General puts touch on induction

Retired chief warrant officer entering Ordnance hall of fame

By SKIP VAUGHN

"Hello, this is General Boles," said the voice on the other end of the line. Al Rose thought it was a prank call.

But it was legitimate.

Brig. Gen. Vincent Boles, commander of Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md., and the Army's chief of Ordnance, was calling last December to congratulate Rose on his induction into the Ordnance Corps Hall of Fame.

Rose met Boles in person during the general's quarterly training briefing March 2 at the Ordnance Munitions and Electronics Maintenance School. Boles made a special effort to meet Rose, a retired chief warrant officer in Explosive Ordnance Disposal who served three tours in Vietnam.

"I didn't get here without the legacy of the services of people like you," Boles told him.

Reset program remains readiness priority

Equipment returns to field after use in deployment

By AL SCHWARTZ

For the Rocket

The Reset program is one of the highest priority efforts in the Army. And AMCOM's missile and aviation Reset programs have succeeded to the point where they have almost become steady-state.

At one point as many as 240 aircraft were in work at any one time; today that figure is closer to 160. Last fiscal year more than 3,000 major end items of missile equipment were Reset; this fiscal year that figure is expected to drop to about 2,000.

The aviation and missile Reset programs have some differences; but they also have some very pronounced similarities: the missions — to return systems and stockpiles to pre-deployment conditions and levels, and the staffs — dedicated and hard working employees.

MISSILE WORK— Harry Cunningham of Letterkenny Army Depot, Pa., works on an Avenger as part the missile Reset program.

Michael Hartwell, the AMCOM missile Reset project manager, and Col. Ray Woolery, AMCOM's aviation Reset program manager, both attribute their programs' success to the thousands of people who daily directly or indirectly touch the systems.

"People have been extremely responsive across the board," Hartwell said. "They have put in whatever hours have been necessary to support our Soldiers. They have been working at a high tempo for a long time. My concern is that some are burning out."

Woolery agreed. "People are consistently putting out a good product. They are focused and proud of what they are accomplishing," he said.

Aviation Reset

By mid-February, about 700 helicopters that had served at least 30 days in Iraq or Afghanistan had been repaired and returned to pre-deployment conditions, according to Woolery. Another 160 were being worked on, and 89 more had yet to be inducted into the Reset program.

The aviation Reset program is expected to spend $1 billion in 2005. That's in addition to the $1.2 billion spent in 2004 and earlier.

Letters to the Editor

Kudos to cargo project manager

I work for Security Assistance Management Directorate co-located to Col. Tim Crosby, CH-47 utility helicopters project manager.

I recently had a bad accident and had to have an extensive five-hour surgery on my ankle which resulted in my inability to walk for 1-6 weeks. I am going to be in many different casts and anticipate more surgery to remove one of the 10 screws in my ankle which could incapacitate me for almost a year. Luckily, I have only missed two weeks of work. When I came back to work, I was unable to get into the building with my wheel chair. Deborah Chambers, CH-47 foreign military sales office, informed Col. Crosby of the situation and he immediately had his budget people rent, pick up and deliver a mobile chair for two months with options to continue until I am back on my feet.

I just want to let the CH-47 Project Office, mainly Col. Crosby, know how much this has meant to me. As difficult as this situation has been for me, the thoughtfulness of this outstanding officer has gone far beyond what was anticipated or expected from me. I will be forever grateful for this selfless act and would like for him to be recognized in some manner.

Schools fall short of promise

Recently our military family was denied to transfer to Huntsville High School, which is known for outstanding academic achievement as well as Grissom High School, which is further south of Huntsville. The reason for denial was, no space available. Surprised that our child's school records or National SAT scores were not a consideration, which were in top 3 percent of the nation in the past several years considered, we reluctantly registered our child at S.R. Butler High School.

We found out that many of the rumors about this local high school were unfounded and without merit and discovered that our child was probably better off here than the school we initially requested. Additionally, we found that the students are respectful and truly desire to further their education beyond secondary education. We also discovered that Butler High has some of the best educators still trying to "make a difference" in this predominantly African-American school with low income and single parenting statistics.

What we didn't plan on discovering was that, although Butler is in the same school system as Huntsville High and Grissom High, the students are not given the "same advance academic opportunities." All "Advance" and "Honors" classes are not staffed at Butler because of shortage of instructors, according to Butler's leadership. Not only does this hinder bright children whose parents often transfer to school systems with much

Best welcome home for Soldiers

Although I've been involved with a number of welcome home events for Soldiers, involving thousands of family members, last night (Feb. 24) was the most emotional of all. Last night I witnessed a spontaneous event which I've heard occurs regularly. But it's one you have to actually be at to really understand.

Joe Fitzgerald, president of the Huntsville/Redstone Chapter of Association of U.S. Army, AUSA board member Claude Baldwin and his wife Marilyn, and I, along with my wife, went to Huntsville Airport at 10 p.m. to meet one returning Soldier. Yes, just one Soldier! They all get their "welcome home."

It happened that family members for another Soldier, Sgt. Kevin Coulter, regular Army, were there also. We were meeting Sgt. Alfred Dyson, now of the National Guard 711th Signal Battalion, but originally of Company C, 279th Signal Battalion, of Albertville.

The Transportation Security Agency folks were good enough to allow us and families of the two Soldiers inside the secured area. Dyson was in civvies and Coulter was still wearing his desert camo uniform and body armor. Two young children carried a homemade poster that said "Welcome Home, Daddy."

As we exited through the waiting area, both of the long rows of seats were filled with people. When they saw the uniform, every person there stood up in respect. Then they spontaneously started clapping their hands very quietly and respectfully. There was so much emotion you could hear the tears flowing from each eyelid. There were no dry faces anywhere in the crowd. These people were witnessing Soldiers returning from war, who had been there to defend our nation and its people. It didn't matter that they didn't know the Soldiers. The men and women serving in today's armed forces are head and shoulders above the rest of their peer group. Last night a few dozen people were privileged to show their respect to two of those servicemembers.

Every Soldier gets their "welcome home."

"Pictures of the post and maybe an aerial shot. Group photos of the people from different organizations would be good. A copy of the newspaper here. Also, for the pictures I'd use two medias. Use the paper pictures, but also include a CD version and a laptop. Fifty years from now they may not have the means to use a CD anymore. The laptop itself might be an historical artifact by then. It would show the technology of the time."

Local retiree going into Ordnance hall of fame

Induction

A New Orleans native, Rose served in Vietnam in 1967-68, 1969-70 and 1971-72. After his military career, he worked as a senior management analyst before retiring in the late 1990s at the Aviation and Missile Command. He resides in Huntsville.

Rose is among 12 inductees this year in the hall of fame. Of the inductees, three are historical and nine contemporary. The induction ceremony is May 12 at the Ordnance Museum at Aberdeen.

"It'll be quite an event, we'll look forward to it," Boles told Rose. "And I'm really glad you'll get a chance to come up (to Aberdeen)."

Each year inductees are selected from among 40-50 nominees. This year, the board selected 3 of 5 warrant officer nominees.

"The three warrants, their files were unbelievable. And I just wanted to make sure I had a chance to come down and see you," Boles told Rose.

The general presented him a coin during a private meeting and then congratulated him again during a morning ceremony at OMEMS.

"I thought it was quite an honor," Rose said of his hall of fame selection. "I personally think it's a good way for singling out individuals and recognizing them, those who've made significant contributions. I also appreciate the general adding a personal touch."

Rose was notified by letter just before last Christmas and later received the phone call.

"It was great," he said of the holiday letter. "I was already happy - my kids were home, everything was going fine. And on top of that, I get this letter from the chief of Ordnance. And then I get a phone call, a personal phone call. I thought it was a joke."

Rose, in his early 60s, is coping with Parkinson's disease. He and his wife, Charlotte, have four children and seven grandchildren. Their daughter Aiko Rose Brum, a retired Marine who resides in Ewa Beach, Hawaii, attended her father's ceremony at OMEMS. She is deputy public affairs officer for Asia Pacific Center higher education standards than Alabama, but it allows them to be "left behind."

The Huntsville School System receives "federal funds for education of military families and federally employed families." In an interview, the new state superintendent of education, Dr. Joseph Morton, said, "If you're going to get federal money, you're going to play by the federal rules. That should be the long and short of that scenario."

If this is true, then why was this allowed to happen? Furthermore, attending the new Columbia High shouldn't be an option, if a child desires to remain at Butler which would be a better school, if given the same rights/privileges as other local high schools.

Name withheld by request

Editor's note: The Garrison provided the following response. "Educating our children is vitally important to all of us. Redstone Arsenal leaders meet regularly with Huntsville City School principals and central office staff to exchange ideas, to better understand the needs of the school system, and to discuss ways in which Redstone can contribute to the education of all our children. We have a very active Education Committee personally chaired by Garrison commander Col. Bob Devlin which meets monthly, with attendance by parents, key Arsenal staff, and the school system leadership. We also have a full-time, on-staff school liaison officer, Pam Berry, an employee of Morale Welfare and Recreation's Child and Youth Services.

"After consulting with the Huntsville for Security Studies under the U.S. Pacific Command at Fort DeRussy in Waikiki. Their son Kyle is an electrical engineer technician at Advanced Optical Electronics Company in Huntsville. Their son Curtis is a commercial electrician in Denver, Colo. And daughter Jackie is a systems engineer with Lockheed Martin in Huntsville.

Grandson Phillip Rose, Aiko's son, is carrying on the family legacy of military service as an Air Force captain in operational research at Hanscom Air Force Base in the Boston area. The other grandchildren include Demeke, Lynduel, Kordae, Kyle Jr., Felicia and Kathlyn Charlotte.

City Schools staff, we were informed that these particular classes were not offered due to the lack of student interest in the advanced level classes at Butler High School. In order to offer an advance level class, they say there needs to be at least 15-20 students to justify assigning a teacher to a class. We suggested that vigorous recruitment of students based on grades, teacher recommendations, SAT scores and student interest would result in adding more advanced level classes. Another option would be offering the advanced level class through distance learning. Currently, high school and middle school counselors are working together to ensure that rising ninth-grade students are enrolled in the appropriate classes for the next school year.

"Those students that are presently attending Butler will have the choice of staying at Butler or going to the Columbia High School (the new west high school). All rising ninth-grade students, who are zoned for Columbia, must go to Columbia, unless they apply for and are granted a transfer to Butler or any other Huntsville city high school. Students at Butler were given a survey and were asked to select which high school (Butler or Colombia) they will be attending during the next school year. Colombia is scheduled to open Aug. 8.

"Col. Devlin has met with Dr. Jennifer Garrett, principal of Colombia High School. We are looking forward to working together in meeting the educational needs of the military connected families and becoming a partner in education to Colombia. We want all our children and youth to succeed and we are committed to working with the schools and the military families. For more educational information, call the school liaison officer at 876-7801."

Reset

Woolery and his staff work with aviation maintainers and commanders of deployed units to determine which planes will go into Reset. In addition to looking at how close to phase the aircraft are, Woolery has to juggle aircraft Reset based on space, personnel and repair teams, availability of special tools and the priority of the unit.

"We continue to refine the process," he said. "We're getting ready for the next rotation of folks this fall."

Every day more than 2,000 employees, directly or indirectly, touch the aircraft and support equipment in the program.

Like the missile Reset program, aviation Reset brings the equipment and platforms back to pre-deployment conditions and prepares them to be sent back to the theater. It doesn't zero-time the aircraft like a depot would do. Reset is also an opportunity to incorporate engineering changes authorized after the aircraft was built.

"At one time we had as many as 240 aircraft in work," Woolery said. Today the number is closer to 160 and that's about the amount Woolery expects the workload to stay. "Initially there was a lot of damage caused by combat and sand abrasion. But now most sites have concrete hardstands rather than open desert. That has significantly reduced the amount of damage caused by the abrasive sand," he said.

Some aviation units do their own Reset work when they return to their home bases. It gives the Soldiers an opportunity to develop greater maintenance expertise. But the great majority of the work is done at depot, installation logistics directorate or contractor sites.

"We've consolidated our Reset efforts into five regions: west, south central, north central, east and overseas," Woolery said. "Any helicopter, whether from a Guard, Reserve or active-duty unit, gets the same treatment."

Reset is going well and the people are putting out a good product, according to Woolery. "More and more aircraft are redeploying," he said. "And when they return we don't expect to have to do as much work on them. They have not had the same amount of threat of air defense and small arms fire as in the shooting war."

By 2007, maybe all we will have to do are the special technical inspections and repairs."

Missile Reset

Management of the missile Reset program resides in the Integrated Materiel Management Center, rather than as a separate project office.

The concept has been to leverage existing sources of repair and existing contracts and contractors. "We had a tremendous infrastructure in place so we made a conscious decision to use what existed to Reset the missile ground support equipment and rounds," Hartwell said.

IMMC directs item managers, maintenance engineers and support contractors to do the technical inspections and repairs at depots, munitions centers, contractor plants, unit locations, OLR and installation logistics directorate sites and at the NATO Maintenance and Supply Agency in Europe. Missile Reset, like aviation Reset, has provided training opportunities for many units. "We have tried hard to involve units in this level of maintenance," Hartwell said.

As the Reset program continues, he believes they may be able to reduce the number of locations for repairs.

"We use a systems approach for Reset," he said. "For example, we are responsible for the entire Patriot weapon system. We may subcontract repair to another command for the vehicular portion of the equipment. But we develop and manage the schedule for the entire process and we integrate the system."

And scheduling has been a challenge at times. Initially, the missile Reset team was expected to complete the repairs in 120 days (it is now within 180 days). Occasionally, the repairs had to be done in less time because of a unit's rotation or training schedule. One such example involved the 3rd Infantry Division. Equipment was received in October 2003. The unit had to be at the National Training Center in January 2004. "That meant that we had to induct and repair the equipment and integrate the systems within three months to get it back to the unit by mid-December so they could be at the NTC in January," Hartwell said.

"We have met the units' requirements to reset their equipment. Sometimes it was close, too close, in several cases," he said, "but we succeeded."

In fiscal 2004, the missile Reset budget for both ground support equipment and missile rounds was $255 million. In fiscal '05, it has dropped to $160 million. "In FY05 we expect to induct about two-thirds of the amount of equipment that we inducted the previous year," Hartwell said. In FY '04, funds were also budgeted to reset about 7,000 missile rounds.

The program focus has shifted somewhat over the past two years, according to Hartwell. Previously the emphasis was on quick turn-around, missile repair and ensuring adequate funding.

"We've shown how the money is used and how it is managed, so our focus is now on emerging missions, the Army transformation and modularity," Hartwell said. "Equipment comes into Reset in one configuration, but when it leaves, it may be configured differently because of the unit's size or the configuration has been changed."

Season of spiritual preparation under way at chapel

Lenten activities leading to Easter

By SKIP VAUGHN
Rocket editor
skip.vaughn@redstone.army.mil

The 40 days leading to Easter are a time of preparation and spiritual renewal at Bicentennial Chapel.

The Protestant and Catholic congregations are sponsoring events throughout the Lenten season which culminates with Easter Sunday, March 27. An Easter egg hunt, for children in third grade and below, is scheduled 10 a.m. March 19 on the chapel grounds.

“Lent and Easter celebrations give Christians a chance to express and deepen their faith, and non-Christians can learn about customs of their neighbors with whom they live daily,” Chaplain (Maj.) Jerzy “Father George” Rzasowski, the AMCOM chaplain and Catholic pastor, said.

“It is the highlight of the Christian year,” Chaplain (Maj.) Joey Byrd, resource manager and assistant Protestant pastor, said. “It is why we call ourselves Christian.”

Community members are invited to the Easter egg hunt which usually draws 100 participants. The children should bring a bag or basket to collect eggs; and parents should bring a camera to take their photos. Children in kindergarten and preschool should be accompanied by an adult.

Refreshments will be served. If it rains, there will be no hunt and the eggs will be donated to a local rescue mission. The hunt would not be rescheduled if postponed because of weather. Volunteers from the chapel will cook and dye the eggs. Before the hunt, everyone will gather in the assembly room to hear a story about Easter. Then the children will separate into age groups to proceed with the hunt.

“It’s a festive time,” Patty Wilson, religious education coordinator, said. “And it reminds the children and parents of resurrection which of course is celebrated on Easter Sunday.”

For more information about the Easter egg hunt, call her at 876-6874.

Protestant events include a Good Friday Service, March 25 at noon, and Easter services on March 27. The Easter sunrise service begins at 7 a.m. and the worship service at 11.

Retired Lt. Col. Donald Crippen, a Huntsville native who was an Army chaplain for 20 years, is scheduled speaker for the worship service. The Olde Town Brass will perform. “Everyone is welcome,” Byrd said.

The Catholic congregation began its Lent observances, also open to everyone, on Ash Wednesday, Feb. 9. Remaining events include Stations of the Cross soup supper at 6 p.m. Friday and March 18; Palm Sunday, 9:30 a.m. March 20; Penance Service, 5 p.m. March 21; Holy Thursday Liturgy at 6 p.m. and Blessed Sacrament Adoration, 7-9 p.m. March 24; Stations of the Cross at 3 p.m. and Good Friday Liturgy at 6 p.m. March 25; Easter Vigil Liturgy, 6 p.m. March 26; and Easter Mass, 9:30 a.m. March 27.

“Theologically speaking, we recall Christ’s passage from this life through death into risen life – into life with God,” Rzasowski said. “It means the resurrection. And this feast emphasizes a central point of our faith — that future life was offered to us by Christ as a gift and as a promise. If we are united with Christ, we will participate in his resurrection.

“So this is a reminder of the past, for which we are grateful, and a sign of hope to which we

Canada awards contract under global partnership

TELEDYNE BROWN RELEASE

Teledyne Brown Engineering Inc. announced Feb. 28 that it has been awarded a contract valued up to $2 million over a period of three years with the Canadian government to monitor the dismantling of nuclear-powered submarines in the Russian Federation.

The work is part of Canada's $1 billion pledge under the G8 Global Partnership Program to safeguard the world from the spread of weapons and materials of mass destruction.

Under the contract with Public Works and Government Services Canada, Teledyne Brown will provide services to Foreign Affairs Canada through its Global Partnership Program bureau, on the progress of transporting, de-fueling and dismantling nuclear-powered submarines at the Federal State Unitary Enterprise Engineering Plant Zvezdochka in Severodvinsk, Russia. As part of the monitoring project, the company will also report on environmental, health and safety practices during submarine dismantlement operations.

"Teledyne Brown is playing an important role in helping to end the proliferation of nuclear arms and ensure the national security of our country," said Jim Link, president, Teledyne Brown Engineering. "The award of this contract extends Teledyne Brown's experience in weapons demilitarization and represents a significant growth opportunity for Teledyne Brown."

Youngsters help Army Emergency Relief kickoff

Pennies make a difference for Army Emergency Relief.

Students from J.E. Williams Technology Middle School, kindergarten through eighth-grade, collected $53 in coins which they contributed to this year's AER fund-raising campaign. The presentation from the Wiltech Student Council was made during the campaign kickoff March 1 at Heiser Hall.

Maj. Gen. Jim Pillsbury, commander of the Aviation and Missile Command and Redstone Arsenal, pretended the satchel was too heavy after receiving it from a young female student.

The Wiltech Singers performed two songs at the event. Patsy Gray, director of the 26-student group, sang the national anthem.

"We picked up pennies anywhere we found them," she said of the donation. "We asked students to bring it in."

The Huntsville Havoc professional hockey team presented a $12,952.75 check representing proceeds from military appreciation night Feb. 5 when the Havoc beat the Jacksonville Barracudas in a shootout 3-2 at the Von Braun Center.

"One Nation - One Army - One Organization" is the slogan for the 75-day campaign which continues through May 15 with an $85,000 goal.

"I'm going to ask you to work hard to get in contact with every Soldier at Redstone (during the campaign)," Pillsbury said. "That's the goal."

He also asked for support from civilians, who don't directly benefit from AER. "As we help Soldiers, our great civilians are helped also," he said.

AER helps members of the military community facing financial emergencies. It provides grants and no-interest loans to active duty and retired military and their family members, widows and widowers of retirees. Redstone assisted 355 individuals and families by providing more than $249,690 in 2004.

"Ninety-five percent of the dollars you give goes to Soldiers and their families," Pillsbury said.

AER fund-raisers set

Makeup AER unit representatives training is Thursday from 10-11 a.m. at building 5250, conference room A-204. A common access card is required for entry.

A spaghetti luncheon fund-raiser is March 14 from 11 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. at the Officers and Civilians Club. Tickets are $7.50 and must be purchased in advance from the Garrison's Human Resources Directorate at 876-9762/2333/6360 or 842-9896/0881. Tickets will not be available at the door.

The annual Army Emergency Relief campaign continues through May 15.

Support rolls in for annual bowling tournament

GOOD FORM— Staff Sgt. Enrique Martinez supplies a little advice and a lot of support for Special Olympian Carrie Gore.

Redstone lends hand to Special Olympics

Special Olympians can count on several things every year. They can count on good spirits and sportsmanship. They can count on trophies and fun. And they can count on Redstone.

Redstone annually sends Soldiers, volunteers and support to the Special Olympics bowling tournament; and this year's event was Feb. 24 at Huntsville's Plamor Lanes.

The tournament is a highlight for the local Special Olympics community — including the athletes and those who give their time to make it happen.

"The best part is when the athletes talk to you," Army Community Service long-time volunteer Lorraine Kraus said. "They've got a smile, even when they lose. There's no animosity or sadness. They're proud of what they've accomplished and they remember us every year."

Community retirees have also found a way to pitch in. Avid bowlers donate their time to keep score and oversee the tournament mechanics.

"We're just happy to help," retiree Ray Weinberg said. "We're a mixture of Kiwanis, retired officers, Redstone employees and members of the bowling community. We're all volunteers. It's a great event and we're proud to be here every year."

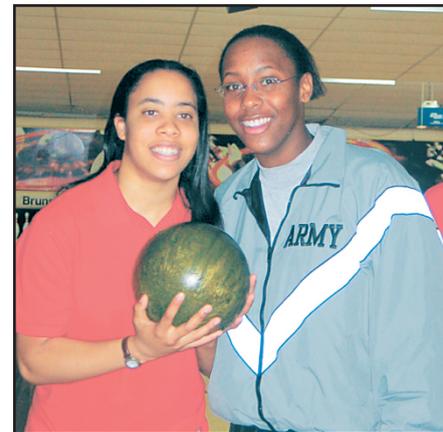

Spouses such as Becky Pillsbury, wife of Redstone's commanding general, also take time out of their busy schedules to lend a hand and a cheer.

"We have a nice mix of people — students, retirees, volunteers and Soldiers — all working toward making this a level playing field for these athletes," she said. "I'm proud to be here."

Natalie Taylor, Exceptional Family Member Program coordinator for ACS, said that generosity of time and heart are just another part of the Redstone way.

"ACS is delighted to be here this and every year, participating in the tradition of Special Olympics," Taylor said. "I believe this is our 15th year. It's something we look forward to every year. We love being here for the children and the special needs adults."

This year, 40 Soldiers volunteered for the event. They served as coaches, cheerleaders, extra hands and friends.

Soldier finally back home from Vietnam

Family finds peace after 34 years when loved one's remains return

By LIRA FRYE
For the Rocket

ALBERTVILLE— When he left for Vietnam, Chief Warrant Officer Randy Ard told his mother, “Momma don’t cry, I love you.” Those were the last words Emmie Ard heard from her son.

Thirty-four years later he’s coming home.

Randy’s remains were located in December at a remote location in Laos, at Ban Kahn Village, near the Vietnamese/Laos border. According to military reports and information Randy’s brother John Ard gathered from talking with survivors, Randy flew from Quang Tri, in what was then the northern portion of southern Vietnam, with three other Soldiers and was headed to a landing zone in Laos.

On March 7, 1971, as he was hovering over what he thought was a friendly landing zone, his OH-58 Kiowa helicopter was shot down by enemy fire.

Although both Randy’s legs were broken and his pelvis fractured during the ensuing crash, the other survivors managed to pull him from the wreckage. As enemy soldiers approached the crash site, Randy pulled his service pistol and began shooting. The others escaped to safety. Randy didn’t make it out.

“The hard part was just not knowing,” Emmie Ard said. “It’s very much of a relief to know that he died quickly and was buried decently. I thought after all these years I’d never know. Thirty-four years is a long time to wait for an answer.” For three decades the Ards hoped the answer would be seeing Randy walk through the door.

“When he didn’t come home we were hurt,” John said. “We thought more could have been done to help him. For several years we thought he might come home, but that didn’t happen.

“He’ll be laid to rest beside my dad, something I thought we’d never see,” John said. Randy’s father, Tess, died November 2002. Randy Ard will be buried March 19 during a ceremony at Marshall Memorial Gardens in Albertville.

Army at the door

Randy’s sister, Nell Vanvooren remembers the night they were notified. At the time, the family was living in Pensacola, Fla.

“I remember when the Army came to tell us,” she said. “It was late at night and I looked out and saw Army men. I knew what it was. I knew it was bad.”

Nickelodeon partnered with the Army and Air Force Exchange Service to sponsor a sweepstakes Nov. 26 through Dec. 2; and the grand prize was a 13-inch remote control SpongeBob SquarePants color television. Vanvooren said she didn't think anything like that would happen to her family. It tore their world apart, but was hardest on their parents.

"I was so sad, I cried all the time," Emmie said. "Then I told myself you can't do this. I made up my mind to focus and kept myself busy."

Information about Randy came to the family throughout the years, but details were sketchy. John said the Department of Defense would send update letters and the family spoke with the survivors of the crash. But not until they received a notification letter in December did the family begin to fill in the pieces of the story.

"We have a report written by the U.S. Army," John said. "They interviewed Vietnamese soldiers who were involved in the battle. They gave a different perspective. But we're happy about the knowledge. We were always getting information, but at times it was contradictory. Now we feel like we're getting both sides of the story, and we have an accurate picture of what happened."

Vanvooren said that although she has mixed feelings, she's glad the family finally knows what happened.

"He died fast and didn't suffer," she said. "I appreciate that the Army finally found him and that they kept on looking."

Doing what he loved
As a teenager, Randy washed and refueled planes at the airport in Pensacola, where the family lived in the late 1960s. Randy exchanged his work for flying lessons and had his private pilot's license at 16.

"That's all he was into was flying," John said. "He had an appointment to the Air Force Academy, but turned it down because the Army guaranteed he'd be able to fly."

Randy dreamed of flying his entire life, Emmie said.

"He talked to me about going (to the Army)," she said. "I told him I didn't want him to do that, because of what was going on in Vietnam, but I told him you're grown, and it was his choice."

The Army that Randy served is now bringing him home to Albertville, where the Ards moved in 1975, and putting to rest the questions that lingered in the minds of his family.

"We're happy we're finally getting the whole story, and that the military after all these years continued to look until they found him," John said. "He was a good Soldier, a good American. He did what he did because he wanted to, not because he had to."

"Never a day goes by that I don't think about him," Vanvooren added. "I think maybe we can finally bury him."

With a look of peace, Emmie said, "He's finally coming home. When I go through that, I can lay him to rest."

Hoop dreams come true for teams

Three youth basketball teams represent post at tournaments

By BETH SKARUPA
Staff writer
beths@htimes.com

Three youth basketball teams represented Redstone at district tournaments Feb. 24-26, with the 14-and-under team coached by Richard Thomas and Ernie Helmick finishing as runner-up at the Alabama Recreation and Parks Association tournament in Meridianville.

"I think that's something that hasn't happened in several years, that one of our teams placed in district," Mike Gates, youth sports and fitness director, said. "These guys represented Redstone very well."

The 14-and-under team combined for the district tournament, according to Thomas, learning to work as one team during just two weeks of practice.

"I was very pleased with their performance, especially since the team we lost to — I was told — played together the whole season and ours didn't," he said. "I was impressed that in this short amount of time they were able to compete at this level and do so well."

Team members included André Calar, Todd Fuqua, Courtney Helmick (female), Nathan Johnson, Demorris Lauderdale, Cameron Nichols, Deonte Parker, Andy Scofield, Martin Smith, LaMar Wainwright and Justin Watters.

The 12-and-under boys' team coached by Ernest Kirkland also went to district, entering the tournament after an undefeated season. Although they did not place, this team had finished as runner-up in its preseason tournament and had a successful season.

"We lost by 12 points to the team that won the state on our side," Kirkland said. "I'm very proud of that because size-wise and people-wise we were outnumbered, but our guys made it close all the way through."

The team did well even though it did not have any starters, Kirkland explained. He said he wanted the kids to feel like they were all on the same plane, so he made sure that each one had the opportunity to start more than one game during the season and that they had a chance to play during the tournament.

"I'm very proud of the kids — not about them necessarily winning the games, but about the professionalism they put out while they were winning the games," he said. "This thing is all about the kids. The winning is good but this is really all about the kids. One of the main things about my team is, I have very good kids on my team. Usually when you get that many kids together, you may have some trouble but these kids were all very courteous and great kids. And I've got all great parents — they really supported us and did whatever I needed them to do."

Two of those parents are Soldiers serving overseas: Tevin Simon's father is Staff Sgt. Arthur Simon Jr. of HHT 4-7th Cavalry at Camp Howze, Korea; and Marquis Rushing's father is Sgt. Marcus Rushing with the 3rd MI Battalion at Camp Humphrey, Korea. Another parent, Jacob Culbertson, videotaped each of the team's games and put them on DVDs to send to these two Soldiers.

"They told me that sometimes a whole battalion was waiting to watch our games," Kirkland said.

He pointed out that his two assistant coaches, Darrel Johnson and Palmer Washington, were also key to the overall success of the team. Although Washington did not have a child playing on the team, he was willing to give his time and experience to coaching them.

The 12-and-under boys' team coached by Sgt. Maj. Gregory Knight also went to district in February. They entered the

Postseason basketball tips off

The troop postseason basketball tournament began Monday at Pagano Gym.

In the last week of the regular season, 326th Chemical won by forfeit over Bravo and HHC 59th won by forfeit over NCO Academy on Feb. 28. Delta won by forfeit over NCO Academy on March 1.

The final standings for the regular season were:

- Eastern division — 326th Chemical (10-5), Charlie (10-6), MEDDAC (8-8) and Delta (2-14).

- Western division — HHC 59th (12-4), Marines (11-5), Headquarters & Alpha (9-7), Bravo (5-11) and NCO Academy (3-12).

Walter Jones, five-time NFL Pro Bowl offensive lineman with the Seattle Seahawks, is surrounded by Davis Hills Middle School youngsters March 2 during their annual Black History Observance. Jones, a Huntsville resident during the offseason, said: "Academics are very important, especially if you want to be an athlete. The key is staying focused. Be assured that you can do whatever you set your mind to do. However, always remember to put God first in all that you do."

tournament after a successful season of winning 10 out of 11 games. The only game they lost was the one they played against Redstone's other 12-and-under team coached by Kirkland.

"The season was a huge success. Some of our players were first-year players, but they all did very well," Knight said. "They worked hard, they bought into what we were telling them to do and they went out and executed it."

One of the best players, Jamar Pope, deserves recognition for his performance, according to Knight. "It takes a team to win a basketball team and all the players did a fantastic job, but he was the heart and soul of our team."

Although they didn't place in the district tournament, Knight was pleased with his team's performance this year and enjoyed his first time as head coach. He was an assistant coach for a youth team last year at Fort Lee, Va.

"The district tournament is an optional thing, it's a matter of whether a team wants to participate or not. It's pretty competitive," Gates said. "I'm proud of the effort that all of the teams have put out this season."
