntsville Emergency Medical Services Inc., and the Huntsville Fire Department.

Volunteer runners will represent the different agencies. The runners are expected to obtain at least $25 in sponsorship before they can enter the run, and will be required to pay a $7.50 entry fee, which covers the cost of a T-shirt.

The event itself is a "fun-run" concept, with no competition involved, according to Jennings. A torch will be carried from Huntsville's downtown civic complex to Milton Frank Stadium, a distance of about three miles. The torch will be lighted during the local track and field Special Olympics.

"The runners will run simultaneously into the stadium, where we will hand the torch over to a designated Special Olympian, who will light the torch and continue with the games. It's going to be an impressive sight," Jennings said.

GEARING UP FOR RUN — Norris and Jennings pose with Special Olympians Glenn Hammond and Ann Barnes.

Meteorologist

Essenwanger has enjoyed his work of solving environmental problems for engineers. He expects to miss it.

"If one has worked that long for one agency, it is certainly sad to leave, but one should not look back," Essenwanger said. "I think I have achieved much and have contributed significantly to our missile systems. In some cases, we have actually had considerable cost reductions in our missile systems to avoid over-design, by providing realistic input (data) which is not ordinarily available from other sources: for example, wind and density for ballistic flights and adverse weather for electro-optical systems."

Capt. Barbara Norris, commander of the 291st, will be letting her soldiers know about the run, and welcomes anyone else from the Redstone community who would like to participate.

"It is a fun run and there will be a pick-up bus available for those who can't make it," Norris said.

When the runners reach the stadium, members of the 832nd Ordnance Battalion will act as volunteer coaches for the competitors, she said.

Jennings is excited about the fund-raising results of this year's Torch Run. The Boeing Good Neighbor Fund has already contributed $3,000. There will be a considerable donation coming from Domino's Pizza, which will also sponsor its own runners.

"Last year we raised $3,000. This year we already have $3,100, and we just got started," he said.

Norris suggested that anyone who doesn't want to make a lump sum contribution should consider supporting a runner.

This year's Torch Run will be held April 20. Anyone interested in participating should call Norris at 876-2489.

VA seeks patients with hearing loss

The Veterans Administration is looking for some veterans in Alabama with total deafness in both ears to participate in a nationwide cochlear implant study.

Dr. Noel L. Cohen, the study chairman, said the primary aim of this two-year study is to compare two different ear implant devices. Cohen is a consultant in otolaryngology at the Manhattan VA Medical Center and professor and chairman, Department of Otolaryngology, New York University School of Medicine.

The implants, which cost about $10,000 each, are provided at no charge to the veteran-patient with hearing disability in both ears, either service-connected or nonservice-connected. Currently, 65 veterans are participating. Cohen said some patients are "now able to listen to their grandchildren singing. They now hear airplanes and sometimes even the birds."

He explained that the cochlear implant is an electrical device which provides stimulation directly to the hearing nerve in the inner ear. When activated, the nerve transmits impulses to the brain which interprets them as sound. There are two major parts of the implant—a surgically implanted internal part and an external part worn on the body.

The surgery to implant the device involves a hospital stay of from five to eight days. There is a rehabilitation period during which the device is adjusted for the individual patient and the patient learns how to understand the new sounds. Patients are asked to return for periodic follow-up visits over a period of two years.

Cohen noted that "virtually all study patients have had some return of hearing with the cochlear implant. We are delighted to be able to offer this possibility to our deaf veterans."

Veterans from Alabama interested in consideration as a candidate to participate in the study should write Lois Sutton, Ph.D., Supervisor, Audiology, VA Medical Center, 2002 Holcombe, Houston, Texas 77211 or phone (713) 795-7492.

Civilians convicted for environmental violations

Three civilian managers at Aberdeen Proving Ground have been convicted of illegal storage and disposal of chemicals, representing the first-ever criminal conviction of U.S. government employees for hazardous waste violations under the federal Resource Conservation and Recovery Act.

Following the convictions last week, Breckenridge L. Willcox, the U.S. attorney for Maryland, said the case "underlines the message that government employees are not above the law."

Carl E. Gepp, Robert E. Lentz and William C. Dee were found guilty by a federal jury in Baltimore of violating hazardous waste laws during the operation of a pilot plant for production of war chemicals.

Last June, a grand jury returned a five-count indictment against the three men for criminal environmental offenses in the treatment, storage and disposal of hazardous wastes at the pilot plant and for water pollution violations. The indictment charged that the offenses occurred continuously at the Edgewood Area of Aberdeen Proving Ground over a three-year period during 1983-1986.

Gepp, 52, a GS-14 former manager of the pilot plant, and Lentz, 51, his GS-15 division chief in the Chemical Research, Development and Engineering Center, each were convicted of three felony counts of illegally storing, treating and disposing of hazardous waste. Their boss, Dee, former director of the munitions directorate, was convicted of a single count of illegally storing and disposing of hazardous waste. Dee, 50, is a member of the Senior Executive Service and one of the highest-ranking civilian managers at Aberdeen Proving Ground.

Defense attorneys said they will appeal the verdict. Sentencing of Gepp, Lentz and Dee is scheduled April 7. Each count carries a maximum five-year prison sentence and $250,000 fine.

Prosecutors said it is unlikely the three men will be tried again on several counts on which the jury was hung.

The case, watched closely by government officials and environmental interests, was represented as a test of whether government workers can be held criminally liable for violating environmental laws on federal property.

During the seven-week trial, the government called more than 40 witnesses including safety and environmental inspectors, former plant workers and a former CRDEC commander. Some witnesses described the pilot plant as a dilapidated facility where hazardous chemicals were handled carelessly and illegally disposed of by pouring into drains.

The government charged that Gepp, Lentz and Dee ignored repeated findings that dangerous conditions existed at the plant.

Defense attorneys countered that the three civilians had tried repeatedly to get conditions improved but that the Army had been unresponsive and was singling them out for punishment to divert attention from culpable military authorities.

Misfits give other teams fits in MLC bowling league

BY JUANEZ ALEXANDER

Rob Ruiz bowled games of 224 and 213 with a 601 series as the Misfits swept four games from the Pollaks last week in the Missile Logistics Center bowling league.

Edie Lemke bowled 40 pins over her average for the Pollaks but it wasn't enough to halt the steamrolling Misfits.

Elsewhere, lanes 11 and 12 proved to be the hot spot of the night with three 200-plus games bowled on these two lanes as the Spoilers took four games from the Family. Ken Brooks led the Spoilers onslaught with a 235 game and a 620 series while teammate Lorenza Elliott tried to keep pace by shooting a 224 game with 583 series. Glendor Wilkerson and Yvette Warner added more fuel to the fire by bowling over their averages; Wilkerson bowled 28 pins over her average while Warner rolled 44 pins over hers. For the Spoilers, John Edwards had a 211 game with a 527 series and Melanie Johnson bowled 40 pins over her average. Brooks, Elliott and Edwards bowled their 200 games in the first game.

Papa Smurf and the Smurfettes grabbed three games from the Pinheads as "Papa," Willie Readus, bowled 40 pins over his average. Smurfettes' Karen Caraway shot 50 pins over her average and Kathy Collier rolled 30 pins over her average. For the Pinheads, Margo Thigpen shot 45 pins over her average and Linda Johnson rolled 25 pins over hers.

Marilyn Boster bowled her first 200 game by shooting 201 to lead Behind the 8 Ball to three wins over the Luckies. James Cox contributed by bowling 30 pins over his average. Luckies' Karen Davis bowled 35 pins over her average.

Carol Waters bowled a 213, Mike Colgan shot a 503 series, and Shirley Dixon rolled 32 pins over her average as the Alleycats snatched three games from Ron and the Honeybees. Art Nottingham bowled 27 pins over his average for Ron and the Honeybees.

Roy Brown had a 211 game and 545 series to lead the Bounty Hunters to three wins over the Challengers. Teammates Sandra Recio shot a 507 series, John Warren bowled 36 pins over his average, Janet McHugh bowled a 504 series, Clint McHugh rolled 28 pins over his average, and Cindy Ebersole shot 31 pins over her average. Only a few pins separated the two teams through each and every game.

Mickey's Crew and the Screwballs split two games each. Mike Polka bowled a 200 game with a 515 series for Mickey's Crew while teammate Jack Klein shot a 224 game with a 540 series.

Bobby Browder, a substitute bowler, had a 201 game with a 532 series for Comic Relief. However, wins and losses cannot be determined for Comic Relief until the Avengers bowl their make-up game.

Bass anglers plan tournament Saturday

The North Alabama military bass anglers will be starting the second half of their season for district points on Saturday, March 4.

A meeting is set for tonight at 7 at the NCO Club. The bass anglers will be drawing for partners, discussing the state tournament and the nationals, and listening to a guest speaker.

"We need all the members present that can possibly be there for the meeting," said Don Larimore, the North Alabama district director for Military Bass Anglers Association (MBAA). The scheduled speaker is Fred Stephenson, a custom rod builder in Huntsville.

Saturday's district point tournament will be held at Browns Creek on Guntersville Lake. "We've got three district tournaments left before the state comes in and we need all the participation we can get," Larimore said. Besides Saturday's tournament, the other two include April 22 at Goose Pond on Guntersville Lake and May 6 at Decatur Boat Harbor on Wheeler Lake.

"These are district point tournaments toward your state totals," Larimore said. The state tournament will be held June 17-18 at Lake Eufaula, Lake Point Marina.

Grand opening set for glancer bowling

Redstone bowlers will get their first chance to use the latest addition at the bowling center this weekend.

The bowling center will have a grand opening for its new glancer cushions at 3 p.m. Saturday. Glancers are plastic cushions which line both sides of the lane, thus preventing gutter balls. With glancer cushions in the gutters, novice bowlers of all ages have the satisfaction of knocking over pins.

This Saturday "glancer bowling will be free the first hour (from 3-4)," said Billie Kuhn, manager of the bowling center. "It's going to be a lot of fun."

The bowling center has enough glancer cushions for two lanes. Beginning this weekend, the glancers will be used from 3-6 p.m. Saturdays.

The center is open to military, their family members, and employees of Redstone Arsenal. Hours of operation are 3-10:30 p.m. Mondays through Saturdays, and 2-9:30 p.m. Sundays; holidays are announced.

Black Knights get gridiron trophy

WASHINGTON — Victories over the Navy and Air Force service academy football teams earned the Army's Black Knights a trip to the White House and the post-1988 Commander-in-Chief's Trophy.

President George Bush welcomed Black Knights gridiron coach Jim Young and his senior class players to the White House Roosevelt Room Feb. 15 for the presentation, held annually to honor the best record in competition between service academy gridiron squads.

The Black Knights topped Air Force 28-15 and Navy 20-15 enroute to a 9-2 record (tying a team record for most wins in a season) and a Dec. 24 Sun Bowl appearance against the University of Alabama Crimson Tide. The Tide won, 29-28. The Knights' nine wins ties a team record for most victories in a season.

The Feb. 15 ceremony marks the fifth time Army has taken the trophy since its first presentation in 1972 and the third time in the past five years. Navy has won the trophy five times and the Air Force four times, with three ties.

Army Chief of Staff Gen. Carl E. Vuono, Secretary of the Army John O. Marsh Jr., Assistant Secretary of Defense William H. Taft IV and Lt. Gen. Dave R. Palmer, superintendent of West Point, were also on hand for the presentation. (Arnews)

Nicholson, Dummer win annual Engineers road races

Carl Nicholson won the 5-kilometer (3.1 mile) race and Mark Dummer won the 10K in the sixth annual Engineers Run held here Saturday.

Nicholson, 42, finished in 16 minutes and 9 seconds, his best time so far this year. "It was real enjoyable, a pleasant day, sunny," said Nicholson, a test engineer for Boeing Company. "Mark wasn't in the race."

Dummer, 26, opted to run the longer race which he won in 33:01. "This course is so wide open, it's hard to pace yourself," said Dummer, a plastics engineer for Ryder International in Arab, Ala. "It's a good course, it's certified."

Dummer said Rob Allen, the second place finisher, ran a fine race. Allen, 19, had won the previous weekend's Brotherhood Run 10K at Redstone.

"It was pretty good," said Allen, who finished in 33:15. "The wind was really not that bad. The temperature was perfect, really. No problem with the weather at all."

AMC congratulates longtime local jogger

A Redstone worker has been recognized by the Army Materiel Command for running more than 15,000 miles on the Army's "Run For Your Life" Program.

Joe Robertson, who works for a contractor of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, received a congratulatory letter from AMC's deputy chief of staff for personnel.

"I congratulate you on reaching the 15,000 mile level in the Run for Life Program," wrote Maj. Gen. C.D. Bussey. "This program is an integral part of personal well being and total fitness."

"Your participation in the program displays the dedication and self-sacrifice which strengthens the body and mind. The Run for Your Life Program presents challenges which cause everyday obstacles to become minor. The program is a continued success due to people like yourself," Bussey wrote. "Once again, congratulations on your accomplishment."

Robertson, 65, is a planner for BAMSI Inc., a contractor that performs maintenance for facilities of the Marshall Space Flight Center. His wife, Hazel, worked for the Army's missile intelligence agency until she retired.

Bussey's letter is "good, it really is," Robertson said. "It's nice." His wife got him signed up for the Run For Your Life program about 1974. Ever since then, he has been logging the miles he runs on progress schedule sheets. The native of Blue Hill, Maine, runs five nights a week, usually about five miles each time.
